New Orleans, Feb. 18.—Fred Anapolle, employed by Julius Meyer as warehouseman for the past three years, committed suicide in the shipping room of the company at 316 Magazine street at 2.30 Monday afternoon. According to Surgeons on the Charity hospital ambulance, which arrived just as the man was dying, he said he swallowed a mixture of carbolic acid and whiskey.

His younger brother committed the same act in the same manner about a month ago in the office of Swift & Co. He was driven to despair by loan sharks, from whom he had borrowed $50.

MONTH'S BRIDE ENDS OWN LIFE

Mrs. Maude Chesley of Concord, N. H., Feared She Was Losing Mind.

Concord, N.H., Feb. 18.—Despondent through fear that she was losing her mind is thought to have impelled Mrs. Maude Chesley, a bride of only a month, to commit suicide by shooting herself through the heart at her home in this city this forenoon.

Her husband, Irving T. Chesley, when he returned home at noon, found her body lying on a bed with a revolver by her side.

Mr. Chesley found a note addressed to him by his wife, which stated that her health was poor and that she had no hope of recovery. She had laid out the dress in which she wished to be buried.

Mrs. Chesley was formerly Mrs. Augustus Thompson of this city and was married to Mr. Chesley, Jan. 10, at Swampscott, Mass., by the Rev. John Vannevar. They have lived happily since their return to this city.

An Old Settler Finds Quick Relief

CHAS. MARSHALL CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ...

Mrs. Marshall Tells How Her Husband Suffered, and of His Speedy Recovery When He Used the Great Canadian Remedy.

Parkinson, Algoma, Ont., Feb. 18.—(Special)—Living far from towns and with doctors not within easy reach, many of the settlers have found Dodds Kidney Pills an inestimable blessing. One of those is Mr. Charles Marshall, Senior, whose recovery from a severe case of kidney disease has recently been the cause of much satisfaction to his family and friends.

"My husband was suffering very much with his back and legs," Mrs. Marshall says, speaking of her husband's cure. "He went to see the doctor, and he told him he had urinary trouble, but he did not seem to get any better.

"Then I sent for some Dodd's Kidney Pills. Since taking them he has no more pain in his back and legs, and his other troubles are all gone.

"I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for my husband, and I hope other sufferers from kidney disease will benefit by his experience and use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Urinary troubles are caused by diseased kidneys. So are backache, rheumatism, lumbago and heart disease. The natural remedy is to cure the kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

RAILWAY GIANTS IN GREAT BATTLE IN OTTAWA HOUSE

C. N. R. and C. P. R. Line Up for Fight, and Western Votes Are One Prize Sought

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—It is believed that the most interesting developments of the session, so far, are near at hand, and that they will be concerned with the application of the Canadian Northern Railway for further financial aid from the Government. The company, having, it is said, been refused in its first request for a further subsidy on the mountain section of the system in British Columbia has now turned its attention towards the acquirement of a $20,000,000 loan to be secured by a deposit of common stock in the ratio of two to one par value. All yesterday afternoon Sir Wm. Mackenzie was in the corridors, and conversed in Room 16, button-holing members as they came from the Commons Chamber. The business-like attitude of the C.N.R. head was the subject of much comment. At the same time Wm. H. Moore, chief agent for the company, was holding conferences with various of the more prominent members, and was closeted with Col. Sam Hughes for a considerable time in the afternoon.

Long Talk With Premier.

Premier Borden was approached by Sir William when he left the chamber at 6 o'clock last evening, and it is said that a conference lasting until late into the night was held in the Premier's room after dinner.

It is believed that the Premier slept but fitfully last night as a consequence of the conference. The Government is worried about this matter of financial aid to Canadian Northern Railway—worried in the first place because it is called upon to give it at all, and in the second place, as to what sort of security it should demand in the event of a loan being given. Last session the Government passed a subsidy bill in the face of strenuous Liberal Opposition. It is said on the best authority that the Opposition is quite as strenuous now, and a protest fully as dangerous will come from within the Government's own ranks.

In the first place, it may be stated as a general principle that the Canadian Pacific Railway is opposed to further aid being given to the C.N.R., and the Canadian Pacific has many ways of expressing its views to the powers that be.

THE ABOLISHING OF TITLES

UNIONIST POLLED LARGER MAJORITY THAN EXPECTED

London, Feb. 19.—In the South Buckingham election, W. B. du Pre Unionist, received 9,044 votes; and Tonman Mosley, Radical, 6,713; a majority for the Unionist of 2,331. In the last election with a vote of 18,266, the unionist had a majority of 2,666. The constituency embraces several small towns, some of which contain the residences of a large number of London business men. It is understood a large proportion of this section of electors did not vote. Chairmakers on strike at High Wycombe decided to ignore both candidates.

Lord Parmoor, whose elevation to the Peerage caused the present vacancy, won the seat from Radicalism in 1910. The Unionists did not expect to score as large a majority on this occasion.

The keenest interest is taken in today's poll in Bethnal Green, where a determined effort is being made to defeat Masterman.

JUDGE REFUSED BAIL

Suffragette Who Attacked Lord Weardale Considered a Lunatic.

London, Feb. 19.—The name of the woman who assailed Lord Weardale in mistake for Mr. Asquith in the suffragette episode, has been ascertained. She is Miss Mary Lindsay, of London.

Counsel applied to the Police Magistrate to grant bail to Miss Lindsay saying she had mistaken Lord Weardale for Premier Asquith, whom she considered responsible for the maltreatment of women in prison. The Attorney said an apology would be made to Lord Weardale. The Magistrate, however, refused to grant bail, saying the act was that of a lunatic, and that he wanted an inquiry made into the state of the prisoner's mind in order to ascertain whether she was insane.

MR. C. W. AUSTIN MAKES REPLY

And Certainly Puts It All Over His Opponents in Real Estate Controversy.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—I was much pleased to see by The Examiner of the 12th that one man—Mr. F. E. Ellis had the courage of his convictions to such an extent as to write over his own signature his views on the subject of real estate speculation. In reading carefully the letter of Mr. Ellis as it appears in your issue, three things are quite manifest:

1—That the writer has very little knowledge of what he writes.

2—His stories do not correspond to known facts.

3—The writer's aim was by hook or by crook to get his knife into the real estate man.

Now as to the first point. Mr Ellis says that the real estate speculator in our Canadian Northwest, has got all the land nearest in to the railroad and therefore the poor settler has to go away back 80 to 100 miles for his free grant. I make the statement that so far as the real estate men of Peterborough are concerned there is not one particle of truth in his statement. No real estate man in Peterborough has ever bought an acre that it would have been possible for the settler to homestead. Any person can verify what I say by the Homestead Act of the Dominion Parliament. Throughout our Northwest the land is divided into townships, 6 miles square, thus containing 36 sections, each one mile square. These sections are numbered from 1 to 36—sections 11 and 29 are school sections—and sections 8 and 24 are Hudson Bay sections. By the Homestead Act of the Dominion Government all the even numbered sections except 8 and 24 are for homestead for the settler. Then even numbered sections are not open for purchase—nor have they ever been open for purchase—and in consequence I say that it is impossible that any Peterborough real estate man should have purchased them, because they were not for sale, and therefore I claim that in bringing this forward to get a fling at the Peterborough real estate agent (or speculator if you will) he is either woefully ignorant or he thinks we are. Now, then if it is, and always has been, impossible for us to purchase this free grant land, it naturally follows that the wrong he charges us with doing the poor settler, has no existence outside his own distorted imagination.

While the even numbered sections are for homestead and for homestead only, the odd numbered sections from 1 to 35 are railway grant lands. The C.P.R. got 25,000,000 acres as part of the grant for building their railroad and were allowed to select it where they chose. They have now sold about 18,000,000 acres of the land—which they had a perfect right to do—to people who had a perfect right to buy, and because a large number of people in Peterborough and vicinity bought some of this land that was being sold at low prices and have made some money on the deal, they must

FOR CHAPPED, BLOTCHY, RED OR WRINKLED SKIN

(From Family Physician.)

Do you realize that just beneath that coarse, rough, or discolored complexion there's an exquisitely beautiful skin of youthful tint and delicacy? If you could only bring this complexion to the surface, discarding the old one! You can—in the easiest, simplest, most natural manner imaginable. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at any drugstore, apply nightly like cold cream, removing it mornings with warm water. The wax assists Nature by gradually taking off the lingering particles of dead and half-dead surface skin, causing no discomfort whatever. Ordinarily it takes from a week to ten days to complete the transformation. Cutaneous defects like chaps, pimples, blotches, liver spots, moth patches, freckles, of course disappear with the old skin. Nothing else that I know of will accomplish such wonderful results in so short a time.

Fine lines and even the deeper wrinkles often appear at this season. In such cases nothing is better than a face bath made by dissolving ½ pt. witch hazel. This is remarkably effective.

ANOTHER COLD WAVE COMING RIGHT NOW

Forecaster Predicts Temperature In the Neighborhood of Zero.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—The local thermometer will take a dip to-night and by to-morrow morning the weather will be in the neighborhood of zero, says the Observatory forecaster today. This change of weather is caused by a cold wave that is situated in Manitoba and the Lake Superior region to-day and its influence will probably be felt over Ontario to-morrow. In Winnipeg this morning the weather was 28 below zero and corresponding temperatures are felt in most part of Saskatchewan. The East is also very cold, temperatures of 26 below being felt in Northern New Brunswick.

The cloudy weather of yesterday was caused by a depression south of Toronto in the United States, which is passing off and clear weather is now forecasted.

THAW'S CASE ON TO-DAY

Jerome on the Job and Talking Already of an Appeal.

Concord, N.H., Feb. 19.—The most important of the many "Thaw hearings" held since the flight of Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, from Matteawan into Canada, and his return to the United States, is scheduled for to-day in the United States District Court here.

Judge Edgar A. Aldrich will hear arguments of New York State and Thaw attorneys on Thaw's request for a permanent writ of habeas corpus insuring himself against extradition and his petition for admission to bail pending trial on the New York State conspiracy charge.

William Travers Jerome, special assistant Attorney-General for New York in the Thaw case, will leave New York for Concord to-night.

He declared he will appeal if decision is rendered against New York State. It was reported here that Attorney-General Franklin Carmody, of New York may be present at the Thaw hearing.

THEY CEASED TO TANGO WHEN TWO POLICE WOMEN APPEARED

Misses Minty and Leavitt, However, Saw Nothing Objectionable in the Dance---It Is Simply Silly

Toronto, Feb. 19.—Fond mothers of "tango teasers," as they are called, and the tangoers themselves will be shocked to learn that they are under the eye of the police. But they are regarded just as coldly by the cold eye of the Morality Department, as are the dancers of the cheap dance halls. Misses Minty and Leavitt, Toronto's two policewomen, made a recent tour of all the city's tango-tea-shops, and made a careful study of the whole situation. Beyond the fact that they regard the dance as "silly" and that both boys and girls look "gawky," they found nothing objectionable at any of the shops.

Only one interesting incident occurred in their tour. When the policewomen entered a common dance hall, the "boss" often recognizes them and passes the word in to the dancers and decorum reigns. But the two policewomen would like to know why, on entering the tango room of a certain highly-fashionable tea-room the other day, while the dance was on at full swing, and when someone in the throng recognized them as police officers, the dancers faltered in their steps, got the 57th step mixed with the 15th, and why the dancers finally took their seats at the tea tables again, and remained there, in spite of the orchestra's best efforts, until the two policewomen had finished their tea and cakes and had gone away.

Misses Minty and Leavitt are curious to know if the presence of police merely frightened the young folk, or if there was something in the dance that was really not for police eyes.

TO BAR ASIATICS

California Not Willing to Wait on Action of Diplomats.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Despite efforts of the Administration to prevent agitation of proposed legislation for exclusion of Asiatics immigrants pending diplomatic negotiations with Japan, Pacific coast members were prepared to insist upon action when the House Committee on Immigration again considered the subject to-day. Rep. Baker, of California, was ready to urge his bill which would exclude Japanese and other Asiatics, while Rep. Church, also of that State, who, although preferring the more sweeping exclusion legislation, pressed as a compromise his bill designed to bar out the Hindus.

Paisley Public and Continuation school was completely destroyed by an early morning fire of unknown origin.

CALL HIM UNDESIRABLE TOO

Retort of British Labor Man Reflects On Americas in London.

London, Feb. 19.—"Deport H. W. Thornton, the new American general manager of the Great Eastern Railway Company of England, as an undesirable alien," was the proposition advanced to-day in the House of Commons by Will Crooks, the Labor member for Woolwich.

The members of the Labor party had been greatly incensed by a demand put forward by the Unionists for legislation to prevent such "alien desperadoes" as the Labor leaders deported from South Africa after the recent general strike, from being "dumped" into England.

A storm of protest filled the House in the midst of which the burly member for Woolwich shouted:

"What about Thornton, the new manager of the Great Eastern! Is he an undesirable alien?"

CLINGS TO APPEAL COURT

Manchester Guardian Doesn't Believe In Abolishing Privy Council.

London, Feb. 19.—In an editorial on the Privy Council, the Manchester Guardian remarks to-day: "It is not likely that the extremist Canadian view which would have the right of appeal entirely abolished, will gain much support even in Canada. Sober opinion throughout the Empire regards the Privy Council as indispensible. Provincial and similar disputes being referred to a committee of eminent judges from the Dominions, has, however, given general satisfaction. If with this reform there can be linked a means to ensure that appeal shall operate as equitably in the case of a private citizen, as in that of a trust or province, criticism of Dominions would doubtless be silenced.

SO DISCREDITABLE, WIRELESS GAMBLE PROBE MUST ENSUE

Lord Lansdowne Flays Former Chief Liberal Whip on Marconi Deal---Stock Exchange Took Odd Course

MR. E. H. SCAMMELL
Who is to address public meeting Next Week.

London, Feb. 19.—"There never was a more discreditable gamble on the stock exchange than the one which took place in connection with American Marconi shares and so disreputable was it that the Stock Exchange Committee took the usual course of suspending for five years a jobber concerned in it," said the Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition in the House of Lords, when he moved to-day for the appointment of a select committee to enquire into the charges brought by newspapers against Lord Murray, of Elibank, and into matters relating to his dealings in wireless shares.

Lord Lansdowne by himself making the motion rendered the procedure official than it would have been had Baron Ampthill initiated as was at first intended.

The Opposition leader said he considered that the disclosures made had shown there was something seriously amiss with British public life. As far as Lord Murray was concerned, he said, it was impossible to accept the report of the committee of the House of Commons while Lord Murray's apology in the House of Lords was no defence for his conduct. Although Lord Murray was in England for two months while the Commons committee was sitting he never appeared before it.

Lord Lansdowne suggested the appointment of a small committee comprising a couple of experienced law lords. Its duties should be to ascertain whether Lord Murray had obtained all the shares for which he applied and was the actual owner of a large block of shares obtained by Cabinet Ministers.

The Marquis of Crewe, the Liberal leader said the Government would offer no objection to the appointment of such a committee, although it was not prepared to assume any responsibility for it. The motion was carried without a division.

Hugh Clarke, M.P., addressed the Canadian Club at Hamilton.

FIRE CHIEF'S NARROW ESCAPE

Speeding to a Fire He Collided With A Lady's Cutter.

Hamilton, Feb. 19.—Speeding to a small fire in his auto this morning, Fire Chief Ten Eyck and his chauffeur narrowly escaped being killed. Turning out of the way to pass one cutter, another cutter, in which Mrs. R. A. Lucas, a prominent society woman and her coachman were seated, turned into their path. Trying to avoid striking it, the chauffeur turned sharply to one side. The car whirled around, upset the cutter, throwing Mrs. Lucas and her coachman out, and then crashed into a tree, being badly wrecked in the collision. Mrs Lucas was badly cut about the head but her condition is not serious.

TORONTO CLOAKMAKERS HELP FINANCE MONTREAL STRIKERS.

2,500 in Toronto Will Contribute to Big Labor Disturbance That May Take Place There Early in March

Toronto, Feb. 19.—There will be no general strike of cloakmakers in Toronto when the Montreal cloakmakers go on strike for better conditions. Instead of striking, the workers in Toronto, will stay at work and help to finance the Montreal strike. Should Toronto firms ask the members of the Cloakmakers' Union to do work from Montreal when the strike is on, then a strike will result, but this contingency is not anticipated. This was the explanation of the present situation in Toronto given by Walinsky, chief clerk and International officer of the Cloakmakers' Union in Toronto.

"The cloakmakers union in Montreal," said he, "have decided to obtain better conditions of employment. At a conference held last September between representatives of Toronto and Montreal unions it was decided that Toronto workers would give every assistance to the Montreal workers in their attempt to establish union conditions.

"The members of the Cloakmakers' Union are workers on ladies' garments and in Toronto there are about 2,500. The general executive board of the International union is to meet early in March, when a date will be decided on for the Montreal strike unless an agreement is arrived at between the employers and the ladies garment workers in Montreal.

"This will not involve Toronto at all. It will mean a strike of 3,000 workers in Montreal. Toronto workers will contribute financially and every other way possible.

"If the employers in Toronto insist on our members doing Montreal work a strike will result here

"We don't anticipate any trouble that way, however, said Mr. Walinsky, "as the most important shops contain our members."

WOMAN SWINDLER LET GO

Mrs. McKenna Passed Bogus Cheques Freely, But She Is Ill.

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 19.—Mrs. McKenna, the Renfrew cheque swindler, who operated extensively at points throughout the Eastern part of Ontario during the early part of last year, and who was brought here for trial following her release on parole from the Cornwall jail after serving four months of an 18-month sentence pleaded guilty before the local county judge to a charge of swindling the local branch of the Bank of Toronto out of $400. The woman has been receiving hospital treatment since her removal to Brockville, and is still in very feeble health, suffering from a nervous breakdown.

The judge allowed her to go on suspended sentence. The Ottawa police have made enquiries concerning the woman.

FOUR WERE KILLED

Thirty-one Injured When Three Cars Crashed Together.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 19.—The thirty-one persons injured in the street car accident near the Virginia avenue viaduct last night, in which four men were killed, were reported to be in an improved condition to-day at the various hospitals. It was believed the death list would not be increased, although some of the injured will be maimed for life.

Slippery rails, due to the snow and rain, are given as the cause of the accident, which resulted when a heavy Indianapolis and Cincinnati traction freight car ran into an English avenue car that was blocked by a Greenwood local inter-urban car.

No Toadying.

Among the good old ways of "merrie England" is the tendency to democracy prevailing in her boys' schools. Parents can be assured, it is said, that no pampering will fall to the lot of their sons, however exalted may be their rank or great their possessions. An English paper tells the story of an Indian official of high rank calling upon the house master in a famous public school, where a young prince, son of a rajah, was being educated. This official brought a special message from his master, the rajah, to the effect that he wanted no favors or exceptional treatment of any sort extended to his son on account of his exalted birth.

"You may set the mind of the rajah at rest on that score," said the house master, struggling to keep back his smile before the dignified anxiety of the Indian official. "If the authorities were inclined to discriminate in the prince's favor, the boys of the school would set the matter right. Among them generally the rajah's son answers to the name of 'Nigger,' and I understand that with his intimates he is familiarly known as 'Coal Scuttle.'"

His Experience.

"Jasper," said Mrs. Grigson, who was looking over the morning paper, "here's a story of a woman who was robbed on a street car in broad daylight, and yet the thief got away unsuspected."

Mr. Grigson said that he had seen the item, but that it was either a typographical error or else the story was pure invention.

"Why do you say that?" asked his wife.

"Look at the item again. It says her purse contained $100 in currency, does it not?"

"Yes."

"It says there was also a receipted bill for a five dollar hat, does it not?"

"Yes."

"Well, no woman with $100 in cash in her possession would buy a five dollar hat."—Youth's Companion.

His Critic.

"The greatest compliment that I ever received," says Opie Read, "was a criticism. Several years ago I went to Arkansas and visited the scene where one of my stories is laid. The landlord of the little hotel said to me:

"'Here comes a little old fellow to whom I loaned a copy of your book. He can't read, but his wife reads to him. Let's see what he says about the book.'

"'"Hello, Jason, did your wife read that book to you?"'

"'"Mawnin', sah. Yes, she done read it to me."'

"'"Well, what do you think of it?"'

"'"Huh! That ain't no book at all. I done lived near fo' fo'ty years an' I done heard folks talk that a-way all th' time."'"—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Lights His Pipe in a Gale.

I write as one who has smoked in his time more matches than most people, and it will be understood how I regard the bus driver's ability in lighting a pipe. A gale may be blowing, the horses requiring special attention, his left eye engaged on the reflection of the omnibus in shop windows, a passenger inquiring who won the Derby in 1884, constables issuing directions with the right arm, a fare hailing him from the pavement, and amid all these distractions he can strike one wooden match, hold it in the curve of his hand and the tobacco is well alight. Also while hats are blowing about the streets in the manner of leaves in autumn his headgear never goes from its place, rarely moves from the angle decided on the first journey. I have always assumed that he takes it off at night before retiring to rest, but to part with it must mean a terrible wrench.—London Express.

Spontini's Decorations.

Gasparo Spontini, the composer, regarded himself in the light of a demigod, and when inspirations crowded upon him he donned a wide, toga-like gown of white silk with a border of gold and a fez of white silk embroidered in gold from which a heavy tassel hung down. With great dignity he sat down before his desk, and if a grain of dust was visible on the paper on which he penned his music he rang the bell impatiently for his servant to remove the obstacle. Spontini owned so many medals and decorations that they could no longer be accommodated on his breast. At a grand musical reunion at Halle an old musician remarked to a comrade, "See how many decorations Spontini has, while Mozart has not one." Spontini, who overheard it, replied quickly, "Mozart, my dear friend, does not need them."

A South African Animal.

There is a curious looking animal in South Africa that looks for all the world like a piece of toast with four legs, a head and a tail. It resembles a pussy cat about the forehead and ears, but its nose is distinctly that of a rat, while its tail is not very dissimilar to that of a fox. This strange animal is called the aard wolf and doubtless dwells in South Africa because, judged by his looks, he would not be admitted into good animal society anywhere else.

HARD TO PLEASE.

The Country Visitor Decided After All to Go Elsewhere.

A London clerk, on a holiday tour in the country, called at a farmhouse and asked if he could be taken in as a boarder for a few days. The farmer shook his head.

"I'd be glad to oblige you," he said, "but you London people are too hard to please."

"I am not at all exacting," the tourist replied; "you will find no difficulty in pleasing me."

"That's what the last man who came along said, but it wasn't true. In fact, nothing pleased him. His first complaint was about sleeping in the same bed with a hired man, and we gave him a bed to himself in a room with four of the children, but that didn't satisfy him. Next he grumbled about being awakened at half-past four in the morning by the men getting up to go to work—said he wasn't accustomed to get up before half-past seven? Then he objected to go to the pump, like the rest of us, to wash — actually wanted a washbasin to himself in his own room! He was upset because the servant girl rubbed his boots with cart-grease, which keeps 'em nice and soft, instead of polishing them with blacking, as he said they did in London. The food didn't suit him. At breakfast he wanted coffee and bacon and eggs, or kippers, or smoked haddocks, as though we could get such things in these parts. Boiled skimmed milk and bread and treacle, same as we had, weren't good enough for him. Dinner came, and he turned his nose up at bacon broth, pilchard pie, boiled bacon and cabbage, with nice apple pie or rhubarb pie to follow. He would like to have had ox-tail soup and boiled fowl, and roast beef and mutton, and potatoes, and milk pudding or roly-poly, and cheese and fruit. Our supper is generally boiled milk and bread or bread and cheese and onions, with a mug of cider to wash them down; but this wouldn't do for my gentleman—fried fish or cold meat and a drop of whisky were his fancy. And, last of all, it upset him to have to go to bed before it was dark; we are never up after eight. Couldn't he have lights, and sit up until eleven or twelve, as he did at home? Did you ever hear of such things? I don't know if you would be so hard to please or not?"

"Well," said the tourist, "perhaps, after all, I'd better not trouble you to try me."

Pleasant For Shaw.

For Madox Hueffer, in his "Memories and Impressions," says that on his first coming to London Bernard Shaw wrote a pamphlet called "Why I Am an Anarchist," which was published at the Torch press. "Some time later," relates Mr. Hueffer, "when Mr. Shaw, having advanced a stage further toward his intellectual salvation, was addressing in the park a Socialist gathering on the tiresome text, 'The Foolishness of Anarchism,' the young proprietors of the Torch walked round and round in the outskirts of the crowd offering copies of Mr. Shaw's earlier pamphlet for sale and exclaiming at the top of their voices, 'Why I Am an Anarchist! By the Lecturer!'"

Shortened His Wait.

"Experience," said Mark Twain once, "makes us wise, but it also makes us hard. Consider the old, experienced man in the busy restaurant. He took a seat, looked round him and, pointing to a well dressed gentleman who had not yet been served, said to the waiter:

"'Waiter, how long has that gentleman been here?'

"'About twelve minutes, sir,' the waiter answered.

"'What's his order?'

"'Porterhouse and French fried, sir, with mince pie and coffee to come.'

"The old man, hardened by experience, slipped a quarter in the waiter's hand.

"'Waiter,' he said, 'I'm in a hurry. Put on another porterhouse and bring me his.'"

Fresh Discovery of an Old Truth.

Helen's enjoyment of the party given in honor of her ninth birthday was nearly spoiled by the ill tempered outbreaks of a very pretty and well dressed little girl who was among her guests. A peacemaker appeared, however, in a plain and rather shabby child, who proved herself a veritable little angel of tact and good will.

After her playmates were gone Helen talked it all over very seriously with her mother. She summed it up in this piece of philosophical wisdom:

"Well, I've found out one thing, mamma. Folks don't always match their outsides."—Woman's Home Companion.

Salt and Health.

Few persons understand the therapeutic value of salt. A little salt in one's drinking water is "good medicine." Salt applications to the skin are wonderfully soothing and wholesome. There is nothing better as a wash for the throat and the nasal passages to prevent or to cure catarrhal troubles than a solution of common salt in plain water—the cheapest remedy one can find. Many persons give their eyes a daily bath of cold salt water with satisfactory results.

Soporific.

"I heard one man," said the playwright, "who attended the premiere of my new play last night complain that it was so late when he got out."

"Yes?" queried the critic.

"Yes, and yet the final curtain fell before 10:45."

"Ah, perhaps he overslept himself!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

In Half Mourning.

"I don't understand you, Linda. One day you're bright and jolly and the next depressed and sad."

"Well, I'm in half mourning; that's why."—Fliegende Blatter.

Lost Both Ways.

"Did you get in without your wife hearing you last night?"

"No, and I didn't get in without hearing her, either."—Houston Post.

Humors of "Hamlet."

William Davidge related in his "Footlight Flashes" that during his strolling days in England, when companies were small, he had on the same evening done duty for Polonius, the ghost, Ostric and the first gravedigger, and Edwin Booth remembered Thomas Ward dying in sight of the audience as the player king and being dragged from the mimic stage by the heels to enter immediately at another wing as Polonius, crying "Lights, lights, lights!" Hamlet in a one night town, swearing he loved Ophelia better than forty thousand brothers, has watched her through an open grave packing her trunk in the place beneath, while the ghost, her husband, waited to strap it up. There are more things in Hamlet's existence behind the scenes than are dreamed of in the philosophy of all his commentators and all his critics.—From the Green Book.

Corn and Water.

To those engaged in the handling of grain the natural shrinkage of shelled corn while in storage and in transit is a matter of prime importance and often a source of dispute because of shortage reported at time of receipt at warehouse and a further loss at date of final sale. In order to determine the amount of shrinkage or loss of weight occurring in corn the department of agriculture has conducted an experiment with 500 bushels of shelled corn. At the time of storage the moisture content was 18.8 per cent and at close of the test 14.7 per cent, or a loss of 4.1 per cent. The weight per bushel had decreased from 54.7 pounds to 50 pounds, and the total loss of weight was 1,970 pounds, or slightly more than 7 per cent.

Perhaps nothing illustrates better the vicissitudes of pronunciation in English than a study of what is called the "Irish brogue." This lingual mode, for it is scarcely to be called a dialect, is usually presumed to be a deterioration of language due to lack of education and contact with legitimate sources of English. It proves after a little study to be a preservation of the old method of pronouncing English, which has come down to a great degree unchanged in Ireland from Shakespeare's time.

In Elizabeth's time, however, it came to be realized that if there was to be any real affiliation of the two countries then the Irish language must be supplanted by English, and a definite effort in this direction was made. This change of speech, resented and resisted, was nevertheless successfully accomplished all over the island except in the west within a decade after Shakespeare's death. This fact takes on a new significance when we study what we now call the Irish brogue in connection with what is known to have been the pronunciation of English at that time. The two are found to conform in practically every respect. Irishmen pronounce English as their forefathers learned it and have preserved its pronunciation because they have been away from the main current of English speech variation ever since.—Harper's Magazine.

Corporation Directors Want Their Rights and Usually Get Them.

A large corporation held a directors' meeting a few days ago. As the meeting was coming to a close one of the directors, reputed to be worth $10,000,000, ran in all out of breath. Just as he entered the other directors were making their exit, says the Hartford Courant.

"Look here," the incoming director shouted to the chairman, "I want to know why I haven't received notice of this meeting."

"I am sure I don't know," the chairman said. "Notices were sent to all directors. You surely must have received one."

The director finished up an excited tirade by saying, "I want my rights."

Just then the secretary was brought into conference, who in turn handed the late director an envelope. He departed with a smiling countenance.

This recalls the story of a New York corporation where $20 for each director was laid on the table and those who attended divided the whole pile. If half came each got $40. The members were men far advanced in years and in riches. One day it stormed violently when a meeting was to be held. The executive officers did not believe a single director would be there, but every man of them was on hand, each having figured out that nobody else would appear and that he might swipe the entire allowance.

On a Grain of Wheat.

Prayers have been written and engraved on many small objects, but only one person ever has been patient and painstaking enough to inscribe a complete prayer on a grain of wheat. One day Sir Moses Montefiore received a small tin box in the mail. On the cover of the box was written, "A prayer for Sir Moses Montefiore, by Bauch Mordecai, son of Zebi Hirsch Scheinemann of Jerusalem." The box contained a single grain of wheat, on which were inscribed in characters so small they could only be read with the aid of a powerful microscope the 266 Hebrew letters of the prayer and the date of the year (Hebrew reckoning) 5646. Sir Moses kept the prayer in his private desk until he died, and it is preserved with religious care by one of his friends.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Knom It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to ex[illegible] one of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is used better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

The Catholic Register says:—"The Australian Hibernians are chartering a big steamship to take their members to Ireland this year for the Home Rule celebration." Is this not a case of counting chickens before they are hatched. If Father Burke lives till Home Rule in Ireland is "a going concern," he will outlive generations yet to be born.

NEW OTTAWA BOOKLET

THE General Advertising Department of the G. T. R. have just issued a handsome booklet entitled "Ottawa," which deals with that beautiful city, The Chateau Laurier, and incidentally with the attractions and accommodations that are to be found in the Algonquin Provincial (Ontario) Park.

The booklet is composed of thirty-one pages, printed on antique paper, handsomely illustrated with views printed in seven colors and bound in a drab cover printed in brown and embossed in gold. The text is interesting and describes the Capital City of Canada, its many Government Buildings, the attractions found within its limits, as well as its suburban resorts. It also gives a good description to the Chateau Laurier, the Grand Trunk's magnificent gotel in the Capital City.

Gained in Weight, Digestion Restored Health Renewed

HERE IS MORE PROOF OF QUICK CURE FOR ALL FOLKS THAT ARE WEAK, AILING, NERVOUS.

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feeling of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it wa easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers. 25c. per box or five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

AN EXAMPLE OF FIRMNESS

NEW YORK Sun: The young South African Government appears to be singularly capable of looking after its own affairs and of protecting the rights and properties of its citizens. In the prompt and successful measures it took to deal with the recently threatened general strike it set an example of firmness and efficiency to many older established Governments.

Sinister Motives.

Two men William Jones and John Smith—were neighbors and deadly enemies. They often crossed swords in court and out of it, and Jones, being what might be called more clever than Smith, invariably got the better of the encounter. In the end so cowed was Smith that the slightest move on the part of Jones made him nervous and suspicious, and with the remark, "I wonder what object he has in this?" he called up all his reserve faculties to combat the fresh attack which poor Jones never contemplated.

One day a friend called on Smith and greeted him with:

"Well, old man, have you heard the news?"

"No," said Smith. "What news?"

"Jones is dead. He died last night at midnight," replied the other.

Smith paused, drew a hard breath, raised his hand to his forehead and thought, then blurted out:

"Dead, did you say Jones dead? Great heavens! I wonder what object he has in this?"

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. MR. C. W. AUSTIN MAKES REPLY needs be told by some of the new lights that making money in this way is worse than gambling at cards.

What does actually happen when a man goes to get a homestead? He enters the registry office, asks what land is open for registry. The registrar hands him a slip showing what quarters are open in the townships he ment,one. All the quarter sections not open, have been filed on by some other person who has been there before him and filed ahead of him. No real estate speculator can buy the homestead.

I said in the second place that Mr. Ellis' letter did not correspond to known facts. He says "The conditions that I and all others have found." I would like to know how he knows that "all others" have found things as he says. I certainly did not. The condition he speaks of may have prevailed in one or two sections of the vast Northwest, but for a man to make a sweeping statement like this, that "all others" have found things as he says, and apply his experience of a few places and intimate that these conditions prevail throughout the North-west, looks much as if he were drawing on his imagination for his facts.

Mr. Ellis went out to the west, as he says, four years ago, and met a typical homesteader who, seeing he had run up against a tenderfoot who was very new to the country, proceeded to load him up, and he certainly succeeded in stringing him in good shape.

Mr. Ellis says this man on the "steading (tenderfoot sticks out there up to the ankle)—told him he came to Edmonton a year ago, and had to go clear out 80 miles to get a homestead, had a very hard time, and was fifty miles from a doctor, and all this. Does Mr. Ellis know that the Dominion government returns for that very year, shows that there 77 homesteads entered for, within 25 miles of Edmonton, and that there were 82 more quarter sections still open for homestead on Jan. 1st, 1910, and these all within the 25 mile circle? He or anyone else, can verify this statement at our office. Now, if there were plenty of homestead within 25 miles of Edmonton, what becomes of the homesteader's yarn that he had to go 80 miles out? Yet Mr. Ellis swallows this story, and without a particle of investigating, comes back here to Peterborough and exhibits his knowledge, or lack of knowledge, of the country, and expects intelligent people to take him seriously. A little further down Mr. Ellis speaks of this man on the "steading," who had been attracted to the country by the glittering stories of a real estate agent. Now does Mr. Ellis wish to convey the impression that the real estate agent sold him the homestead? If so, the Dominion statutes makes this a crime punishable by fine and imprisonment. As to homesteading, many people go a long distance out if they find a large body of good land in some particular locality, as they think their chances of a railway coming near them are thereby improved.

As to the hardships of the prairie and its loneliness, far be it from me to depreciate these, for I have driven several thousand miles on the prairie and happen to know something of these things, but what I claim is, and this is within the knowledge of every man who really knows the west, that the hardships of the pioneer there, are not to be compared to those of the early settlers in Ontario.

I said in the third place that Mr. Ellis aims by hook or by crook to get his knife into the real estate man. He begins by saying that Mr. Chipman, Editor of the Grain Growers' Guide, says speculation in land is immoral, and he, Mr. Ellis, Editor of the Farm and Dairy, says so too- Yes, that it is "most immoral" and therefore we real estate agents who speculate in land—as we all do—are the most immoral creatures. Dear me; but this is awful. We are accused of forcing the poor settler to go out 80 to 100 miles for a homestead although we have never been able to buy this free grant or homestead land at all. We are accused, too, of being accessories to the crime of causing the poor women to go crazy on the prairie, because they are so far out. We are accused of causing the slum in the city, although most of us had fancied that idleness, drink and crime had more to do with people living in slums than had the real estate agent. And last and worst of all, we are accused of holding lots in the south end of this city, and asking more for them than they are worth, for agricultural purposes. "Truly, truly, we are a bad lot!" If we have any redeeming features they have never become apparent to the Editor of the Farm and Dairy.

Did it ever occur to Mr. Ellis that these much maligned real estate agents and speculators have done more as a class to build this City up and make it a city of beautiful homes, a city of progress, than any other class of the community. Does Mr. Ellis know that these same real estate men are building up snug, comfortable homes for the working man and selling them, often with a payment of but one hundred dollars down, thus giving to the poor working man something really more useful than the slobbering sympathy of mere words. These real estate agents are not pessimists; they are all optimistic for the prosperty of this city. They do not believe in Socialistic nonsense, nor in Henry George. We think you are just a little too new, and we regard your letter as an overflow of gall, a piece of impertinence, quite uncalled for, and hope soon that the other chap—that has been under the bed so long, whom we all know—will have the manliness to come out over his own signature and say why he engineered it, that this slanderous reflection should have been made on the honour of so many citizens of this City.

Respectfully yours,
W. C. AUSTIN.

FAVORS NEW SITE FOR GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, Owing to my having for a great many years been a merchant on George street I have been following with interest the various opinions that have been expressed by the merchants and other citizens on the question of building the new Post Office, Customs House, Inland Revenue Office and Trent Valley Offices at the corner of George and Sherbrooke street. It certainly appeals to me that it would be in the interests of Peterborough to have these new Dominion Government buildings erected there.

It will have a wholesome effect on the business interests of Peterborough. At the present time the stores and office buildings on George street and on the streets immediately connected with George street are practically owned or controlled by two landlords, who enjoy a complete monopoly. The merchants and those who rent offices in this district are practically under the control of these landlords who arbitrarily fix their rents, and who will only make repairs or improvements on onerous terms and conditions which the tenant has to practically submit to.

There are a number of stores on George street which are old and out of date and are nothing more nor less than fire traps and death traps in their present condition. Instead of these old buildings being repaired they should be rebuilt from the ground up. The collapse of the old Turnbull building last fall, during the time it was undergoing extensive repairs, amply demonstrates that it is time for this city to get away from absentee landlordism and its economizing patchwork.

If the new government buildings are built further down George street encouragement will be given to owners of property in that vicinity to put up new and modern stores and office buildings, and the result will be that tenants will be able to rent their stores on more reasonable terms and conditions. The two landlords will be more anxious to make necessary repairs and improvements to retain their tenants. They may also see the necessity of building new and modern buildings in the place of those now existing.

By all means let this city rid itself of this monopoly and have the new Government buildings erected where the Dominion Government Engineer has selected.

Yours etc.,
Adam Hall.

P.S.—To meet the convenience of the residents of East City a Branch Post Office could be established there at some convenient and central point.

FARMER, BEWARE.

Editor Morning Times. ...

Sir,—Immense quantities of butter, cheese, beef and lamb are being shipped from N.Z. and Australia to Canada. In spite of the duty against the foreign article, the home market is slipping away from the Canadian farmer. Ontario and Quebec farmers are not organized. They have no central association to speak for them. But they must look into this matter quickly or it will inevitably happen that the price of their goods must drop and with it the price of their land.

Melodramatic.

A dramatist was condemning two melodramas that had had an unmerited success among the less cultivated portion of the public.

"The first," said the dramatist in his epigrammatic way, "was all blood and thunder, and the other was all thud and blunder."

The Lesson She Learned.

A fair western co-ed and one of the male seniors fell violently in love and neglected their studies shamefully. Both were expelled. The fair co-ed thereupon wrote this interesting reply to the faculty:

Gentlemen—You have expelled me for neglecting my studies, yet I have learned at your institution more than you will ever know. I have learned the meaning of love. What is the use of studying botany if I am not allowed to gather roses? Why should I devote myself to astronomy if I may not look at the stars? What does it profit me to spend years on mathematics and neglect my own figure? You have expelled my fiance also. Do you think he is unhappy? We were married last evening.

Sand Swept Asia.

In the arid lands of central Asia the air is reported as often laden with fine detritus, which drifts like snow around conspicuous objects and tends to bury them in a dust drift. Even when there is no apparent wind the air is described as thick with fine dust, and a yellow sediment covers everything. In Khotan this dust sometimes so obscures the sun that at midday one cannot see to read fine print without a lamp.

The Attorney in England.

The use of the word attorney denotes a belated mind. Since Nov 1, 1875, attorneys have ceased to exist, their title merged by law into that of solicitor of the supreme court of judicature, says a writer in the London Mail. The name had long been used as a term of abuse. Johnson observed of an acquaintance that "he did not care to speak ill of any man behind his back, but he believed the gentleman was an attorney."

Archbishop Trench, in 1859, noted that the word attorney was going out of favor and that the lower branch of the legal profession preferred to be called solicitors. So when the judicature act of 1873 was before parliament a clause was inserted abolishing the obnoxious title. But with our delightful conservatism we still honor the "attorney general."

SUFFERERS FROM PILES!

ZAM-BUK HAS CURED THESE!

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others?

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, and I continued it, and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 183-185 St. Joseph street, St. Roch., Quebec, P. Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles."

Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but everything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c box from all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

Why He Desired a Cannon.

It is related that an Indian chief once approached General Crook and wanted to borrow a cannon.

"Do you expect me to loan you a cannon with which to kill my soldiers?" the old veteran inquired.

"No," the chief replied; "kill soldiers with a club. Want cannon to kill cowboys."

THEIR AWFUL SECRET.

It Caused the Real Estate Agent to Change His Mind.

When the family who admitted that they were moving because the tenant at the old address made their lives miserable confided to the renting agent that they had one peculiarity which they wished him not to mention to their neighbors in his building the agent got uneasy and executed a mental quickstep trying to devise some way to break the lease. But aloud he said very courteously:

"I shall be glad to oblige you if I can. What is it you wish me to keep a secret?"

"The fact that we pay our rent promptly on the 1st of every month," said the head of the family. "That was something that nobody else in the other house did, and the agent as an incentive to quick action on their part published the news of our promptness. The only action it stirred them into was persecution of us and they carried that to such extremes that we had to move. If you will kindly refrain from using us as a club to whack your delinquents into obedience we will appreciate it."

The agent resolved not to cancel the lease, but at the same time he relinquished a hastily conceived plan for procuring prompt remittances.—New York Times.

Wayside Fruit Trees.

Fruit trees are planted by the roadside in several parts of Germany, but passersby are not permitted to help themselves to the fruit. The trees are closely watched, and at the end of the season the fruit is sold. At intervals along the road signs are placed bearing the statement, "A Good Man Injures No Tree." But little fruit is stolen, it is said.

Don't Say "Rabbits."

To mention the word "rabbits" on board a Cornish fishing-smack arouses the ire of the crew. Should the hated word be uttered as the boat is leaving the harbor on a pilchard expedition, the speaker would stand a fair chance of being hurled overboard. The mere mention of "rabbits" destroys all chances of a "catch."

Deaf as an Adder.

The expression "deaf as an adder" is from the Psalms of David, where it appears in the following form: "Their poison is like the poison of serpents. They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear, which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming ever so wisely." East Indian travelers tell us that there is a widely prevailing superstition in the east to the effect that both the viper and the asp stop their ears when the charmer is uttering his incantations or playing his music by turning one ear to the ground and twisting the point of the tail into the other.

His Favorite.

"Which is your favorite Wagnerian opera?" asked the musician.

"Lemme see," said Mr. Cumrox, appealing to his wife. "There are several that I never heard yet, aren't there?"

"Yes."

"Well, I reckon it's one of them."—Washington Star.

Poor Little Goose!

"Seems as if I can never find a decent quill in the house," growled the eighteenth century author.

"You mean one that would be of some help to me, don't you?" chortled the brute.—Detroit Free Press.

D'Orsay, the Complete Dandy," as Mr. Tiegnmouth Shore calls him in his biography, was fully aware of the value of his patronage to the tailors. Once, when this accident had not happened, D'Orsay bade his valet return the garments with the message that "the lining of the pockets had been forgotten."

The Old, Old Story.

"What did you do when your husband told you the old, old story?"

How One Gown Serves Many Social Purposes

By MADGE MARVEL

"Do you know the possibilities of the black satin gown?" asked my friend, the modiste, as she tried the effect of the combination of mustard-colored chiffon over flesh color and assured me that it was quite the last word, whether I liked it or not.

"We all think our own opinions are worth too much," she interpolated. "When I spoke of black satin I didn't mean the one old-fashioned kind, but any of the new fabrics that look enough like it to be classed generally under the head. One of my customers that I admire immensely is a woman who has little money and lots of position. She has to go everywhere and it would be a hopeless struggle for her to keep up if it were not for her genius for dress.

"By the way, I have paid her many a neat check for coming over here and designing the gowns for me when I had a big wedding or some other social affair to prepare for. It is a mystery to me why she doesn't go into business. She is an artist.

"Well, her black satin gown has been to luncheons, teas, receptions, dinners, the play, tango parties, almost everywhere except to the opera, and it would go there if she hadn't a white satin, the remnants of her wedding gown.

Her Fundamental Frock.

"The fundamental frock is a well made draped skirt and a bodice with some gold and that odd new shade of blue. The material is really heavy, supple charmeuse. Then there is a bodice of black Spanish lace over white and a tunic of the same lace and a rose pink velvet girdle which make one costume. Again she wears a bodice and tunic of heavy white lace edged with skunk fur and having a sash of green moire.

"Another change is a tunic of tulle with pink and yellow motifs in beads and a bodice to match with yellow and pink combined in the girdle. That is the frock that goes to dinner and the play.

"And then there is the simplest little blouse of white tulle over flesh color that has a deep black girdle and a pink velvet rose to give a bit of color. When she wants to wear the gown for less formal occasions she has a stunning blouse of yellow crepe with futurist design in red and green and black that looks well with the skirt. She calls it her 'chameleon gown,' for it takes on the needs of any occasion.

"As she is clever enough to always wear the most adorable of hats and have good furs and some attractive neck arrangement in the way of a picturesque scarf or boa, she always looks as if she had a new frock every time you see her. She told me the other day she hoped we would be wearing petticoats next season, for her gown would be ready to make over as a petticoat by that time."

Large Wardrobe Unnecessary.

There is a hint for us all in the cleverness of this woman. We don't need such a lot of clothes if we have the right ones, of good material and well made, and a few well chosen accessories so we look different. The great big world of which we are a part whirls around so rapidly these days that we take things in at a glance. If the general effect is harmonious, we are usually too busy to search for the details which might disillusion us.

The wise woman eliminates all useless trimming in her frocks and gets good material and pays the extra money she might expend for trimming to a good dressmaker to get the right fit and lines.

I saw a frock of dull green crepe at a luncheon the other day which made all the trimmed gowns seem cheap and messy. It was cut with admirable lines and the low hip draping and the skirt not too narrow at the hem and yet perfectly modish. The bodice showed a square tab hooked over below the bust line and embroidered with dull blue, yellow and that soft faded red one sees in old rugs.

There was a similar and wider tab which formed the front of the girdle, and between the two there was a glimpse of yellow silk veiled in dull blue chiffon.

A frill of cream lace finished the neck and the wrists, where the embroidery was repeated in smaller design, and there was an embroidered tab to hold the drapery at one side of the skirt. With this gown was worn one of the high side draped black velvet turbans with a shaded greenish yellow and blue plume rising at a curved angle at the back. It was a costume well worth copying.

The Kind of Love That Lasts

By Mme. Margarete Matzenauer

Prima Donna Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company

MME. MATZENAUER

Love is not a thing apart from life, neither is it an experience that comes only to a few. Love is life and when love goes the soul dies, although the body may live on for a time. Love, like life, must have a chance. Economics change man's activities. As you change a man's activities you change his way of living, and as you change his environments you change his state of mind. Love and life go hand in hand.

Precept and injunction do not palpably affect men. Commandments are only made to be broken. To my way of thinking the original ten commandments were just ten too many. You can love a man into a hero or a saint, but you can't make anything out of him by "thou shalt" or "thou shalt not." Wonders can be worked upon man, the animal, by food, air, water, clothing, shelter, books, pictures and music.

My idea is that love and life grew along lines of evolution. The kind of love that lasts is the kind that is always changing and yet is always the same. Love and life both require the common base of sympathy. I have known people who said love and sympathy are one, and I rather like that idea. I am not sure but that sympathy is love's own self, vitalized by some divine actinic ray.

The man and woman who are always in sympathy with each other's ideals are ever in love. With hearts aflame and lives in tune they go through life lovers always. The days of wooing are never over, they live over continually the June nights and the dreams beneath the stars in courtship days come true.

Every once in a while one reads of a man growing away from his wife or a wife growing away from her husband. They have no common interest. To be happily married neither wife nor husband must stand still. Love demands that both progress. The love that lasts never stands still—it is ever advancing. The love that lasts is inexhaustible, for the more you give the more you have and the love you give away is the only love you keep.

• Advice to Girls •

By Annie Laurie

So YOU go out a bit, you and your brand new beau—and when you go to restaurants he talks with the waiter who looks after him all the time, and you've been taught that that sort of thing is very bad manners, and you don't know what to do about it?

Dear me, what's the matter with all of you girls, how fussy you're getting, to be sure. I don't wonder some of you have to sit at home alone these cool evenings. Who on earth would want to take you out—always worrying for fear the man who is trying to give you a good time will do something odd or peculiar.

What do you want a man to be anyway, a book of etiquette with a checkbook in his pocket?

Go on out with your brand new beau. Have a good time with him and try to give him a good time, too. Forget all about the waiter and the chauffeur and the policeman on the beat and the man at the next table. Be human. Be natural. Be nice and see what a good time you'll have.

Of course, it is the very worst form in the world to talk to the waiter or include him in any way in your conversation. He isn't there to visit with you; he's there to wait upon you and earn his money. But don't lay too much stress on all those little things—it isn't worth while. The whole world isn't standing with its nose against the pane watching you and your brand new beau. Probably even the head waiter never noticed either of you, unless you both gave him an extra big tip—that's all he cares about.

Think less about yourself, little sister, and more about the real things of life. They're all that really count.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her care this office.

THE CHARM OF A MUSICAL VOICE

Florence Reed, Who Says "American Twang" May Be Overcome.

Six Simple, Healthful Exercises

By MAGGIE TEYTE

Prima Donna Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company.

MAGGIE TEYTE

A MUSICAL speaking voice is one of the most potent charms a woman can possess, and unfortunately it is one of the rarest.

Every continental traveller has much to say about the "American voice," which has been ridiculed so much abroad it does not seem strange to hear it criticised. There is scarcely one of our national characteristics, no matter how worthy, which begins to enjoy the fame accorded the "Yankee twang," as our manner of speaking is dubbed.

How to overcome this undeniable fault has been solved by one clever American girl, Florence Reed, the young actress.

Miss Reed inherited her dramatic talent from her father, the late Roland Reed. She also inherited his voice, and she believes any girl can make her voice what she wishes it to be. She says her own experience has strengthened the belief.

"I inherited a comedian's voice from my dear father, whose voice was so perfect for a comedian that the moment he spoke the audience was with him," said she, in a recent chat. "All the queer little tones which were so delightful in his voice were emphasized in mine. That would have been all right, perhaps, if I, too, had been looking for laughter. But when I attempted emotional roles with the voice of a comedienne it won me the wrong kind of applause.

"It was either that I must be funny enough to carry the voice or else get rid of it. I chose the latter. Dear as was my father's memory, and proud as I was of his success, I knew it would never do for his daughter to play tragedy with the same tones he used in comedy. I had seen a good deal of the women who had learned to speak, and I believed I would try to act as my own tutor for awhile.

"I started with a piano and Shakespeare. I struck the middle register, which was the one in which I had fewest tones. Then I began on poor, old, patient Shakespeare. After skipping from cover to cover, I found the 'Mercy' speech from 'The Merchant of Venice' to be the most useful for my purpose. It is peculiarly suitable for the modulation and cultivation of the pleasant speaking voice. I read it slowly and aloud, consciously dropping the register each time.

"I also found great help in the 'stage whisper.'

"Whispering in the loudest possible tone helped me to make my utterance distinct. All the time I was learning how to breathe. We need to breathe well before we can speak well.

"Poetry is more adaptable for voice practice than prose. Tennyson gives a splendid change from Shakespeare.

"All over the country there are teachers who have excellent methods for the specialty of voice production. But many women have neither the time nor the money to pay for such instruction. And I find among the majority of women few, outside of those in public life, who pay attention to learning how to speak.

"In these days, when the cultivation of charm is no longer regarded as akin to witchcraft and devil worship, and when the clever members of the fair sex are doing their utmost to preserve their youth, to keep their good looks, and literally to grow old gracefully, they will do well to take note of their speaking voices. No woman, be she ever so attractive, can hope to charm with the handicap of a raucous voice. It is cheerful, too, to realize that a disagreeable voice may be overcome much more easily than a physical defect—though I suppose it might really be classified under that head.

"Get a copy of Shakespeare from the Free Public Library and devote from 15 minutes to a half-hour each day to the cultivation of a melodious voice. I believe you will be amazed with the result.

"Here are half a dozen rules which will help you. They are the same which have given me the proper voice for my professional work:

"1—Choose a passage from Shakespeare, read it aloud slowly several times.

"2—Consciously pitch the voice a tone lower at the second reading of the passage.

"3—Whisper the passage aloud in as audible a tone as possible.

"4—Have some friend listen as you read, judging for you whether your tone is pleasantly modulated.

"5—Continue these exercises for at least 15 minutes every day.

"6—If you can sing it will be well to sing over the scale in a lower voice than your natural register. Do this several times in connection with the foregoing exercises."

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

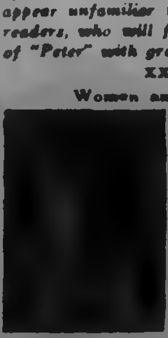
By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

XXX.

Women and Religion



LEONA DALRYMPLE

"MOTHER," said I, "tell me, do most women have a strong religious sense?"

Mother glanced up from her sewing.

"Why do you ask?" she countered, quietly.

"Well," said I, bluntly, "to tell the truth, Mary saves up her church hour to plan gowns and parties and, although I'm not a prude, still I must confess it shocked me a little. I always gave women credit for having a stronger religious sense than most men."

"There, Peter," said mother, unexpectedly, "I think you're wrong."

"But," I stammered, "I've always read that women are ever so much more religiously inclined than men."

"To the outward semblance, Peter," put in mother quickly. "Don't forget that. Women can look devout enough surely and they talk religion a great deal and go to church—but isn't it perhaps a little superficial with most of them?"

"I hope not," said I. For one by one in these early days of my marriage I was losing my choicest illusions.

"Peter," said mother thoughtfully, "it has been my experience that a woman rarely brings a genuine depth of feeling into her religious life. She'll go unerringly to church, but the reason isn't always religious. She may want to see a friend. She may like the general rustle and state of the service—women are ceremonial by nature, I think, and love the emotional thrills of dramatic sanctity—and then again she may like the singing.

"Lots of women use a church as a sort of social clearing house to get the currency of calls and engagements settled up for the week. Women are carelessly and passively good, Peter. They're good because it's a woman's nature to be good. When she isn't I firmly believe it's a deviation from the normal feminine. But she rarely feels the deep, powerful, pulsing truths underlying theology. If she does, she's the exception and not the rule.

"Women are more concerned with the emotional mysticism of religion. Watch the horde of fatuous women who follow in the wake of the occasional thrifty Hindu who comes here to expound the Yogi philosophy. The more mysticism you can interpolate into a religion, the more women followers it will have, mysticism and sentimentality.

"Have you ever seen some of the religious books compiled for the consumption of old ladies the country over? They are an unwholesome mass of morbid sentimentality and profane the great stirring message of true religion. And the poorer type of sacred song panders, too, to that emotional mysticism of women. None of those things are the big elements of religion, son. They're the tawdry gewgaws that attract a popular following. Isn't it true?"

"You're always right, mother," I said. "I sincerely believe that many a man who is careless about the outward observances of his creed has a deep, abiding sense of reverence in his heart. He may not look devout and he may hate to go to church, but it's there just the same. Still," I added fairly, "you can't deny that women hold the palm for morality."

"Chastity," corrected mother quickly. "To all women, Peter, the two are synonymous."

"You mean—"

"That in many other ways women haven't such a deep sense of morality as men. Chastity, I grant, is the great plea upon which they base their claim for greater morality—but women are unmoral, too, in their own way. Petty lies—petty deceits—petty hypocrisies to which many a man wouldn't stoop—figure in their daily lives. It's true, Peter. I've watched it often enough to know."

"And women love to smuggle!" I hinted.

"Man," said mother, thoughtfully, "is a creature of big weakness and big virtues. Most women perhaps don't strike the high spots either way."

Unusual.

"Fakeer seemed to be put out this morning. He was all upset."

"Yes. Some one must have caught him telling the truth."

Truth's new Departure.

And when her senses are regained,

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Science Now Offers You Choice of Nose Styles

Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg

DR. HIRSHBERG

As a nose is to a man's face, as a weather-cock to a steeple, as the sun is to the day, so is a symmetrical, Apollo-like nose to a man.

A nose deflected to the side, a hump-backed nose, a parrot nose, a "retrousse" turned-up nose is an unseen, inscrutable, invisible jest.

True, indeed, is it that a man with a broken nose, a wildly flamboyant nose, a squashed nose and other acutely inflamed noses will hie him to a surgeon for repairs.

Indeed, football and lacrosse players will hasten, immediately after a most trivial accident to the nose, to the worst butcher of a surgeon for help, yet hesitate to undergo the same treatment for the ordinary, Sunday-best nose, deformed by nature and hawk-beaked by inheritance. It is not only the red nose, which I recently wrote about, the Nose, nose, nose, nose,

And who gave thee that jolly red nose?
Cinnamon and Ginger, Nutmegs and Cloves,
And that gave me my jolly red nose

kind that needs bleaching and shrinkage, which alone needs medical care.

In fine, any imperfectly formed nose, once supposed like the wandering Jew to have to remain forever the same, may now be moulded and shaped up as beautifully as that of Aphrodite.

It is an oft quoted historical fact from Pascal that, if the nose of Cleopatra had been shorter the whole face of the earth would have been changed. George Bernard Shaw says jestingly it would have been more cruel to change that saucy, little, retrousse nostril.

Nowadays the Khedive of Egypt would jump into his American made automobile, go to his modern station, where the locomotives are all electrified, ensconce himself with his little Cleopatras—plural, of course—comfortably in his Pullman, arrive at the Delta, go aboard a ship, disembark in New York, consult a cosmetic nose surgeon, and change the faces of the little Khedivettes more quickly than you can say Jack Robinson.

Lightly then would be their slender noses, tip-tilted like the petals of a flower. Noses which would then ravage with impunity any rose.

Answers to Health Questions

W. H.—At what age should a child's teeth begin to be brushed?

Silk dental floss should not be used until a child's second year, but an infant's teeth should be brushed clean three times a day from the day it requires something in addition to milk.

• • •

R. E. F.—I am a printer and my doctor says I have rheumatism in my lower legs. What can I do?

You have no "rheumatism," because there is no such disease. You may have the toxins—poisons—from some microbes which have settled in your tissues. A teaspoonful of milk of magnesia before your meals and five grains of hexamethylenetetramine in a glass of water every four hours will help.

Sunday school teacher—Tommy, who made all these beautiful fields and mountains?

Tommy—I don't know. We just moved here.

"Grandpa, how old are you?"

"I am 87 years old, my little dear."

"Then you were born 80 years before I was."

"Yes, my little girl."

"What a long time you had alone waiting for me."

The children had written compositions on the giraffe. They were reading them aloud to the class. At last the time came for little Willie Doran to read his. It was as follows:

"The giraffe is a dumb animal, and cannot express itself by any sound, because its neck is so long its voice gets tired on its way to its mouth."

"Benny," said Mr. Bloomumper, "if George Washington is the first in the hearts of his countrymen, who comes second?"

"I don't know about that," replied Benny, "but Independence day is the Fourth."

"Why Teddy, dear, what is the matter? Don't you like asparagus?"

"Yes, Mrs. Birchum; but the handles are so hot."

Three-year-old Ethel had been punished by her mamma for some slight delinquency by having her little hands midly slapped. After the resultant tears had been dried Ethel put her ear to her doll's lips as though listening to something the doll had to say, and then said in a rebuking tone:

"No, Dolly, you must not say that mamma is naughty for punishing me."

Great Novels in a Nutshell

"The Master of Ballantrae"

Condensed from the STEVENSON novel by HELEN S. GRAY.

THE plot of this book is intricate. Hate between two brothers is its theme. The charm of the elder, James Durie, Master of Ballantrae, concealed the evil in him. Lack of charm in Henry made people blind to his virtues, so that he seldom got credit for them, or, at best, a belated or meagre recognition. He had solidity of character, but was not at all brilliant and, as he said of himself, could not inspire love.

When Prince Charlie, backed by the French, made an attempt to get the throne of England from George II., the house of Durrisdeer in Scotland decided to stand in with both sides. Both sons wanted to join the prince. James proposed to settle the dispute by tossing a coin. He won. Not long after he was reported killed.

James had been engaged to Alison, an orphan relative. He had little affection for her, but assented as the estate needed her money. In compliance with his father's wishes Henry now married Alison. She continued to cherish the memory of James and was cold to Henry.

One day a stranger, Col. Burke, came with word that James was alive. Together they had escaped after the war in a French boat, which shortly after was seized by pirates. They were spared as recruits. The master got the crew drunk with drugged liquor, took the treasure and with Burke and two others rowed to shore. One drowned in a swamp. The other, after he had guided them to a path, the master killed, that no witness should survive to tell of their career as pirates. They found a boat bound for Albany hiding in a cove, and engaged passage. While trying to get from Albany to the French in Canada, James was obliged to bury his treasure. These were the facts, but the colonel did not tell all to Alison and the old lord. The colonel had now been sent for money for James. Henry scraped some together for him.

In consequence he had to practise rigid economy, which gave him the reputation of being a skinflint. Even his wife accused him one day of being stingy. This was more than Mackellar, the superintendent, who liked Henry, could stand for. So he told her that in seven years Henry had sent his brother £8000.

His next demand having been refused James came in person to get money to go to India. To get rid of him Henry sold off part of the estate at a great sacrifice. Even then James still lingered. Henry discovered that he had been a spy and was stung into exposing him before the family.

James explained the matter to Alison's satisfaction, and they were on very friendly terms. One night James called his brother a dolt, a clodhopper and other epithets and declared that his wife loved him, not her husband. A duel followed, and James was left lying on the ground apparently dead. Mackellar, who had been present, ran to tell the old lord and Alison. When he returned the body was gone. Following this episode Henry had a long illness, which affected his mind. Mackellar showed Alison proof that James had been a spy. Thereafter she was very devoted to Henry. The old lord did not long survive.

Some years later James returned. As excitement would kill Henry, his wife took him and the children to her colonial estate in New York, leaving Mackellar and the family lawyer as trustees and concealing their destination. James guessed it and followed to harass them further.

Henry's mind had failed noticeably of late. He refused James's request to fit out an expedition to go after his treasure, then hired a ruffian to make up a party and go and kill James during the trip. Through the eavesdropping of his faithful Hindoo companion, Secundra Dass, James learned of the plot. He fell sick, died and was buried. The party was now beset by Indians and forced to flee. All but two were scalped, one of whom, the Hindoo, returned to the wilderness.

When told his brother was dead and buried, Henry replied he would believe it when he saw the corpse. So he insisted on accompanying an official on a diplomatic errand to that locality. They found the Hindoo opening a grave. He took out the body of the master, tried to resuscitate it, but in vain, except that for a moment the eyes opened. At signs of life in his brother Henry fell dead.

Every "man on the land" knows the lapwing, or green plover, though he may not know that this bird is one of the very best friends of the farmer and literally worth its weight in gold several times. It takes its proper name, lapwing, from the regular, slow flapping of the long, rounded wings. Because of its peculiar cry it is popularly known in England as the peewit and in Scotland as peesweep. The Germans call it kiebitz. The French say that it can count "eighteen" (eighteen in French is dixhuit, which is pronounced deezeweet). The peewit is found in every country in Europe and Asia. In Great Britain it was once very common, being chiefly found in marshes, moors and meadows, but its numbers are gradually decreasing because its eggs are collected and sold as "plovers' eggs," for which there is a large demand during the proper season.—Smallholder.

Passing It On.

The clerk filled out the marriage license and handed it over.

"Thank you," said the young man.

"Hold on! That's $2."

"Two dollars!"

"Yes. Did you suppose we gave these things away?"

"I certainly did. Charging a man $2 for a sheet of paper that didn't cost the county more than a nickel at the outside is robbery. Have I got to pay it?"

"You'll pay it or you'll hand back that document."

"All right," said the young man, taking a bill out of his pocket, tendering it to the clerk and waiting for his change, "but I can tell you right now you ain't robbin' me. You're robbin' the preacher. He'll get just $2 less than I was goin' to give him."

Pocketing the change and tilting his hat back on his head, he stalked out of the office with the air of a man who had been imposed upon, but who knew how to get even.—Chicago Tribune.

The Cat Came Back.

Bacon—Did you ever try to lose a cat?

Egbert—Oh, yes. I hit upon a plan which I thought would work. I wrote a note, inclosing $10, and tied both about the cat's neck. The note read, "Finder may keep both the cat and the money."

"And how did it work?"

"The cat came back the next day with another note tied to its neck. The note read: 'Don't need the cat, but can use the money. Please send $10 more.'"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Pleasure Site.

Willie—Father, is it true that riches do not bring happiness?

His Pa—Quite true, my son. If you doubt it observe how much more the people in the bleachers seem to enjoy themselves than those in the grand stand.—New York Telegraph.

Good Advice.

"And now, son," said the old rabbit, "here's a bit of advice. Always keep on the good side of a dog."

"But, pop," queried the youngster, who was about to go forth into the big world, "which is the good side of a dog?"

"The outside, son," answered the old rabbit as he bit off another hunk of cabbage.—Pittsburg Press.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

At the Conservative Central Office, Westminster, sits the man, Mr. James Percival Hughes, who organizes and directs the Tory forces. Mr. Hughes became chief agent of the Tory party in 1907 and the arduousness of the work may be gathered from the fact that he once confessed that he rarely found time for a daily walk. Mr Hughes has had a varied career. In the first place, he was private secretary to the late Colonel Fred Burnaby, gallant soldier and pioneer aeronaut, and after the latter's death was left trustee of his estates in Ireland on behalf of the colonel's only son, who has distinguished himself as the inventor of the Atalanta mono-rail high-speed system. Then Mr Hughes was called to the Bar, but his high reputation as an organizer and his fondness for political work led him to his present responsible position.

A Wedding Ring Superstition.

Although there was a lifelong friendship to back up their business deals, the jeweler was not surprised when his old customer who had married a second time bought the wedding ring at another shop

"If he should take a third wife he would buy the ring at still another store," the jeweler said. "That is one of the superstitions of the trade. A man may have the marrying habit ever so bad and require several wedding rings in his time, yet he never buys any two of them from the same place. Jewelers do not expect it. They don't want to sell two wedding rings to the same man. Bad luck would surely light on all concerned, and there is enough trouble in the world anyhow without deliberately inviting more of it by defying a good old wedding ring superstitution."—New York Times.

THE SARGASSO SEA.

If You See It Lying Around Loose Notify the Geographers.

If any one has seen anything of the Sargasso sea he will confer a great favor upon the geographers by reporting his discovery, says a writer in Success Magazine. For some time there has been a suspicion that this prominent feature of the Atlantic ocean maps and of the stories of old sailors is largely mythical.

A recent Norwegian expedition sent out to search for the Sargasso sea reports a great deal of sea, but very little sargasso. It is true that they discovered a place in the north Atlantic where seaweed is rather common, but as for a mass of marine plants so dense that sailing vessels are held fast in it while the mariners die a lingering death of starvation—there is nothing in it. In fact, these meddlesome Scandinavians hint broadly that there has never been any such place.

If any one will kindly return the Sargasso sea to its proper place in the Atlantic ocean all will be forgiven and no questions asked; otherwise nothing can save this well known phenomenon from going the way of the sea serpent, the mermaid and Dr. Cook's great discovery.

One Consolation.

During the time he acted as United States consul in Glasgow Bret Harte occasionally indulged in a day's sport with the gun, and it was during one of his shooting excursions that the humorist met with an accident which might have disfigured him for the remainder of his life, his face being badly cut through the recoil of an overloaded gun. Fortunately the doctor's skill prevented him from being permanently marked.

Writing about the occurrence to his friend, T. Edgar Pemberton, who quotes the letter in his "Tribute to Bret Harte," the novelist concludes his letter by telling of an amusing effort which was made to console him on account of the accident.

"When the surgeon was stitching me together," he wrote, "the son of the house, a boy of twelve, came timidly to the door of my room.

"'Tell Mr. Bret Harte it's all right,' he said. 'He killed the hare.'"

What Crete Would Cost.

Present trouble in the east has brought out the sardonic humor of at least one Turkish gentleman.

"Would your highness," said an enterprising Italian journalist to the grand vizier of the time, "consent to the sale of Crete?"

"Certainly," replied the Turk. "Any one can have it for the price we paid—twenty years' war."

LAUGHTER AND TEARS.

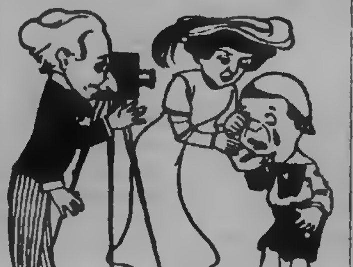
A Comedy Scene In Which Grief Played a Leading Part.

"Stage fright is not one of the emotions which get across the footlights," writes Miss Alice Crawford. "Audiences are for the most part as serenely unconscious of it as they are of other individual sentiments in the actors having no relation to the incidents of the play.

"I shall never forget an instance of this curious insensibility of the crowd. Once when I was touring one of the most charming and popular girls of the company died after only a few days' illness. She was one of those sweet, tranquil natures and had endeared herself to us all. Her death in lodgings in the small provincial town had an element of real tragedy in it.

"The news that she was dead reached the theater in the evening just as two of the actors and I were about to go on for a scene of broad comedy. We went on the stage with tears in our eyes, and I can still see the face of one of those comedians with the great tears glistening on the paint. He was dreadfully affected. Try as he would, he could not control his voice, and the tears kept choking him as he rattled off his lines.

"The audience were convulsed every time his voice broke, and it made me cry more than ever to see the grief shaking him as he grinned and chaffed through his tears. Yet that comedy scene never went so well before. The audience never guessed."—Exchange.



"Johnnie, keep still and sit down and have your picture taken. Nothing will hurt you."

"Booboo! That's what you said when we went to the dentist's."

Afterward.

He was not great in any way,
He did not do a noble deed
Nor lend a helping hand to aid
A luckless creature in his need.

Yet he was missed far more than if
Mankind was better for his ken,
Since, though his way led through the world,
He never bored his fellow men.

AN OLD TIME EXPLOSION.

Its Curious Phases Told by a Seventeenth Century Scribe.

An old chronicler tells a curious story of an explosion which occurred in London Jan. 4, 1649. A ship chandler, it seems, "about 7 of the clock at night, being busy in his shop about barreling up of gunpowder, it took fire and in the twinkling of an eye blew up not only that, but all the houses thereabout to the number of fifty or sixty. The number of persons destroyed by this blow could never be known, for the next house but one was the Rose tavern, a house never (at that time of night) but full of company. And in three or four days, after digging, they continually found heads, arms, legs, etc." The most interesting part of the account comes further on:

"In the digging they found the mistress of the house of the Rose tavern sitting in her bar and one of the drawers standing by the bar's side, with a pot in his hand, only stifled by dust and smoke, their bodies being preserved whole by means of great timbers falling across one upon another.

"There was also found upon the upper leads of Barking church a young child lying in a cradle as newly laid in bed, neither child nor cradle having the least sign of fire or other hurt. It was never known whose child it was, so that one of the parish kept it for a memorial, for in the year 1666 I saw the child, grown to be then a proper maiden."

An Afterthought.

"Ye-es," remarked a young husband at breakfast, "these biscuits are pretty good, but don't you think there ought to be a little more"—

"Your mother made them," interrupted the wife quickly.

—"of them?" ended the husband, with a flash of inspiration.

Man is his own star, and that soul that can be honest is the only perfect man.—Fletcher.

A Romantic Career.

The romantic career of a very remarkable man, John Gully, who seconded Cribb in his battle with Molineaux, is thus summed up in the "Dictionary of National Biography:" "Prizefighter, horse racer, legislator and colliery proprietor." Gully fought his first fight just before Trafalgar. He fought his last and retired from the prize ring in a blaze of triumph seven years before Waterloo. Gully rose to be a rich man and a member of parliament. He won the Derby three times and was the owner of a large and prosperous colliery. He died in 1863, the father of twenty-four children.

Compensation.

"I felt so sorry when I heard your house was burned down, Mrs. Jones," said Mrs. Hawkins.

"It was too bad," said Mrs. Jones, "but it had its bright side. John and I were both afraid to discharge our cook, but now that the house is gone of course we don't have to." Harper's Weekly.

Shapely Swedes.

The Swedes are probably the tallest people in Europe and have on the whole erect, handsome figures. To some extent this advantage is due to physical exercise, for Swedish gymnastics are compulsory in the elementary schools, and the system is much used in other schools and colleges.—London Telegraph.

A QUAINT LITTLE COAT WITH A SHAPED BAND AT THE BOTTOM

The beauty of our new gowns and suits lies chiefly in line and material. Trimmings count for very little.

King's blue ratine—not the vivid color of some seasons ago, but a softer, more becoming shade that has come in this fall—is used in 7832. The sash is of black satin, and a narrow black silk braid is the only other trimming. The cut of the blouse and the long, flaring sleeve renders the costume distinctive.

To copy this design in size 16 it requires 5¾ yards of 36 inch material.

7881 is a smart little coat bringing out several characteristics of the grown-up fashions, among them the broad collar and revers and the band at the bottom, into which the body of the coat is slightly fulled.

Dull green duvetyn is the material with collar, cuffs and trimming bands of a figured silk crepe.

This coat may be made in size 10 with 2¾ yards of 36 inch material and ¾ yard of contrasting silk.

No. 7832—sizes 16, 17 and 18.
No. 7881—sizes 4 to 14.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

HERE AN UNUSUAL VEST IMPARTS DISTINCTION

As the vest and tunic are favored in grown up modes so do they also appear as smart features on the frock or suit of the younger girl. The little dress of dark serge is wonderfully brightened by a vest of colored tapestry or brocade.

No. 7877 is a school or street frock of dark brown eponge with a surplice vest of brown and gold figured ratine. The tabs extending below the girdle are an effective touch, and the band of the same figured material at the bottom of the tunic is another.

The bodice shows a set-in sleeve with a deep cuff. The skirt is a two-piece model.

To copy this frock in size 18 it requires 4¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 1 yard of 30 inch material for the vest and cuffs.

The waist-line for children is almost entirely done away with this season. Dame Fashion allows them all the ease of movement possible, and designs gain rather than lose in attractiveness.

No. 8095 is a straight little dress for a child from 4 to 12 years. It is here fashioned of eponge in dark red with a folded sash of satin.

In size 8 it may be made with 2¾ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 7877—sizes 16, 17 and 18.
No. 8095—sizes 4 to 12.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

Local Market Notes.

Yesterday hardwood and hay were the only commodities on the local market. Six or eight loads of beech and maple from Monaghan, Otonabee and Douro averaged $6 a cord. Hay brought $18 a ton. Mr. Sam Daney weighed a load of ice for the Allin Ice Co. that turned the scales at 9030 pounds.

Was There Cruelty to Horse?

Yesterday afternoon the police station was called up by a sympathizer with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It seems that a race horse used by Mr. Doig, the junk dealer, fell on Lake street. It was feared that this fleet footed steed had been driven too fast, thus leading to its condition. Officers Newhall and Maher went down to investigate. It is said that, on their arrival, the steed, still alive, looked up at the detectives and deliberately winked its left eye. However, one of the officers was impelled to shoot the horse.

The first practical Graphophone was a COLUMBIA. All other talking machines are manufactured under license. Columbia owns the fundamental patents

The COLUMBIA process of Engraving Disc Records, invented by Jos. W. Jones, of Speedometer fame, has now been adopted by all makers. The above is the early disc type of horn Graphophone.

The COLUMBIA Grafonola or hornless Graphophone was the most significant improvement in years. It marked a big step forward in changing the "Talking Machine" into a musical instrument selling for as little as $20.00.

The COLUMBIA Grafonola is to-day the highest type and most attractive of self-contained instruments selling for $250 or less.

The Long Road of Progress marked by COLUMBIA improvements.

The foundation of the talking machine industry rests on the fundamental patents granted the first COLUMBIA. Every improvement of note since then has been devised and patented by COLUMBIA. The last word in the development of the one and only universal musical instrument is the "Grand." Only an inventive genius equal to conceiving the original primitive machine and this latest elaboration of it can hope to devise further improvement. That means that when it does come it will be marked COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA.

---and now the "GRAND," the "Maximus Superbus" of musical instruments. No winding-- automatic start and stop--built like a grand piano. The last word in progress --- and of course exclusively a COLUMBIA development $650

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap Dries the Scalp, Causing Dandruff, Then Hair Falls Out—Try This Next Time.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

How to Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

Look for Symptoms of This Treacherous Disease in the Following List.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice raspy?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now — stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrhal germs.

"No one can know better than I the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Westvale, P.Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, ear noises, headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath rank. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit last two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size 50c., sample size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

BRITISH SUBJECT SHOT DOWN BY VILLA; CALLED WANTON MURDER; NO FOREIGNER SAFE IN MEXICO

England Has Asked United States to Extort From Rebels Reason Why—William Benton, Wealthy Rancher

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 20.—William S. Brenton, the British subject who disappeared in Juarez Tuesday night, is dead, according to news brought Mrs. Brenton by Thomas D. Edwards, American consul at Juarez. A telegram from Washington said that details are in the hands of Secretary Bryan.

Brenton was tried by court martial and found guilty of complicity in a plot to take Villa's life. He was executed by a firing squad Wednesday night.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Secretary of State Bryan, after a Cabinet conference, ordered an immediate investigation of the killing of W. S. Brenton, the English rancoer at Juarez.

Villa Flees to Chihuahua.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 20.—Villa, whose act is stigmatized by Brenton's numerous friends as wanton murder, left suddenly for Chihuahua to-day. No single act of any of the recent revolutions, not excepting the Cumbre tunnel disaster has so stirred indignation. When extra editions were placed on the streets they were frantically seized upon and read.

No Foreigner Safe.

Brenton's way were blunt, but his friends admired him for them, and there were moist eyes and muttered imprecations among them when they heard the news.

"No foreigner is safe in Mexico," was the general comment, and a suggestion that a mass meeting of protest be held here met with considerable favor.

WHITNEY MAY BE BACK BEFORE SESSION ENDS

Improvement Continues, and He Will Soon Be Removed Home From Hospital—Hanna or Foy Leader

Toronto, Feb. 20.—The continued improvement of Sir James Whitney would seem to relieve to a certain extent the anxiety in political circles regarding the appointment of his possible successor, since the announcement made before the House yesterday afternoon by the Hon. W. J. Hanna was to the effect that it was expected the Premier would be back to lead the party before the session closes. His department, however, refuses to corroborate that statement.

Move Premier Soon.

It is understood that the Premier has so far recovered that he is now able to receive visitors every day. The number is gradually being increased, and topics of state will later be introduced. It will be some weeks at the least, before he will appear in public.

His condition to-day appeared so favorable that there was some talk of his being removed to his home from the hospital this afternoon.

In the meantime, with the absence of Hon. J. J. Foy, Hon. Dr. Pyne remains the nominal leader of the House, while the Hon. Mr. Hanna is in reality accepting the burden of leadership.

JUDGMENT FOR PLAINTIFF

Judgment was rendered by Judge Huycke yesterday morning in the case of the Computing Scales Company of Canada vs. Thos. E. Hall. By mutual consent of counsels the case was heard before His Honor yesterday morning. The claim of the plaintiffs was to recover the possession of four scales, and costs of $30. The defendant denied that he had unlawfully detained the scales, and denied possession of the said goods.

His Honor gave judgment in favor of plaintiffs, giving them possession of the chattels without costs

Mr. G. W. Hatton for plaintiff; Hall, Mead and Davidson for the defence.

INTERESTING MEETING OF THE WOMEN'S C.T.U.

A specially interesting meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Knapman, 604 George St., on Tuesday afternoon.

"It is customary to hold a day of loving memory on the home-going anniversary of our beloved world-wide leader, Frances E. Willard."

The unusually large number at the meeting proved that many are interested in white-ribbon work.

Early in the afternoon the ladies met to make comfort bags to be sent to the lumbermen in the Northern camps. While the work was going on Mrs. Shields read a very interesting account of the history of the comfort bags, their constructions and the good they had done in providing for the needs of the men in the camps. They were made of brown and green denim, with four pockets which were filled with many comforts, such as marked testaments, hymn books, leaflets, and a letter from the Union, paper and envelopes, pencils, pins, needles, thimbles, bandages, mending yarn and pieces of cloth, surgical needles and thread, and many other useful things.

It was decided to send a letter from the Union to the local member of the Dominion Parliament asking him to give his vote and influence to the Bill for Renumeration of Prison Labor and the State use of Prison Products, as we believe the prisoner should earn his own maintenance, and be made to support those dependent on him, that they may not become a public charge.

Delegates were appointed to the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance to be held in Toronto next week as follows: Mrs. Knapman and Mrs. Armstronb with Mrs. Thornton and Taylor as alternatives.

A most interesting address was that of Mrs. Whalley on the life and work of Frances E. Willard in which she told of attending a world's White Ribbon Convention held in Toronto a number of years ago where she heard Miss Willard speak. Among the other inspiring things she heard from Miss Willard were these "To be good—that one's single will might be the good angel of millions, that is the supreme dream of my intellect."

Although the sun was shining brightly all the afternoon, it was still brighter in Mrs. Knapman's beautiful home. The music was much enjoyed which consisted of solos from Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Davidson; a piano solo by Miss Irene Knapman and a piano duet by Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Lewis. Ten new members were added to the roll.

Dainty refreshments were served, after which a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Knapman for her kind hospitality.

JUDGE HUYCKE CALLS WOMAN COP A FAD, NOT A NECESSITY

Yesterday afternoon the Police Commissioners met. There were present Judge Huycke, chairman, Police Magistrate Dumble and Mayor Buller.

The Sanitary Board wrote regarding licensing night soil operators. The local police sent in a letter asking for an increase of salaries as has been given in other cities.

Here Judge Huycke gave a written report on the mooted question of a policewoman, as follows:

Judge Huycke's Opinion.

Some weeks ago we were waited on by a deputation, urging the appointment of a policewoman in Peterborough; since then, an intermittent agitation has been kept up in the press and elsewhere. On that occasion, I publicly informed the members of that deputation, (a Reverend gentleman to the contrary notwithstanding) that this board would carefully consider the matter.

First, I wish to make clear the constitution of this board and more particularly my own position on it. What I say, too, regarding myself, applies largely to the Police Magistrate, though I do not in any way speak for Mr. Dumble, nor does he know what I am about to say.

It would appear as if certain persons assume that I represent the people of Peterborough in this matter, and that as one is reported to have said, they were my constituency. This is quite incorrect, I am not amenable to the people of the City in any way, nor am I responsible to them or any of them, for my acts or words. I am appointed by the Crown in this city and county.

I certainly am in no sense, a "civic official."

The Board is constituted for the express reason that it may be independent, and not subject to public clamour.

My sole duty as Police Commissioner is the suppression and detection of crime, and of course, incidentally promote the best interests of the city.

I therefore am a member of this Board, solely and simply because I am the Judge, to act as a Judge, and independently and impartially to perform the duty, the sworn duty, of a judicial officer.

At the present time a large section of the community favor the appointment of a policewoman; another section, less noisy, but not less numerous, probably more so, are opposed to it. It is my duty, not to favor or listen to, or be influenced by, either one or the other of these factions.

It is my duty to use my own best judgment in the same way as in the trial of an action, civil or criminal, a Judge should be absolutely independent. I tried to hint or even state this to the ladies deputation, but it was certainly either misunderstood or ignored. This being my duty as judge and ex-officio police commissioner, I propose doing my duty as I see it, and refuse to move even a hair's breadth from the line of duty, notwithstanding deputations and petitions, mass meetings and resolutions, innuendo and misrepresentation, coarse abuse and brazen falsehood, yellow pulpiteers and deeper yellow irresponsible scribblers—any or all of these do not move me one iota.

The code makes it a criminal offence to influence a juror on a case. I always refuse to listen as soon as I know what is attempted, but I cannot prevent being approached or having letters or resolutions sent me. Sometimes, it is undoubtedly done in ignorance; in other causes, I am not so sure.

Yet this is the very thing the promoters of this idea have been doing for the past month, and doing it in the most extravagant and improper manner. If this were a case up for trial after what has transpired, I should refuse to try it, and send for another judge to come in and dispose of it.

Now as to the question in hand. We are told two things. First, that Peterborough is a very bad place, one of the worst, if not the worst in Canada, and secondly, that this can and should be remedied by the appointment of a woman police officer. True neither of these propositions is supported by evidence of any kind, but we are so told, and forsooth, should act accordingly. It is alleged, not proved, stated not demonstrated.

As to the first, I do not believe it at all. Peterborough is not, I think, worse than most other places of its size, and I regret to say, I am quite sure it is not any better; but we are told a great wave of immorality is now sweeping over us and must be stemmed. I must crave pardon if I do not accept or believe that either. The wave most noticeable of late, is one of ignorance and bad taste; if not ignorance, it is impertinence, which is worse.

I have tried to learn something about the instances referred to in the petition presented and in its support. The trouble is, no complaint was ever [illegible] the time, and no particulars given, so it is quite impossible to trace them; the only one cited in which the police were notified, I have located. I find it occurred five years ago.

I am quite aware we must increase our force, but for its number, I believe it most attentive and efficient, and not excelled anywhere.

A band of self-constituted advisers send me a resolution assuring me of their "approval" provided I comply with their desires at an "early" date. Most considerate on their part! That is indeed sugar-coating the pill of intimidation. I deplore and resent doubly all such efforts to cajole, intimidate, or dragoon me into action for a policewoman or anything else whatever, for I am assured, the very people who resort to such tactics and who have so persistently kept at them for the past month would despise me in their hearts as a weakling if I yielded to their screaming importunities, and even if they did not do so, I should despise myself. Then too, we are told we should appoint a woman policeman.

The result of my research has convinced me, that in the case of the local advocates of the idea, there is more heat than light, and their knowledge is in inverse ratio to their zeal.

There are to-day in the whole Province of Ontario just three policewomen, so far as I have been able to learn; just four in the whole Dominion of Canada.

Toronto, with her half million people and nearly seven hundred policemen, has two policewomen, and two only, also as yet only an experiment, appointed some six months ago.

To sum up, however, the great mass of the information I have received, leads to the conclusion that the policewoman is more a fad than a necessity, more ornamental than useful.

On the other hand, while of opinion that our force is good, I think it inadequate and favour a considerable addition to its numbers. Our outside and residential sections are in

ONE APPLICATION WILL REMOVE HAIRY GROWTHS

(Boudoir Secrets)

No woman need longer tolerate ugly hairy growths, for with a single application of a plain delatone paste it is an easy matter to quickly banish hair or fuzz from any part of the face or neck. Just mix some water with a little powdered delatone and spread this on the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub it off and the skin will be free from hair or blemish. After this treatment the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone.

CONCERT BY ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY A GREAT SUCCESS

A very enjoyable concert was held last night by the St. George's Society at the W.O.W. Hall. The chair was occupied by Mr. Walter Stocker, the president, supported by Mr. R. W. Heafield, vice-president.

The artists who so ably contributed to the evening's enjoyment were:

Mandolin Club, selections.
Mr. Geo. Allan, vocal solos.
Miss Leader, recitations.
Mr. W. Barry, pianoforte solos.
Mr. Johns, recitations.

Not the least enjoyable item was an address on architecture by Mr. W. Barry, the society's pianist. Mr. Barry handled his subject with great ease considering the time at his disposal.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Interesting Programme for To-day and Sunday at the Free Methodist Church.

Rev. M. S. Benn, of Toronto, preached an able missionary sermon last night in the Free Methodist church, from the 3rd verse of the 17th chapter of the Gospel according to St. John: "And this is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

He stated that "eternal life is a personal knowledge of God, and that man is the only creature capable of knowing God, and having eternal life. This is elevating and the only thing that can uplift the heathen. This can be accomplished only by sending some one to tell them about Him. It is not enough to send them the Bible, they need the living teacher. It may not be our duty to go ourselves, but to do what we can to send others, and pray for those who go."

Mr. Olmstead also spoke a few minutes after which an offering was taken for foreign missions. A very interesting session of the Sunday school convention will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Nine short addresses on live Sunday school topics will be given.

Rev. Mr. Olmstead will preach in the evening at 8 o'clock.

Quarterly meeting services will be held on Sunday morning beginning at 9 o'clock. The District Elder will preach at 11 a.m. Mr. Olmstead will give a very interesting and unique address in the afternoon at 3 o'clock on "Child Welfare."

Every person should hear this as it is considered an extraordinary address. The people of all denominations and classes are invited. He will also preach at 7 p.m.

FROZEN BASS AWAKES AND HUNTS MINNOW

In our issue of Thursday was a story of how former Fishery Inspector Dave Johnston, whilst cutting ice at Crawford's Grove, had found, in a transparent block, a bass frozen stiff with a minnow three inches ahead of the bass, also frozen. A Times scribe advised Mr. Johnston to thaw the fish out and see if they would live. Yesterday afternoon our reporter again met and questioned Mr. Johnston. The latter said, "I took your advice and thawed the fish out in a tub of cold water. Both fish revived. I put them in a pail of water and dumped them into the river. Just as the minnow disappeared under the ice, the bass was chasing it a foot behind

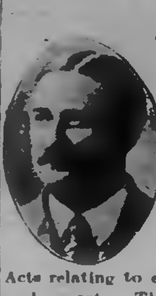
POLITICAL CORRUPTION DISCUSSED; MR. J. H. BURNHAM MAKES EXCELLEMT SPEECH

Member for West Peterborough Takes Leading Part of the Debate



THERE was a lively discussion in Parliament on the subject of electoral corruption, in which many ministers and leading members took part. The motion was to appoint a committee of nine to enquire into the Acts relating to elections to the House and report. The following is Hansard's report of the speech of the member for West Peterborough:

Mr. Burnham, on rising, said—I should like to say a word or two on this subject, especially as I regard it not only as my privilege but my duty. Those who remember the history of affairs in England prior to 1881 will remember that England had become so absolutely rotten politically that it was almost impossible to carry on a system of government there. The consequence was that they brought in Sir Henry James' Bill which was carried out so well and so thoroughly that political corruption amongst the masses—I do not mean amongst the titled classes—was very largely stopped. In the United States, as the Rev. Dr. Rainsford has lately said, they are at least twenty years ahead of us in grappling with corruption. I do not think that in either of these countries the people are better inherently than we are, but it is because there has grown up in Canada a certain cynicism as terrible as it is pathetic, which affects pretty nearly every one and which regards as a joke the man who stands up for clean elections. The only hope in all this is that when things get so bad that they cannot get worse and have to be reformed, necessity makes it imperative that we shall reform them. Therefore, if things have not reached that stage in Canada yet, they shortly will be there and from the very necessities of the case we shall have to form them if from no higher motive than that.

I would like to say also that it is well understood, by the risen as well as by the rising generation, that men who will condone or practice one form of crookedness will condone and practice every other form. The gentle art of lying requires, on their behalf to be carried out in its entirety. As for saying that people shall, by declaration and otherwise, file certain statements, I have only to remark that such a proposition is absurd. We know that some people would file anything under heaven and stop only as near as possible to the margin or limit at which they are likely to be found out. I have had plenty of painful experience in this regard and I know whereof I speak without presuming to know too much. I think the remedy is not to encumber the statute book with further provisions, which make it a long, weary and expensive task for those who would undertake to vindicate the law, but that a simple remedy would be found by adding a clause, if necessary, to the Criminal Code stating that each individual offence as it arises may be treated before a magistrate or two justices of the peace. If you make that change in the law you have the the difficulty solved. Instead of waiting to make a long bill of complaint with one, or two, or four, or five hundred charges in it and watching your witnesses, you could deal at once with the persons who had per-

AFRAID TO EAT.

Girl Starving on Poorly Selected Food.

"Several years ago I was actually starving," writes a girl, "yet dared not eat for fear of the consequences.

"I had suffered indigestion from overwork, irregular meals and improper food, until at last my stomach became so weak I could eat scarcely any food without great distress.

"Many kinds of food were tried, all with the same discouraging effects. I steadily lost health and strength until I was but a wreck of my former self.

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts and its great merits, I purchased a package, but with little hope that it would help me—I was so discouraged.

"I found it not only appetizing but that I could eat it as I could eat it as I liked and that it satisfied the craving for food without causing distress, and if I may use the expression, "it filled the bill."

"For months Grape-Nuts was my principal article of diet. I felt from the very first that I had found the right way to health and happiness, and my anticipations were fully realed.

"With its continued use I regained my usual health and strength. Today I am well and can eat anything I like, yet Grape-Nuts food forms a part of my bill of fare."

LAWRENCE IRVING IS INIMITABLE

Following in the Footsteps of His Father—A Delighted Audience at Grand Last Night—Two Performances To-day.

Mr. Laurence Irving, son of the late Sir Henry Irving, assisted by Miss Mabel Hackney, and an all-English star cast, entertained a highly appreciative audience at the Grand Opera House last night, in the thrilling tragedy production, "The Unwritten Law." Mr. Irving, although a young man, has justly earned for himself the reputation of being England's greatest living actor, and was seen and heard last evening to splendid advantage in his own great Russian socialistic tragedy, centred in St. Petersburg. His interpretation of the leading cast of Rodina Raskolnikoff, the socialist student, who murders a living brute in guise of a man to protect an orphan family of young girls carries the audience with him from rise to fall of curtain in sympathetic attention. In fact one might almost fancy one was sitting in the old Lyceum Theatre in London before a famous histrionic presentation by his late distinguished father, Sir Henry, in whose footsteps Mr. Laurence is so skilfully following. His conception of the conscientious suspect under gruelling examination by the Russian magistrate in the very room in which the victim was killed is contageous, and the audience can almost feel the torture of the roll he so faithfully portrays. In face Mr. Laurence Irving lives his parts on the stage and his audience may be said to live them with him. Miss Mabel Hackney, his leading lady is charmingly sustaining her enviable reputation as one of the most gifted actresses of the day, and her support of Mr. Irving last night left nothing wanting in the way of irresistible interpretation of a difficult pathetic character in Sonia Martinova. Henry Crocker, as Bozak, the examining magistrate shows exceptional talent, and is a valuable acquisition to the company, as is also Lionel Braham, as Kashkine, a student who very acceptably furnishes what humor the piece possesses.

Those who love high class histrionic talent enjoyed a treat last night, as the company is admirably balanced, exceedingly gifted and worthy the casts entrusted to their presentation. Mr. Irving's pieces are all staged with that careful attention to details which make a harmonious whole, and merit the biggest possible patronage. The prices are reasonable for famous productions by a famous leading lady and gentleman, supported by a company of artists in their profession.

At the matinee this afternoon and to-night, Mr. Laurence Irving will present his world-famed play, the "Typhoon," in which he has won a standing second to none for his inimitable impersonation of the Japanese doctor of letters. All lovers of high class and talented theatrical productions will not regret attending the Opera House at one of the two performances to-day.

ERRATIC SCIENCE.

Some Wonderful Answers by Schoolroom Small Boys.

"Mushrooms always grow in damp places, and so they look like umbrellas," wrote a small boy in the science examination. Other examples of the "howler" are compiled by a writer in the Scientific American:

"Air is the most necessary of all the elements. If there were no such thing as air I would not be writing this essay now, also there would be no pneumatic tires, which would be a sad loss.

"Electricity and lightning are of the same nature, the only difference being that lightning is often several miles in length, while electricity is only a few inches.

"Air usually has no weight, but found to weigh about fifteen pounds to a square inch.

"The axis of the earth is an imaginary line on which the earth is supposed to take its daily routine.

"The difference between air and water is that air can be made wetter, but water cannot.

"Gravity is chiefly noticeable in the autumn when the apples are falling from the trees.

"Things which are equal to each other are equal to anything else.

"A parallel straight line is one which if produced to meet itself does not meet.

"The blood is petrified in the lungs by inspired air."

Whistler's Friendships.

That Whistler, the man of famous enemies, had faithful friends is recalled by Ford Madox Hueffer, writing of the pre-Raphaelites in Harper's Magazine. Madox Brown had a circular printed drawing the attention of all his old patrons to the merits of Whistler's etchings and begging them in the most urgent terms to make purchases because Whistler was in indigent circumstances. The story is that upon one occasion Madox Brown, going to a tea party at the Whistlers' in Chelsea, was met in the hall by Mrs. Whistler, who begged him to go to the poulterer's and purchase a pound of butter. The bread was cut, but there was nothing to put upon it. There was no money in the house, the poulterer had cut off his credit, and Mrs. Whistler said "she dared not send her husband, for he would certainly punch the tradesman's head."

When de Devil Baits the Hook.
Watch out, Mr. Fisherman:
Keep yo' eyes an hook!
Mind de fish you ketch'n'
W'en de devil baits de hook!

Dar's trouble in de ocean,
Dar's trouble in de brook,
W'en a feller goes a-fishin'
An' de devil baits de hook.

You kin see it on de skyline,
You kin read it in de brook—
De fish is full of trouble
W'en de devil baits de hook.

TIPS IN SCOTLAND.

An Example of How Some Servants Win Their Wages.

A gentleman was invited to a shoot in Scotland at two places close together. He arrived at the first place, and immediately after his arrival at the first house received a telegram calling him back to town. He, however, determined to have one day's shooting and to proceed to town by the night mail.

At the end of the day he gave the head keeper £1 and asked him to send his gun and cartridge bag over to the other place for which he had an invitation and where he proposed proceeding in three or four days' time.

On his arrival there after his visit to town he found his gun, etc., had not arrived, whereupon he wrote to the keeper, asking him to forward it at once, and he received a reply stating that when he (the keeper) had received the other £4 to which he was "entitled" the gun would be forwarded. It was detained till payment was made.

The gentleman wrote to the keeper's master and received a reply that "he (the master) never interfered between his guests and his servants in the matter of tips." The gentleman ascertained that the master in question paid the keeper no wages, but left him to get what he could out of the guests.—London Times.

Luck in Horseshoes.

The superstition about luck in horseshoes dates back too far for record, but it was not always confined to the horseshoe. Any piece of iron found in one's path was accounted a sign of good luck, and as horseshoes were more commonly picked up than any other article of that metal that particular object at last became the standard emblem of good fortune and the supposed defense against bad luck. In Aubrey's "Miscellanies," written 200 years ago, the author mentions having seen the horseshoe nailed up in church, and he also says that "most of the houses in the west end of London have the horseshoe on the threshold." The horseshoe to possess virtue must have been found, not purchased or looked up. Admiral Nelson had great faith in the luck of the horseshoe, and one was nailed to the mast of his ship, the Victory.—London Chronicle.

MUTILATED CURRENCY.

Often Used in Attempts to Cheat the Treasury Department.

Many efforts are made to cheat Uncle Sam through the redemption division of the treasury department, which division has to do with redeeming partly destroyed government currency.

Once a man in a western state sent in half of a ten dollar bill, accompanied by an affidavit to the effect that while on a spree he had used the other half to light a cigar. The half he forwarded was nicely charred along the inner edge, and the story would have been accepted by treasury officials had it not been that within twenty-four hours there was received from a bank in the same state the other half of the note.

The theory of treasury officials was that while more or less intoxicated the man had struggled for possession of the bill with some one who had wrested half of it from him; that the despoiler had turned the half into the bank and received five dollars for it; that the intoxicated man, recovering his senses, had found the other half in his pocket and, not wishing to lose his money, had conceived the plan of singeing the edge of the note and claiming that the other half had been destroyed. So he committed perjury in an attempt to rob the government of $5.

A man in Cleveland sent an affidavit to the treasury department, accompanying the singed half of two twenty-dollar bills and one ten-dollar bill. This affidavit was typewritten and in perfect form. It set forth that the deponent was a commercial traveler; that after returning from a journey he had been cleaning out his traveling bag when inadvertently he had thrown into the fire an envelope containing $50 in bills; that in accordance with section so and so he would like to have the money restored to him, etc.

The clerk who brought this document to the officials commented on its lucidity and completeness, but to one of these the story seemed unnatural, and he ordered that the claim be held up for awhile.

Twenty-four hours later a big shipment of mutilated currency came from a subtreasury in the west. The official who had ordered the claim held up asked whether there were any half notes in this shipment. In four or five minutes a clerk brought him the missing halves of the bills the Cleveland man had sent in.

The attempt to defraud was plain. The matter was at once put into the hands of the secret service division, and a man was sent west to investigate. The man who had made the affidavit confessed at once. He had cut the bills in halves and for one-half of them obtained $25. The other half he singed and attached to his affidavit. The gross profit of the swindle could not have been more than $25, and for that trifling sum the man forfeited his liberty for a year and a half.—Washington Star.

Calais and Its Lighthouse.

Calais is rather an untidy place for a French town. The Place d'Armes, where the tower of the Hotel de Ville has remained since the fifteenth century, is the center spot. Here Calais meets its friends and has its cafe noir. In the square, towering out of the roofs of surrounding houses and dwarfing them, is the old watchtower. Since 1848 it has been superseded as a lighthouse by the magnificent one at present in use. Never shall I forget the effect of this lighthouse as I stood under it that night. The revolving spokes of light cast away into filmy space in all directions, looked like the ribs of a huge umbrella being turned by the white handle, which was the lighthouse tower. So tall is this that its revolving light can be seen from a distance of twenty miles at sea.—Wide World.

Helping Him Along.

"What is all this straw doing in the roadway? Somebody sick?" asked the man passing.

"Shhh!" said the man at the gate, holding up a warning finger. "There's a young man calling on my daughter [illegible] who has been coming to see her for six years. He's very easily frightened. We hope he's going to propose tonight, and we are taking every precaution against his being startled!"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Barefoot Burglar.

"Have you seen the barefoot burglar?" asks the Florida Times-Union. We have. We caught her in the act yesterday morning, the three-year-old [illegible] as she stole up to our bed, [illegible], shook her tousled head and said, "If you don't get up, dad, you won't get any bre'fas'."—Allentown [illegible] Democrat.

Unselfish.

Mrs. Backbay—Why are you leaving us, Bridget? Boston Cook—Me reasons are philanthropic. I want to give some wan else a chancet at the joys of living with yez.—Harper's Bazar.

A Family Jar.

Neighbor—What is all that row? Willie—Ma's canning fruit, and pa's a food inspector, and he's trying to tell her how she ought to do it.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

According to Rules.

"Why, you absent-minded man, are you starting out with an umbrella on such a shiny day?"

"I am bound for the art gallery."

"But you cannot exhibit an umbrella!"

"Of course not, but a notice on the catalogue says that one must leave his cane or umbrella outside before he can enter."

Secret Cameras.

A number of secret cameras have been seen at the Royal Photographic Society's exhibition at Prince's Skating Club, London. One resembles a pair of field-glasses. While the photographer is apparently looking at a distant view he is in reality snapping the unsuspecting person at his side.

A Consolation Prize.

He—The president of our society never will let me have the floor.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

Thus advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of this city of 21,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

ORIENTAL RUGS.

Made to Resemble the Antiques by Chemical Washings.

The United States buys annually many thousand dollars' worth of what are known to the profession as washed rugs. Brightly colored oriental rugs sometimes are washed with a solution of chloride of lime, a treatment which partly bleaches the colors and imparts a soft appearance to the rug.

This chemical treatment is a process of washing which produces the effect of age and a peculiar sheen to the surface, which is pointed out by the unscrupulous dealer as a proof of superior quality. The fact is that the process of washing as described invariably weakens and in some instances destroys the materials of the rug.

The progressive effect of the chemicals on the materials in the rug is this: The chlorine gas contained in the chloride of lime attracts oxygen and moisture from the air, by which muriatic acid is formed. This eats away the vitals of the rug. Sooner or later the wool and cotton in the rug become brittle and thus weaken the warp and deteriorate the wool.

When this deterioration is complete the pile of the rug may be swept away by the ordinary process of sweeping, and the warp, which is the foundation of the rug, becomes so weak that holes appear here and there, and soon the rug is worthless.

It not seldom happens that a Persian rug is too staring in some bright hue, perhaps red, and is not salable. The unscrupulous dealer will subject the rug to a series of washings in chemically prepared water. In this way he turns out a rug possessing a soft antique sheen that is truly captivating and finds a ready purchaser at an advanced price.

One Thing He Could Not Have.

Although there was no sort of toy which could be bought and for which Harold had expressed a desire that was not in his possession, he still had his unsatisfied longings. "I know what I wish I was, mother," he said one day when his own big brother had gone away and the little boy across the street was ill.

"Yes, dear," said his mother. "Perhaps you can be it, Harold; mother will help you. Is it to play soldier?"

"No, indeed!" said Harold scornfully. "I just wish I was two little dogs, so I could play together."—Youth's Companion.

Bouncing Betsey.

There is an old fashioned flower called "Bouncing Betsey," which every one should love for one trait. We have noticed that it grows on all neglected graves, as if trying to cover up the fact that some one who once lived is forgotten. It may also be found in corners of old fashioned gardens, where it grows and blooms and protests against being pushed out entirely. There are some dear old fashioned people who suggest "Bouncing Betsey."

Her Latest Luxury.

"Young man," said the heavy father, "do you understand the style in which my daughter has been accustomed to live? She has always had every luxury she wanted." "And now I'm the luxury she wants," murmured the suitor.—London Globe.

Time's Changes.

"Before we were married you said you'd lay down your life for me," she sobbed.

"I know it," he returned solemnly, "but this confounded flat is so tiny there's no place to lay anything down."—Harper's Bazar.

HIS ALIBI.

It Cleared the Accused, but Furnished an Odd Sequel.

A highly respectable gentleman arrived at York one evening with luggage and dined well, went to bed early, rose in good time and had a substantial breakfast. After this meal he casually asked the landlord if there was anything of special interest in York. "The assizes are on, but I do not know if there is anything particularly interesting in the list," was the response.

"Thanks," drawled the stranger. "I'll look in if I happen to pass the court and see."

He did look in and heard a follower of Dick Turpin in the dock, charged with highway robbery, pleading his innocence vehemently to a stolid judge and jury, who, with firm faces, did not look as if they placed much credence in the prisoner's profession of innocence. Suddenly the prisoner caught sight of the stranger, who had strolled in from the hotel out of curiosity.

"Here, thank God, is some one who can prove my innocence!" cried the prisoner, pointing to the stranger, who was aghast at becoming the center of interest so unexpectedly.

He seemed astonished and shook his head.

"Oh, yes," cried the accused; "just think! You were at Dover—a long way from here. You came out of the Ship hotel, and I took your luggage in a wheelbarrow to the Calais packet at the pier. That was the day I am supposed to have committed the crime up here."

The stranger seemed bewildered. The judge, struck with the tragic earnestness of the prisoner, questioned the stranger, but the latter could not assist him much.

"Have you any notebooks," asked the judge—"any memorandum of your movements on that day?"

"I am a merchant," replied the stranger, "connected with an old established firm of bankers in London. I travel a lot and of course enter everything in my books. Here are my keys if the court cares to send to my hotel and bring here the books out of my case. I can easily settle the point."

The books were fetched. The gentleman had been in Dover that day and had left by the Calais packet. This was sufficient for the judge and jury. The prisoner was acquitted.

Comic sequel: Both the "banker from London" and the highwayman were placed in the same dock shortly afterward charged with daring burglaries in the neighborhood.—Harry Furniss in London Standard.

The Usher Woke Up.

At a certain county court the judge is in his private capacity a kind hearted man. The usher of the court is aged—very aged—but as he had been a faithful servant for many years he was retained in that capacity. One morning he fell asleep in court and began to snore. The noise he made naturally disturbed court proceedings, but the judge displayed great tact in dealing with the matter.

"Usher Jones," he called out loudly, "some one is snoring."

The usher woke up. He jumped to his feet and glared ferociously round.

"Silence!" he roared. "There must be no snoring in court!"—Exchange.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue
His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to ea[illegible] one of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of diseases. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

We don't know what Parliament will do with the new immigration bill, but there is some encouragement in the fact that the lawmakers are beginning to realize that it is about time to bar out the cargoes of ignorance and crime which are brought to this country every year from Southern Europe and Asia.

OUTFLOW IS LARGE

During the ten years ending June, 1911, Canada received 1,550,000 immigrants. During the same period Canada's native-born population increased 937,867. No doubt some of the native-born left Canada during the ten years, but the figures quoted are the net gain. But our total increase in population was 1,835,328. Deducting the increase in native-born, we have 887,461 as the net increase from immigration. But there is a discrepancy here of 662,539 persons, who evidently came to the country and then disappeared. Gvidently the outflow of our immigrants must be of rather large propertions.

Quit Sniffling, Stop Sneezing, Cure Your Cold Now!

Thousands of Cases Prove the Quickest Cure is Catarrhozone.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size 25c. and 50c., all druggist and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE ASIATIC QUESTION

The Asiatic question is rapidly becoming acute both in Asia and America. The American ministers recent statement that Japanese low-priced labour coming into the Pacific coast will, if not checked, yet prove the ruin of American labour has intensified the feeling. In the Canadian House of Commons, Mr. Burnham, M.P., has given notice of a resolution calling on parliament to recognise the necessity not only of checking undue immigration of low-priced Asiatic labour, but of the products of low-priced Asiatic labour made or raised at home, by putting on a tariff-duty to protect the rate of wages of the Canadian working-workingman. Foreign goods produced by cheap labour are even more dangerous to Canadian labour than immigration.

About Sneezing.

Hospital nurses when assisting at a delicate operation have their own way of suppressing a cough or a sneeze. The operator's attention must not be distracted for a moment. Coughs and sneezes, too, spread germs on surfaces carefully rendered antiseptic. So every nurse soon learns to press her finger hard on the upper lip immediately below the nose when she feels a cough or a sneeze coming on. A pressure in the neighborhood of the ear, too, or a hard pressure on the roof of the mouth will nip a cough in the bud. And the will has great power to control a cough or a sneeze.

There was a French surgeon who used to say whenever he entered the wards of the hospital, "The first patient who coughs gets no food today." This method was usually successful.—Chicago News.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

PROTESTANTISM IN ROME.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—You will confer a favor on a large number of your Protestant readers if you will publish the following, taken from the Christian Guardian:

"The Rev. B. M. Tipple, pastor of the American Methodist Church in Rome, Italy has bought about six acres of land at the southern end of the historic hill of Monte Mario, and it is proposed to erect on this site a great modern college. Why is it that Methodist are such restless individuals. Why can't they leave Italy alone? The poor Pope has enough to trouble him without having these restless theological iconoclasts disturbing his flock with their strange teaching that a man's enlightened conscience has greater authority than the Church. The prisoner of the Vatican must often sigh for the good old days when such heretics could have been attended to in short order."

Frank R. Blewett.

THE POST OFFICE SITE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The question exciting public attention at the present moment is the removal of the Post Office from Hunter and Water streets to George and Sherbrooke streets. It seems to me this whole question could be settled by a compromise.

In the first place, the reason generally given for the removal is because of the fact that the present Post Office is not large enough to accommodate the parcel post service. Now, this could be remedied very readily by doing what they do in the city of Montreal, in Toronto, and in other places, viz., they have the sorting done in the second, third, and in Montreal the fourth storeys. The mail matter is sent up in chutes and sorted there quietly, and returned to the first floor. The present post office, if it were made into a three storey building, would have ample accommodation for the requirements of Peterborough for the next generation.

Now, it is a well known fact that the present location of the Post Office is satisfactory to Wards Two, Three Four and Five, and also to a considerable portion of the people living in Ward One, and if the post office is moved to Sherbrooke street about four-fifths of the people will have a grievance, which should not be the case.

The alternative proposition I would suggest is that the Government go on with the building of the Customs House, Inland Revenue Department, and Trent Valley Department, and also include the Post Office, but allow the present post office to remain where it is. In this way it could be used as an auxiliary to the main post office on the corner of Sherbrooke and George streets. It would be continued for the convenience of a large portion of the people of Peterborough, and there is no reason why Peterborough should not have two post offices, as well as other cities. Take, for instance, Niagara Falls, with a population of only 10,000, with three post offices. Millbrook used to have two, and you will find other cities and towns in the various parts of the Dominion, with two or more post offices. Why should not the same custom prevail in Peterborough? If the post office is left where it is the people living in Wards, Two, Three, Four and Five, could register their letters, mail their parcels, buy their stamps, and do their business generally, as in the past, and no one would have any real grievance.

There is no reason why we should not be treated as others have been, and are treated now, and I believe this is a fair proposition, and one that might well be considered by the Dominion Government.

Respectfully yours,

Centre Ward Ratepayer.

sufficiently patrolled, and very often even on the main streets, more men are necessary to handle properly the crowds of people there.

I am further of the opinion that very soon we should have a police matron; in fact I favour her appointment forthwith either permanently or as occasion may require, because though possibly not often needed, if needed at all, she is an absolute necessity.

I would suggest that she might or could do some probation work in addition.

Mr. Dumble agreed with Judge Huycke's report. The mother's of children hear stories of immorality, but most of these are misrepresented. He referred to the splendid work done for fallen girls by the Salvation Army in Toronto.

Mayor Buller congratulated Judge Huycke on his report against a policewoman. He would support a police matron provided she were under command of the Chief of Police and not under order of the Women's Council. He advocated an increase in the salaries of the police force, but was against employing any more policemen this year. The taxation rate is now 25 mills and that is all the city can stand.

Mr. Dumble advocated an increase in the force.

The Mayor agreed with supporting the two members of the local force who are now invalids, but said, "not another policeman should be put on this year."

Judge Huycke strongly recommended putting four more policemen on the force.

Mr. Dumble moved that two more policemen be added, seconded by Judge Huycke.

A vote of sympathy to Sergt. Adams and P.C. McGinty over their illness was passed.

Chief Thompson presented a detailed and instructive report, covered, in advance in the papers last night.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS QUICKLY CURED HIS KIDNEY DISEASE.

How Hudson Marchbank, After Suffering for Five Years, Found Quick Relief and Permanent Cure in the Greatest of Canadian Remedies.

Marchbank, King's County, N.B., Feb. 20.—(Special).—After suffering for five years from kidney disease, brought on by strain, Hudson Marchbank, Esq., the well known farmer of this place, is again a strong, healthy man, and another grand cure for Dodd's Kidney Pills has been put on record. In an interview, Mr. Marchbank says:

"About five years ago I hurt my back from lifting, and it developed into kidney disease. My back pained me all the time, and I was very much troubled with headaches. My appetite was fitful: I had a bitter taste in my mouth in the mornings; I perspired freely and my perspiration had a disagreeable odor.

"I used liniments and plasters, but they did not do me any good, and as there were other symptoms that my kidneys were affected, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes, my back was completely cured, and my kidneys have not troubled me since."

When Mr. Marchbank decided that his kidneys were the cause of his troubles, the rest was easy. Almost any of his neighbors could tell him that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys.

OLD SCHOOL DOCTORS

Ignorance of Physicians of the Eighteenth Century.

TORTURE FOR THE PATIENTS.

Every Ailment Beyond Diagnosis Was Classed as a Fever, and Pills, Plasters, Burning and Bleeding Were the Regulation Remedies.

The proverb "The remedy is worse than the disease" must have been coined in the eighteenth century, when physicians treated their patients with a violence that bordered on assault and battery. It was held that sickness was some kind of a demon that must be overcome by pills, plasters, bleeding and burning, and if the patient incidentally got the full effects of the torture and died, so much the worse for him. Air and water were considered the most dangerous things for a sick person to have, and his misguided demand for them was interpreted as a sign that he should have still less. The windows were shut and the curtains of the four poster tightly drawn around the recumbent unfortunate gasping for breath. If he burned with fever the blankets were piled on him. A desire for water meant that he could have none, while a lack of appetite proved that he ought to be stuffed with food. A bath was positively unthinkable.

The deadly results of breathing "night air" were accentuated by medical writers, says S. G. Tallentyre in the Cornhill Magazine. All air was bad, but the night quality often proved fatal to "young ladies of beauty, fortune and great merit" and to "young gentlemen of parts and breeding." One bold medico recommended that a bedchamber should be ventilated—in the daytime. Another dared to suggest that consumptives might benefit from sleeping in a pure atmosphere. The rule for ablutions was "hands often, feet seldom, head never," but a physician far in advance of his age surmised that invalids might bathe their feet in warm water once a week and under extraordinary circumstances take a warm bath once a month.

Overeating and drinking caused many of the diseases of the upper classes. Montesquieu said that dinner killed one half of the Parisians and supper the other half. Everywhere it was the custom to pile the table with roast beef, mutton, capons, boars' heads, pasties, creams, stuffings and mincemeats. A fearful repast of twelve indigestible courses was brought on all together, so that the diners knew what was expected of them. A large breakfast of small beer and meats preceded the gigantic midday meal, when people enjoyed a Gargantuan gorge for three hours and spent two more in Falstaffian potations. After this the gentlemen joined the women for a dish of tea in the drawing room, and it was not long before the whole party of human anacondas returned to the dining room for a supper on the cold remnants of the dinner. Amid this orgy of gluttony Walpole and Voltaire were distinguished for an abstinence that prolonged their lives.

Heavy drinking was universal and rarely reprimanded by medical men, as by Dr. Tronchin. One Dr. Cheyne advised women not to take a whole bottle a day. Another authority wrote a popular treatise in which the best means of attaining longevity was stated to be a bottle of wine at dinner and three glasses after. Those who followed such advice were in danger of being dubbed temperance cranks. A story is told of the celebrated and convivial Dr. Garth, who was tipping bumpers at the Kit-Kat club when reminded that his patients needed attention. "'Tis no matter," said Garth, already half seas over, "if I see them or not. Nine have such bad constitutions that all the doctors in the world can't save them, and the other six have such good that all the doctors in the world can't kill them."

A physician named Brown became the pet of fashionable women by always prescribing pleasant remedies, "a glass of wine in the forenoon from time to time," "several glasses of port or punch after dinner till some enlivening effect is perceived from them." Together with inordinate quantities of liquor and food, Dr. Brown recommended to his male patients the company of "delightful young women." One of the natural consequences of such an agreeable regimen was the gout, for which eighteenth century high livers took seas of liquid medicines, mountains of pills and bins of powders.

Any disease beyond diagnosis was put down as "a fever." Whether typhus or typhoid, scarlet or gastric, noncontagious or violently infectious, anything which caused a rise in temperature was sufficiently described by the term fever. Smallpox, scurvy, spotted and jail fever were maladies distinctive of the age. Disinfection and first aid to natures were never dreamed of, while the patient was dosed with horrible drafts and nauseating compounds and bled on every possible occasion. Louis XIV. was bled nine times for scarlet fever. Bleeding killed the Duchess of Tremouille and her husband. When a mob attacked the Duke of Bedford's house in 1765 the doctors remedied the outrage by bleeding the duchess next morning. A young man who fell against a marble table and cut his head open was treated by having a few pints of extra blood drawn from his veins by an expert surgeon. Blistering was esteemed next to bleeding. A fashionable remedy for consumption was a mash of raw snails, shells and all, taken from a spoon.

Spring Hues Motif for New Fabrics

By Madge Marvel

A STROLL into the shops, where the new silks and cottons are daily appearing in ever increasing quantity, makes it seem as if the looms of the the world had been set up in the open beneath blue skies and in the midst of flowering fields. There is a delightful freshness and joyousness about the groundwork and the designs which bespeak an ideal intimacy with nature in her most charming mood.

A crepe de chine, which holds the blue of skies when the spring rain threatens, is strewn with little nosegays of roses, red and yellow, with a blossom, a bud and a few leaves set on a short stem and repeated at decorous spaces.

A brown silk, the color of the fresh earth when the first spade is turned for the new garden, has tiny yellow primroses rioting over its surface. Daffodils multiply their golden images with the suggestion of tender leaves on a background of taffeta, which is neither gray nor green.

Nearly all the silken fabrics are dotted with posies in garlands or clusters. Blossoms spring forth from the snowy field of mulles and dimities, muslins and voiles.

Everything is flowered. Everything is gay. There is no sombreness in evidence. Even the black materials have the sheen and weave which completely offset all idea of gloom.

It is a season reminiscent of the frocks associated with la Pompadour and Dolly Varden.

Taffeta is the silk pre-eminent. And why not accept that fact and shut our ears when the cry goes up that it is only a passing fancy? It is lovely, anyway. It comes in the most agreeable quality, and in exquisite shades, and is changeable or figured, or resplendent in the Roman stripes of former days. As for crepe de chine, it is a glorious fabric glorified. It is more popular than ever if one can make such favor more emphatic. It is be-sprigged with flowers and foliage.

The two-toned taffetas come in widths up to 48 inches, and in all the street shades, and will be much used for the semi-tailored suits as well as for quaint shirred wraps and for the many ruffled gowns, which are coming each day more and more prominent as style standards.

Then there is the spring duvetyne, which is quite as well thought of as was the heavier variety of the winter. And the colors are wonderful.

There is also a new fabric called golfine, which is a cotton version of corduroy, and the most appealing fabric. It never musses or creases. This is one of the claims made for it.

HER GREATEST ADMIRER :: :: By Michelson

HE didn't ogle her from the "front" nor send around flowers, nor write silly notes that reached her when she was making up in that shabby dressing room. Yet he is her greatest admirer.

No applause from a crowded house, no adoring signals or symbols, no extravagances of fragrant tribute could mean to her what the look in his eyes mean when she finds them watching her. For he is HER BOY.

To him she is the supreme flower of creation, the greatest wonder of beauty ever touched by the wand of romance. All the tawdry splendors of the stage are but a setting to her tender loveliness.

To her he is the one sweetest REAL joy in the world—more real than her ambitions, closer than any other tie. When HE tells her he loves her she KNOWS.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Portent of "Backache" Not Always Fearsome

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

DR. HIRSHBERG

WHAT would the little mothers of home-made medicine do if it were not for "headache," "toothache" and "backache"?

So long has the eternally educated, yet unsophisticated, civilized public read pamphlets published by men with something to sell, which forever associate a pain in the back with disease, that until very recently some doctors even believed it.

By sheer ensemble repetition and a chorus, Americans with and without college knowledge can convince themselves of the truth of the most arrant nonsense. So imbued is your best friend with the fact that a backache is a grave menace to his very vitals that, when you show him this denial, he will promptly dismiss it from his mind as an obtrusive, unwelcome visitation.

Lumbago is a substitution product, something just as bad as backache. Under its sonorous, trisyllabic name march, for the most part, the same mild maladies as boldly cloud the physical horizon beneath the banal "backache."

Odd news from Aix I bring, to wit, that where you feel backache there you will not feel or find the kidneys.

Backaches and lumbago are usually in the small of your back, which is on a direct line from the pit of your stomach. Like the proverbial bouncing flea which you are about to cover with your finger, the backache is exactly not where your kidneys are. Your kidneys are not below the ribs, but well up between the ends of your shoulder blades.

It is difficult to convince most people that serious trouble in the kidney hardly ever asserts itself with pain. Even if pain did occur it could not be so far below the kidneys as the universal belief maintains.

> Dreary east winds howling o'er us,
> Clay-lands knee-deep spread before us;
> Mire and ice and snow and sleet;
> Aching backs and frozen feet.

Thus Charles Kingsley emphasizes the fact that backaches are more often due to strain, fatigue, exposure and excesses than from any precisely existential, real disease.

Answers to Health Questions

T. L. H.—Give me a safe lotion to remove warts.

Sublimed sulphur	120 grains
Glycerine	5 fluid drams
Acetic acid	1 fluid dram

Apply repeatedly to each wart, continuing the treatment for several days. The warts dry up and then drop off.

P. B., Philadelphia—I have two occupations, one from 8 to 6 in the afternoons, and another, entirely different, from 8 to 12 at night. I have averaged only six hours a night sleep for 10 years. Will this harm me? I never drink or smoke and am well.

Work itself never killed any one, despite delusions to the contrary. If your inheritance and your tissues are sound, there is no reason why you should not continue for 40 years more in the same way.

* * *

C. E. P.—I have had indigestion for two years and have had many different doctors without benefit. Will you advise me?

If you will tell me your exact symptoms, perhaps you can be helped. "Indigestion" does not mean anything. It is a loose term like "animal" or "vegetable." No careful doctor uses such a term.

MRS. F. S.—My baby is 13 months old. When shall I wean him and give him bottles?

Do not give him any bottles, but wean him now. He is old enough. Have a set of cups, spoons, glasses and little things only for him. Keep them sterilized all the time. Feed him his milk, spinach, potatoes, butter and cereal gruel from them.

The Promise of Telepathy

By Mme. Margarete Matzenauer

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York

MME. MATZENAUER

I AM inclined to think that everybody nowadays believes in thought transference, and the more I experiment with this new found science the more I am convinced that one of these days the telegraph and the telephone will be thrown on the junk pile and we will communicate with our friends all over the world by what we commonly call mental telepathy.

It was only a few years ago that wireless telegraphy was believed to be a thing quite impracticable, and the majority of people didn't even believe it possible. They looked on the wireless as another Keely motor. But since the Titanic disaster, and the other practical midocean demonstrations, every one knows of the unlimited possibilities of the wireless.

Mental telepathy is, in a way, quite like wireless telegraphy. It is merely the tuning of the transmitting and receiving minds to the same key as the telegraph instruments are tuned. Yet a great many people will shake their heads and say such communication is impossible. They say this because they do not think. The mind of man is the most wonderful thing in all creation. Think of the mind that evolved the wireless instruments which, when in tune, will transmit messages thousands of miles, and will cause one instrument on the Labrador coast to vibrate in tune with a similar instrument in a seacoast town in Ireland.

Every one who has given telepathy much thought has come across any number of instances of telepathetic communication. These communications may have been accidental, or the facts [illegible].

I am giving much of my time to telepathic experiments. Last summer I communicated with my husband by telepathy when we were 200 miles apart. To be absolutely certain, both of us recorded our questions and answers with friends as witnesses. Two days later, when we all met, every one seemed astonished when it was found that in every little detail the thought transference was identical as recorded.

I sincerely hope that all my friends who read this will communicate with me if they have had any such phenomenon. By getting all such data together we may be able to arrive at some definite basis for universal telepathy.

It may seem odd to some that a grand opera contralto should be interested in telepathy, but I have always been very sensitive to the mental attitude of the audiences I sung to, for you know there are audiences that help a performance, and there are others that wreck the best laid plans of the impresario. The greatest thing in the world today is the power of our thoughts, and the sooner we all realize that thoughts are things, the better for us all.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure, as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of Peter with growing interest.

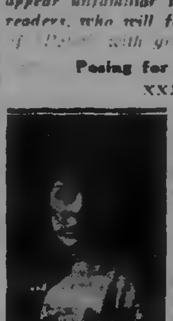
XXXI



LEONA DALRYMPLE

"I'M going to have my picture taken," announced Mary at breakfast.

I nodded sympathetic accord.

"That's great," I said. "You haven't had any really good pictures taken for some time."

"Not since the flash-light on our wedding night," said Mary. "And that really wasn't so terribly good, for the eyes were just like little black shiny beads."

Women love to be photographed, I take it. I wonder what difference it would make in a directory of photographers if a law were passed limiting pictorial service of this sort to men. Ned Cary says that all the camera men in the world would fail for lack of patronage.

Mary was greatly delighted and excited at the idea of having some new pictures, and, dutifully enough, I went with her.

She was an unconscionable while preparing, and the photographer had begun to whistle plaintively and drum upon the camera with his finger tips when at last she appeared.

I gasped. Mary was more elaborately "made up" than the cheapest actress in the cheapest vaudeville house in the universe. The lids of her eyes were heavily blued, her under lids were penciled, there were long dark lines at the corners of her eyes, her mouth was a hard sophisticated Cupid's bow, and her face an indescribable melee of white and scarlet. It may have been very fascinating with the softening glare of footlights to help—but there in the tense white light of the studio—it was most horrible. The photographer looked thunderstruck.

"Great Scott, Mary," I exclaimed, "why in the world did you don all the war paint?"

"Well," said she, looking very arch, and, incidentally, horribly sophisticated through her darkened lids, "I've been told that all great actresses make up dreadfully (dreadfully, incidentally, was right, though I deplore the frequency with which Mary draws upon the words "terribly, dreadfully and awfully" in her conversation) to have their pictures taken. It's really the only way," she explained brightly, "that one can obtain a really good picture. For instance, Peter, my brows and lashes are brown, and to get a really effective picture—they must be darkened."

Now Marshall, the photographer, has had considerable photographical experience with actresses. He sighed.

"If you want to have your picture taken that way," said he with delicate reference to the war paint, "I'll do it, of course—but——"

He looked appealingly at me, for Mary had stiffened.

"You see," he explained civilly, "these theatrical women come in here loaded up with paint. But—it isn't because of it they get a good picture—it's in spite of it. Every bit of it has eventually to be blocked out of the negative before we can print the picture."

"You mean the darkened lids and all?" demanded Mary coldly.

"Yes," said the photographer. "The proof of a picture, taken just as you are now would horrify you inexpressibly."

Mary rustled indignantly away and washed her face.

"The whole truth of the matter, Mr. Hunt," confided the photographer, wheeling great white screens about cunningly to dispose the light, "is that most women are not looking for an actual likeness. They want a good picture, and that's a vastly different thing. If it flatters—if the pose is effective—that, in their viewpoint, is an excellent picture.

"I've seen women carry off pictures that were utterly unlike them, purely because they flattered. It's what they want to be like. The really artistic picture shows the age-line for line—development, character, all the gains a man may have made at the expense of smoothness of skin. But a woman doesn't want that sort of picture. She wants every character line erased, no matter what a smooth, beautiful, unfaithful, characterless likeness results."

◆ ◆ Advice to Girls ◆ ◆

By Annie Laurie

SO HE'S lonely, is he—your boss? His wife is away so much—and she isn't very nice to him when she's at home?

No, he's never told you so in so many words—he wouldn't, of course, but you can tell by the way he speaks. Why, twice last week dinner wasn't ready for him when he got home and he was so tired and discouraged and she wanted to talk about the bills, too?

You're so sorry for him—he seems such a sweet disposition—would it be any harm for you to go out to luncheon with him once in a while and to try to show him that you think a great deal of him anyway? He's a great deal older than you, of course.

Well now, little girl, don't waste too much sympathy on the boss. He can take care of himself a whole lot better than you can take care of him, and ten chances to one his wife understands him a thousand times better than you do.

He's married—that's enough for you to know—quite enough to keep away from him except when you're with him on business. Homes for the friendless are full of working women who have been sorry for the boss and tried to comfort him because his wife didn't understand him.

You don't understand him either. And if I were you I shouldn't try.

These things all begin so easily—the dreadful tragedies of life. A smile, a bunch of violets, a quiet little luncheon somewhere, and then misery and disgrace.

Keep away from the boss who is "misunderstood" at home, little girl, or somebody will be misunderstanding you, the first thing you know.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her care this office.

Sayings of Children

Freddie—Ma, what is the baby's name?

Ma—The baby hasn't any name.

Freddie—Then how did he know he belonged here?

Mamma (to Tommy)—I am sorry you and your sister quarrelled over that orange, and that James had to interfere. Whose part did James take?

Tommy—Whose part? He took the whole orange.

Bobbie had been studying his grandfather's wrinkled face for a long time.

"Well Bob," said the old gentleman, "do you like my face?"

"Yes, grandpa," said Bobbie, "it's an awfully nice face. But why don't you have it ironed?"

Ruth had been looking forward eagerly to her birthday with very exaggerated ideas of how large and old and changed she would be when 8 years old. She had expected to sit on a common chair at the table, work instead of play, be as large as Sister Mary, and give her clothes to some smaller child, and be fitted out with new. The eventful morning arrived, and, after due deliberation, she said earnestly:

"I feel as big as Mary, but I can wear my own clothes yet."

Tommie—Auntie, mamma bought me a pair of gloves today.

Auntie—Did she, Tommie? What are they, kids?

Tommie—No, indeed; they're men's.

Freddie—It's always in damp places where mushrooms grow, isn't it, papa?

Papa—Yes, my boy.

"Is that the reason they look like umbrellas, papa?"

Margery—Does your papa read fairy tales to you like my papa?

Jennie—Yes. He read a fairy tale from a Jungle Book.

Margery—That's not a fairy tale. That's about animals. It's an animal's tail.

Four-year-old Robbie ran breathlessly into the house just as the sound of bagpipes was heard coming up the street.

"Oh, mamma!" he said, "there's a man out here with a dead pig that sings, come quick!"

A little 4-year-old occupied an upper berth in the sleeping car. Awakening once in the middle of the night, his mother asked him if he knew where he was. "Course I do," he replied. "I'm in the top drawer."

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

DANNY DUCK poked his head in the henhouse one morning and shouted, "Hurry up, Charlie! We are going coasting."

Charlie Chick hurried out as fast as he could and found the Duck children coasting down a piece of ice on a plate which they used for a sled.

"What are those funny things you have on your ears?" asked Charlie of the Duck children.

"Those are to keep our ears from freezing," answered Danny.

"I didn't know ducks and chickens had ears," answered Charlie Chick. "I thought only dogs and horses and human beings had ears."

"Well," replied Danny. "Fowls and fishes belong to the air and to the water. They have no ears—that is, ears that stick out. Things or animals belonging to the earth, like rabbits, horses and people, have ears sticking out."

"I never thought of that," said Charlie, as he got on the sled behind the Duck children. Down the hill they went like the wind and when they were half way down they struck a stone. "Bump!"

Off fell the Duck children and down the hill they went, while Charlie got on his feet and stood on the side of the hill.

The Duck children came back laughing and Charlie said:

"I am glad I had my rubbers on, for I did not slip."

"Here comes Ducky Daddle!" shouted Danny. "Let's put him on the sled and spin him round and round."

"Hello! fellows," said Ducky Daddle. "Let me take a spin on your sled."

"Get on," answered the Duck children. Ducky sat down in the middle of the plate and tried to hold on with his wings.

Dicky Duck pushed him so hard that Dicky lost his balance and went sprawling down the hill, while Charlie and Danny shouted after them. Danny started down the hill, but slipped. Charlie scampered down after his companions, his rubbers keeping him from slipping.

"Are you hurt?" asked Charlie.

"I'm killed!" exclaimed Ducky Daddle, and they all began to laugh.

THE ARTIST'S IDOL.

She Didn't Know Anything About Music; She Only Loved It.

The incident happened upon one of the great ocean liners during an autumn trip when a famous violinist was among the passengers. At first he firmly refused to play, but was finally persuaded, and upon the appointed evening the salon was crowded with eager passengers.

It was a most enthusiastic audience, intelligent, sympathetic and appreciative, yet as the evening wore on people began to notice that the violinist's glance went always in one direction, and after a time others followed it.

They saw a plain little woman, plainly dressed, with no marks of wealth or culture. But she was looking at the master with shining eyes, her face wet with tears, unmindful of everything except the magic of his violin. When the program was ended, pushing his way through the people who would have detained him, the musician went straight to the little shabby figure.

"Madame, I congratulate you—you are so great artist!" he cried.

She looked up at him almost in alarm.

"I—oh—I cannot play a note," she stammered. "I don't know anything about music. I only—love it."

The violinist shook his big shaggy head impatiently.

"Is it not what I say? You have so artist soul—so artist to listen. What good to play to so deaf—like so rest?" with a disparaging gesture toward the crowded room. "It is to so one wis so heart to listen sat we masters play."
—Youth's Companion.

To an enormous extent the bed of the ocean is covered with lava and pumice stone. Still more remarkable is it to find the floor of the ocean covered in many parts with the dust of meteorites. These bodies whirl through space like miniature comets and are for the most part broken into innumerable fragments. We are all familiar with these heavenly visitants as shooting stars, but it has been only lately discovered that this cosmic dust forms layers at the bottom of the deepest seas. Between Honolulu and Tahiti, at a depth of 2,350 fathoms—over two miles and a half—a vast layer of this material exists. Falling upon land, this impalpable dust is indistinguishable; but, accumulating for centuries in the sea depths, it tells a wonderful story of the continuous bombardment of this planet by cometary bodies.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

The Popular Drama.

Manager—We've got a great play here.

Backer—But it has no comedy in it.

Manager—The actors will insert that.

Backer—There's no action.

Manager—I've got a few dandy mechanical surprises to put in.

Backer—What has the author furnished, then?

Manager—Everything else except for required indecency. I'll have to hire an expert on that.—Cleveland Leader.

The Old "Chanticler."

Ethelyn—Oh, grandmamma, Jack and I were to see the new play last night! All the players were dressed to represent barnyard fowls.

Grandmamma—Why, that's nothing. The summer before I was married I had a duck suit, a leghorn hat trimmed with canary ribbon, and every one said your grandfather was the biggest quack in town.—Judge.

Dancing Mice of China.

Scientific study of the so called "dancing mice" seems to indicate that the breed was derived originally from the mating of individual mice which exhibited the strange impulse to dance. These mice were first bred in China. In that country today and also in Japan they are commonly kept in small cages, not for the sake of their dancing habit, but because they are extraordinarily agile and acrobatic. Such cages are usually provided with revolving wheels and other apparatus which the little rodents set in motion as they skip rapidly about. They are sometimes called "waltzing mice" because they not only run in circles, but frequently whirl about swiftly as if on a pivot. It is a very curious phenomenon, and there seems to be no certainty that it may not be due to a nervous complaint perpetuated by inheritance.

Our National Game.

"The raw American citizen," says Ellis Parker Butler in Success Magazine, "who takes his seat at a ball game for the first time feels as he would should he drop into the Metropolitan Opera House and find himself hearing Wagnerian opera from a seat in the midst of seasoned German opera goers. He hears a language that is new to him. The man at his right can tell more about the first baseman's peculiarities than he could tell about the manners of his own wife. The man at his left has trouble remembering the blue collar he wears, but he can name every man in every club of both major leagues, tell the age of each, give the complete table of batting records offhand and recite, item by item, every feature of every game played on the home grounds during the last five years. That is why baseball is our national game. We love the game not because we are Chicagoans and the Chicago nine wins nor because we are Pittsburgers and the Pittsburg nine is winning, but because we are educated in baseball and like to see a good game played by the best men in their field that can be found in the world."

Her Father's Job.

The young daughter of a popular Chicago clergyman some time ago manifested a quick wit. Her father had gone on a brief holiday with a business parishioner and associate, and the talk of the children turned on the problem of which father needed the rare rest most sorely.

"Well, I think my father works the hardest," said little Miss Business, "and his work keeps him stirred up and anxious most of the time."

"Your father may work the hardest in one way," was little Miss Clergyman's answer, at once thoughtful and diplomatic, "but I think he gets more rest as he goes along. You see, he can let down a little evenings and Sundays, and if he gets cross and nervous nobody says anything. But my daddy has to be better than ever Sundays and evenings, because then everybody's taking notice and the whole lot of us children are around."—Chicago Record-Herald.

MacMahon's Epigram.

When Marshal MacMahon in the Crimean campaign took the Malakoff by storm and wrote his celebrated dispatch, "J'y suis; j'y reste" ("Here I am; here I stay"), these words made him famous all over the world. Yet his friends said that the worthy soldier had written them in the most matter of fact manner, with no thought of phrase making. The most surprised person over the success of this epigram was MacMahon himself.

IT WAS A FINE COD.

A Little Story of William M. Chase, the Portrait Painter.

Several years ago I had a studio at Hammersmith and was hurrying into London one morning to transact some business. Just as I swung around a corner occupied by a fishmonger's market my eye was attracted to a magnificent cod stretched out for exhibition on a clean slab of white marble. Whatever my mood for color was that morning, that fish completely fitted and filled it. I must paint it. I decided.

I called out the proprietor and told him what I wanted. I was a bachelor, I explained, and did not want to buy the big fish. I only wished the use of it as a model. Could I rent it?

"Ow, now, sir," he said, with true British stolidity. "Hi never rents my fish. You see, it's Saturday, too, sir. Hi must sell him today, sir."

However, I explained that I needed the fish for only a few hours, and directly we struck a bargain. If after two hours I still wished to keep the fish I should buy it. At the end of the stipulated time the boy came. I was not quite finished. "In a few minutes," I said; and when I looked up he was gone.

Shortly afterward the proprietor came, tiptoeing in and peeping over my shoulder. I could hear him softly sighing, and I said nervously, "In a few minutes now, in a few minutes."

"Don't 'urry, sir; don't 'urry," he urged. "She's gettin' on! Hi'll take my chances, sir!"

When the painting was finished he refused at first to accept any remuneration, but at length, with a muttered apology, he charged—a shilling! The painting was hung and shortly afterward purchased by the Corcoran Art gallery for a very substantial sum.

On my next trip to London I determined to call up my fishmonger, tell him of the good fortune that had attended the painting and tender him some fitting reward. To my great surprise he not only refused again any sort of fee, but evinced no surprise whatever at the figure the painting had brought, though the price paid represented several times over the investment of his shop.

"Ah, but it was a fine cod, sir!" he said, and his eyes glowed with pride. "Now, wasn't it?"—William M. Chase in Delineator.

Postponed.

"Did Mrs. Green read her paper at the literary club last week?"

"No. Her husband was too ill to write it for her, and we had to postpone it."—Detroit Free Press.

Her Father—Blanche, why doesn't Mr. Linger go home earlier?

Even the fishes of the sea have pictures on memory's wall. Experiments have been made with several fishes as to their faculties for remembering, but the most striking results have been obtained with the gray perch, which lives chiefly on small silvery hued sardines. Some of these were taken and colored red and were then put into the tank where the perch was with several silver colored sardines. Of course the normal sardines were at once seized and eaten, but it was not until hungry that the perch made a tentative meal of one of the red colored victims.

On recognizing the sardine flavor, however, he promptly demolished the remainder. Later the perch devoured the sardines irrespective of color, thus showing not only traces of a memory, but also the power to differentiate color.

Subsequently sardines colored red and blue were placed in the tank together with the silver ones. The same scene was repeated, the blue sardines not being attacked until the others were eaten and hunger compelled investigation of the newcomers. After this introduction the perch ate the sardines of all three types without any difficulty.

Some spines of the sea nettle were then fastened to the blue sardines. These were at once avoided by the perch, which promptly got out of the way of the newcomers. This showed traces of memory, as the results of contact with the sea nettle were shown and recognized.—Chicago Tribune.

Boiled Icing.

In making a boiled icing the secret of success lies in taking off exactly at the right moment. A better test than spinning a heavy thread is to drop some of the sirup into cold water and when it adheres to the bottom of glass when pulled up it must be taken off at once.

Not Filling.

Food for reflection is a poor substitute for a square meal.

Why He Waited.

The man who is anxiously watching the steeple jack at work 300 feet from the ground is approached by a passing acquaintance.

"Hello, Brown!" says the latter. "Are you still here? It's fully an hour ago that I saw you standing in the very same spot."

"That fellow up there gives me the cold shivers," says Brown. "He makes me feel weak in the knees."

"Going back to your office?" inquires the friend.

"I guess so," Brown reluctantly replies. "There doesn't seem to be much use in waiting any longer. I don't believe he is going to fall."

And he turned away with a lingering glance at the intrepid jack.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Recommendation.

A woman prominent as a social worker was in the city to engage a new girl the other day. She visited an employment agency which makes a specialty of finding places for country housemaids and was much pleased with one from the country.

"Why did you leave your last place?" asked the woman.

"I didn't have no last place," answered the girl, "because I ain't had no last place to leave, and I'm still working at it, being for myself that I've been working, and I'm sure I'm a good servant, and I can recommend myself to you, ma'am."—Exchange.

A QUAINT LITTLE COAT WITH A SHAPED BAND AT THE BOTTOM

The beauty of our new gowns and suits lies chiefly in line and material. Trimmings count for very little.

King's blue ratine — not the vivid color of some seasons ago, but a softer, more becoming shade that has come in this fall—is used in 7832. The sash is of black satin, and a narrow black silk braid is the only other trimming. The cut of the blouse and the long, flaring sleeve renders the costume distinctive.

To copy this design in size 16 it requires 5¾ yards of 36 inch material.

7831 is a smart little coat bringing out several characteristics of the grown-up fashions, among them the broad collar and revers and the band at the bottom, into which the body of the coat is slightly fulled.

Dull green duvetyn is the material with collar, cuffs and trimming bands of a figured silk crepe.

This coat may be made in size 10 with 2¾ yards of 36 inch material and ⅜ yard of contrasting silk.

No. 7833—sizes 16, 17 and 18.
No. 7831—sizes 4 to 14.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

HERE AN UNUSUAL VEST IMPARTS DISTINCTION

As the vest and tunic are favored in grown up modes so do they also appear as smart features on the frock or suit of the younger girl. The little dress of dark serge is wonderfully brightened by a vest of colored tapestry or brocade.

No. 7877 is a school or street frock of dark brown eponge with a surplice vest of brown and gold figured ratine. The tabs extending below the girdle are an effective touch, and the band of the same figured material at the bottom of the tunic is another.

The bodice shows a set-in sleeve with a deep cuff. The skirt is a two-piece model.

To copy this frock in size 18 it requires 4¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 1 yard of 30 inch material for the vest and cuffs.

The waist-line for children is almost entirely done away with this season. Dame Fashion allows them all the ease of movement possible, and designs gain rather than lose in attractiveness.

No. 8096 is a straight little dress for a child from 4 to 12 years. It is here fashioned of eponge in dark red with a folded sash of satin.

In size 8 it may be made with 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 7877—sizes 16, 17 and 18.
No. 8096—sizes 4 to 12.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

Socialism.

Socialism will be the subject on which the pastor of St. Paul's church will preach at the service on Sabbath evening. This is the fourth sermon in the series on the "Social Crisis and Modern Preaching." He will deal with the rapid spread of the movement, will explain what it is, what are its methods, and will then endeavor to answer the question:—"Is it a sufficient solution of the Social Problem?"

Mr. Lech Won Suit.

Magistrate Edmison rendered judgment yesterday morning in the Lech vs. Profitt case. It will be remembered the defendant struck a hound belonging to the plaintiff, with an axe while the animal was crossing his property, and inflicted a very serious wound. His Worship stated that he was in sympathy with Mr. Profitt, as he was continually bothered with dogs but he should not have taken the law in his own hands. Are You Droopy, Tired, Worn Out?

Here is Good Advice to All Who Feel as if Their Vigor and Life Has all Oozed Away.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, soft feeling that tells you, 'No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they have rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

POLITICAL CORRUPTION DISCUSSED

petrated bribery if necessary by that method. You could carry out your plan at once upon the material provided. The petitioner under the present circumstances when the list of charges is served, in the hands of an unscrupulous and cunning opponent, might as well put his head on the block and have it chopped off at once and save a lot of expense and trouble. If, however, he could get a constable, if he could go before a magistrate and promptly state his case, lay an information if necessary, and, if the gravity of the offence warranted it, swear out an information or get a warrant, if he could not get a summons, or vice versa, have the accused individual brought before the magistrate and have each individual case treated in this way it is my opinion that it would prove the most effective method of putting a stop to these corrupt practices. Then, instead of waiting for an election petition to be tried, the material is provided at hand the case is reall8 settled before anyone can get away and before the hostile forces have been collected for the killing. I know myself that we would have saved several thousands of dollars, a lot of time, a lot of worry, a lot of abuse and a lotof absurdity if we had had the privilege of going before a magistrate with our men, one by one, and making our charge then just as if it were a case of common assault. If we had had thatprivilege we would have nailed the whole lot without waiting.

But beyond and behind all this little remedy lies the fact that such a condition of cynicism, of apathy, has taken possession of the people of the country that we I believe, simply wait for the deluge. It is a well recognized facts that no one denies it, that corruption is rife, that it fairly smells to heaven it is so rank. Yet a country that will send missionaries to convert the heathen will not take time to convert itself. It would be a good thing if we should devote a little of our time, a little of our leisure, to introspection. Everybody knows that men who spend money must be recompensed that they must get it back in some way, that they must get it back from somebody, and the result of this admirable practice is found in the frightful scandals that we have from dlay to day; so much so that when I use the word 'scandals' now I am reminded of the story of the man whose wife had wakened him over fifty times to tell him that there were burglars in the house. He said: Burglars be blowed; let me sleep; let them rob the house. The people of Canada believe that a great many people are in public life for what they can get out of it. This was the principle recently enunciated by a gentleman who was remonstrated with in the United States for having perpetrated some political crime. He said: Why robbing the country? What is the good of the country if you cannot realize upon it? It will not be long until that will be the idea of patriotism in this country unless we can imitate the older and more highly civilized countries more closely.

The responsibility rests upon ourselves—upon Parliament and upon this Parliament. The time is ripe. A great public duty has been performed by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr A. K. Maclean) in bringing the matter forward. We cannot escape our duty. We cannot escape the fact that the people are crying out against this tide of corruption, and unless somethings is done that will allow people inexpensively, as in other cases, to proceed to law and to proceed to the vindication of their rights as citizens, we might as well dissolve Parliament and let everybody have a free hand. The law is only there to restrain honourable men. Since a dishonourable man can avoid it, it serves simply to keep honourable men out of public life. It would really serve a better object to do away with this law and let men cry havoc and let loose the dogs of war, a fair field and no favour. But those things are far from being a matter of merely casual complaint; they are serious things, and they affect the honour of every Canadian and the vital well-being of this country.

Hon. C. J. Doherty (Minister of Justice): We can all sympathize with the desire to make more secure, purity in the conduct of elections, and having that feeling we may well congratulate the hon. member (Mr. A. K. MacLean) for calling this important matter to our attention in the manner in which he has. I may say that we have had under consideration for quite some time the desirability of improving our election law, and perhaps more especially the desirability of improving our Controverted Elections Act. I need not say that the subject possesses very great difficulties. There has to be considered the importance of the end in view, namely, the enactment of such laws as shall, in the first place, require that our elections be so conducted as to enable us to obtain by their means an absolutely impartial and honest verdict from the electors, and, on the other hand, one has to bear in mind the danger there is of overstepping the mark and making the law so severe and so restrictive that perhaps public sympathy might be alienated from its enforcement. While I am not disposed to take a pessimistic view of the character and conduct of the Canadian people in regard to their liability to be improperly influenced in elections I think we must all agree that there is room for the exercise of improper influences, and that no doubt to a greater or lesser extent those influences are sometimes put into operation, and probably do in some cases affect the results of elections. To the extent that is so, there exists an evil which we should strive to overcome. I entirely sympathize with the hon. member in so far as he insisted on the importance of free and pure elections to the proper carrying out of our institutions of government.

This question, as I have said, has been under consideration, and I myself have given some thought to it. I welcome the proposition of the hon. member (Mr. A. K. Maclean), because I think the appointment of a committee of this House, composed of members of both sides, willing to meet and put their collective experience and judgment into the shape of a proposed Bill for the consideration of Parliament, is a wiser and better course in respect to such a matter, than to leave the responsibility to any one minister, even though he can avail of the assistance of his colleagues in the Cabinet. At all events, a Bill prepared by such a committee would come to this House entirely free from the suspicion that it was inspired by any party political consideration. In such legislation, the co-operation of members, without distinction of party, is to my mind most valuable, if not absolutely necessary. I think we are all disposed to approach the consideration of this matter with a mind to aim at results which would secure absolute purity in elections, or which would at least, help towards bringing about that very desirable result. If we were to judge by past experience, we might be somewhat discouraged as to the effectiveness of committees of this kind. In 1903, this House appointed a committee for practically the same purpose as this committee is now asked. The appointment of that committee arose out of the introduction of a Bill proposing to introduce certain amendments to the then existing Elections Act, and to that committee were referred one or two other bills with a similar object in view, introduced during the session. The committee appears to have given a great deal of time and consideration to the subject, and its labours resulted in the production of a report in the form of a draft Bill, which contained a number of amendments to the Elections Act. Most of these amendments seem to have met with the approval of the House at that time, but the Bill failed of adoption, principally, if not entirely, because the House did not look favourably upon what was described as compulsory voting, which was one of the proposals favorably reported upon. The draft Bill provided that any person entitled to vote at an election, and failing to exercise his franchise at least to the extent of going to the poll and depositing a ballot, should be deprived of his right to vote for a period of, I think, six years. This proposal met with a great deal of opposition and the effect of that opposition was that, the discussion of the Bill being very protracted and I believe the session nearing its end, the Bill was for the time being dropped or I think withdrawn. There were some other reasons for that action; there was some criticism of the form in which certain of the provisions were drafted, and the House at that time seemed to have reached the conclusion that the whole matter had better be left for further and more deliberate consideration. At all events, whatever the reasons might be, the work of that committee, although I must say that it would appear that they went at their work with energy and that they devoted time and study to the important questions with which they were dealing, resulted in nothing.

My hon. friend referred also to a motion made by the right hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Borden) in 1906, a motion which was in the terms of the second paragraph of the motion which is now before is, and the hon. member has given us the advantage of very considerable citations from the speech of the present Prime Minister in support of his motion. The result of that motion was that the Minister of Justice of that day himself presented a motion for the appointment of a committee. A committee was appointed, but its labours produced no result. It would appear that that committee never reached the stage of making a report. What number of sittibs it had I am not in a position to state, but towards the end of the session of that year I find that upon the question being asked as to the result of its labours, it was stated by the then Minister of Justice that for different reasons, particularly because he had been exceedingly busy in connection with meetings of the Railway Committee, it had been impossible for him to attend the meetings of this select committee on election laws, and because the work of the committee was so extensive that it would not be possible to bring down a report at an early date, and he added:

I cannot say any more except that it has occurred to me that no great public interest would suffer if the work of that committee were left, without concluding it, to another session,

That seems to have been the end, so far as I have been able to gather, of that committee, and of the matter submitted to it.

BENTON SHOT IN COLD BLOOD BY VILLA MEXICAN REBEL LEADER SAYS ACT IS LEGAL

Bryan Hears Briton Was Court-Martialed Before Execution—Villa Claims Benton Threatened His Life and Violated Articles of War

British Ambassador Cables for Instructions—Want Protection for Bauch

Washington, Feb. 21.—A telegram from R. N. Dudley, of El Paso today to Senator Fall declaring "Benton was murdered like a dog" was read in the Senate at the request of Senator Fall. He also read a telegram from the Al Paso mass meeting.

"I am almost certain Villa did it in person," said the telegram from Dudley.

Cold-Blooded Murder.

"No evidence that Benton was the aggressor," it added. "Everything shows it cold-blooded murder. Castillo is a guest of our Government. Villa is boasting of his crime. Is there no protection anywhere? El Paso is full of rebel officers. Watchful waiting is a failure."

Rebel Explanation.

Roberto V. Pesquior, constitutionalist agent here, made public the following telegram from the constitutionalist headquarters at Juarez:

"Benton entered Xilla's apartment very unexpectedly, demanding protection for his interests and bitterly insulting Villa and the constitutionalist army. Gen. Villa told him that he considered him an enemy to the constitutionalist cause, and in order that he might not continue to work against it, he (Villa) was going to pay him the value of his property (Benton's) in the State of Chihuahua.

Says Benton Drew Revolver.

"Benton became very exasperated at this and drew his revolver, intending to kill the general, but the latter immediately knocked him down, disarmed him and sent him to jail. 'Benton was afterwards tried by a special military tribunal, sentenced to death and duly executed, all in accordance with the laws and usages of war."

Bryan Hears of Courtmartial.

Announcement that Benton met death in Juarez after a courtmartial ordered by Villa was made to-day by Secretary Bryan, who said he had no further details. His information came in a despatch from Consul Edwards at Juarez, who said he had read the courtmartial proceedings, which were forwarded by mail to Washington.

Want Protection for Bauch.

Secretary Bryan communicated the latest message of Consul Edwards to Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, and instructed Consul Edwards to demand adequate protection for Gustav Bauch, an American citizen, for whose safety in Juarez grave apprehension has been felt. Friends of Bauch in El Paso have telegraphed to Representative Smith of Texas that he has been shot as a spy.

HARTFORD STATION DESTROYED BY FIRE

Deep Snow Prevented Fire Apparatus From Reaching the Scene.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 21.—Fire broke out in the Union Station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad here this afternoon, and in a few minutes the structure appeared to be doomed. The station is of considerable dimensions.

The station was wrecked, all train service interrupted, and everyone driven out. The fire apparatus was delayed in reaching the scene owing to the deep snow in the streets.

The fire swept its way with remarkable rapidity. Not many minutes elapsed before the train platforms, which were above the main floor level of the street and station, were ablaze and the roof of the main structure had fallen in. The station was first occupied in May, 1889.

The fire was first noticed in the north end, occupied by the Adams Express Company. All baggage and express matter which could be reached was removed.

Two heavy explosions later lifted a large section of the roof, and the dislodged timbers carried down the waiting room ceiling, which in turn crashed in the newspaper stands, ticket and other offices. Firemen narrowly escaped being caught under the wreckage.

The loss by fire is roughly placed at $150,000

JAPANESE SUBMARINE BELIEVED TO BE LOST

Hiroshima, Japan, Feb 21.—A Japanese submarine attached to the protected cruiser Hirado has been missing for three days. The naval authorities believe she has met with disaster and that all on board have been drowned. The submarine had been [illegible]

THE PRESIDENT'S TROUBLES

President Wilson has his hands full with Mexico, not to mention the Panama Canal tolls. And since the Englishman, Benton, has been murdered by Villa, Great Britain has put both the tolls and the peace of Mexico on the President's docket. This is one reason why Wilson is pressing congress to repeal the unfair preference to American vessels by the way of free tolls in the Panama Canal. If congress straightens out the tolls England may help the President to restore peace in Mexico.

Furthermore, Japan has a grudge against the United States because of what she claims is discrimination against her subjects in the matter of holding land in California and elsewhere. So have Russia, Germany and other countries in regard to other things.

The American army is not in good shape to intervene in Mexico.

It looks as if President Wilson will have to intervene or join with other nations in restoring peace in Mexico, but it will be easier to do this with the Panama Canal tolls out of the way, and Japan and Russia put in better humor.

STOCK TO SECURE $35,000,000 LOAN FOR IT'S EQUIPMENT

Canadian Northern Wants Money to Complete Line From Ocean to Ocean and Buy Rolling Stock

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—The excitement on the surface, over the Canadian Northern's reported application for additional aid, has quieted down somewhat, but it is still active underneath and both parties are sizing it up from their respective points of view. Of the fact that some kind of application for aid has been made by Sir William Mackenzie, there can be no doubt, as he was here for several days and some of the members have been consulted in the matter; but it is rather hard to find out just what is sought by the company. This, however, is known: the company say it will require $25,000,000 to complete and equip the Canadian Northern as a transcontinental line from Vancouver to Quebec, with connections to all important towns of Canada from ocean to ocean, outside of Western Ontario; and in the maritime provinces they claim they will connect up with the Intercolonial Railway, thus giving a transcontinental line from ocean to ocean, and at all towns. The completion of the roadbed and putting down the remainder of the steel for the system is due sometime early this summer, and as a matter of fact trains will be running from Port Arthur to Quebec before Dominion Day and by August from Edmonton to Vancouver. But it is said the equipment in the way of cars, engines and other rolling stock and yard appointments and all other etceteras, that go with equipment will require nearly $20,000,000, not including the large number of engines and cars that the company now possess. The company are believed to have said that they would like to get $35,000,000 to do this work by the way of loan from the Government of Canada, as they say they cannot approach the British money market at the present time for such a sum owing to the stringent condition which prevails there. They also say that if they get it as a loan they will guarantee to pay the interest annually and the principal within a certain number of years; and if the Government insist on it, put up satisfactory security to this end. What security they can put up if called on has not yet been mentioned in detail by any of those discussing the question, although it is believed that a large block of the original stock of the company might be offered by the company.

AMERICAN RAILROAD IDEAS WILL BE USED ON ENGLISH SYSTEM

London, Feb. 21.—Henry W. Thornton, the American railroad man just selected for general manager of the Great Eastern Railway of England, to-day left for New York to wind up his affairs there.

"The annoyance and surprise expressed by the British press at my appointment are, perhaps, natural" he said, "but I think are unjustified."

"My appointment means the introduction of American methods only when they are consistent with the practice of English railways. I intend, however, to get into close personal touch with all the members of the staff of the Great Eastern Railway in the hope that I will not miss anyone capable of advancement. If that is an American innovation, I expect to carry it out.

THREE DROWNED AS LIFEBOAT SANK

Queenstown, Ireland, Feb 21. Three lifeboat men were drowned when they went out from Fethard to rescue the crew of the Norwegian barque Mexico driven on to the rocks near the Saltee Islands, Wexford, last night.

Two lifeboats had answered the distress call of the Mexico, bound from Laguna, Mexico, to Falmouth. The first to reach her was stove in, but the life-savers were able to scramble on board the wrecked Mexico, where they remained all night.

When the crew of the barque and the lifeboat men landed safely on one of the islands to-day they found that the second lifeboat, which they had waited for all night, had sunk, and three of her crew of fourteen men had been drowned.

BEGIN TREATMENT OF ORE TO OBTAIN NEW RADIUM

Denver, Col., Feb. 21.—The treatment of 150 tons of pitchblende ore product. None of the product is to be here today for the purpose of extracting its radium contents.

Hospitals and other humanitarian institutions are to receive the refined product. None of the product is to be sold, according to instructions received here from A. I. Dupont of New Jersey, owner of the ore.

The value of the radium contents cannot be estimated, except on the speculative basis that two tons of uranium metal are the equivalent of 1.05 grams of radium bromide of which there are only two or three in use in the United States. On this basis the ore would have a value of about $360,000.

SON BONAPARTE WILL NOT BE LET IN FRANCE

Paris, Feb. 21.—The week-old son of Prince Victor Bonaparte has already been the subject of a written question by a deputy to the French Minister of the Interior.

M. Engerang asked whether or not French territory is forbidden the baby. In his written question he described the infant as "Prince Napoleon," but this description was refused by the officials of the chamber, and he had to be referred to as Louis Napoleon.

There appears little doubt that a visit by the baby to France would be forbidden, as the Act of 1886 covers all the chiefs of the family which had reigned in France and their heirs.

DEATH OF REV. MR. MANSELL

Our readers will be terribly shocked to learn of the death of Rev. T. J. Mansell, which took place last night about 9 o'clock. It appears that deceased had not been feeling well for some days, and after preaching as usual last night, entered his home and in a short time was stricken with a severe pain in the chest. Dr. Neal was quickly summoned, but the end came in about 10 minutes. The cause of death was angina pictoris.

The deceased leaves to mourn his demise a widow and two grown up sons, one residing in Cincinnati and the other in the Northwest.

Mr. Mansell, who was about 60 years of age, came to Peterborough from Brantford about two years ago. He was an eloquent and forceful preacher, and was greatly beloved and esteemed.

The bereaved family will have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community.

Funeral announcement later.

MRS. PANKHURST GIVES AN ADDRESS

Suff. Leader Tells How She Could Be "Conveniently" Killed by a Mistake.

London, Feb. 21.—The elusive Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, or her double, addressed a large meeting from the balcony of a house in the Chelsea district to-night.

Referring to the arrest of her double a week ago at Kensington, the speaker drew what was intended to be a pathetic picture of how easy it would be for an accident to happen on a dark night while such an arrest was being carried out

She described how convenient it would be if by "an accidental blow" an end should be put to Mrs. Pankhurst. In conclusion she defied the authorities to arrest her and vowed she would never serve the term of penal servitude to which she had been sentenced.

There was considerable scuffling between the audience and the police in the street, but the officers quickly cleared the vicinity of the house.

SHOOTS HIS WIFE BUT IS ACQUITTED

Polish Aristocrat Killed Countess and Nephew After Finding Them Together.

Meseritz, Feb. 21.—Count Matthias Brudzewo-Melzynski, the Polish aristocrat and member of the German Imperial Parliament, was acquitted to-day of a charge of manslaughter of his wife and her nephew, Count Alfred Mietchinski.

The tragedy occurred on Dec. 20 last at Dakowy Mokerz, the county seat of the countess, near Graetz, and attracted world-wide attention on account of the social prominence of those concerned. The count shot both his wife and her nephew dead on finding them together at 4 o'clock in the morning in the countess' apartments. After the shooting the count voluntarily waived his parliamentary immunity in order to permit his trial to take place.

GORE THREATENS TO BARE WOMAN'S PLOT

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 21.—Instead of calling Senator Gore to the witness stand when court opened for the third day's session of the trial of the $50,000 damage suit brought against the senator by Mrs. Minnie Bond, counsel for the defense decided at the last moment to call other witnesses in the effort to lay grounds for the impeachment of several of the plaintiff's witnesses.

The first witness to-day was W. F. Fisher, an Oklahoma City lawyer.

It is understood that when Senator Gore takes the stand he will deny charges of improper conduct made by Mrs. Minnie Bond, who is suing the Senator for $50,000 damages, and will charge that the suit is the result of a conspiracy, concocted by his political enemies and a coterie of disappointed office seekers.

It is his intention, attorney for the defence declared, to make revelations "more startling than the trial has yet produced."

Half a dozen witnesses testified for the defense yesterday to alleged incidents tending to show that the senator was the victim of a plot. It was stated today that the advisability of the senator making a direct plea to the jury had been considered by his attorneys.

LOANED LAWYER MONEY.

Fisher testified that he had loaned T. E. Robertson, the lawyer, who was present and witnessed the alleged attack on Mrs. Bond, $245 and when Robertson came back from Washington after the Gore incident, he demanded that it be repaid. At this point objections by counsel for Mrs Bond caused Fisher to be excused until Robertson could be recalled and foundation laid upon which to predicate his examination.

Hon. Mr. Perley stated in the Commons last night that the Union Life prosecutions were solely in the hands of the Ontario Attorney-General's department.

Letter Opened by Police Established Suicide's Identity as Frederick Thompson, and Injects New Mystery

PROTESTANTISM AND CRIME

Cardinal O'Connell is reported to have said that the degeneracy of our time is entirely due to the character of the religion found in Protestant Churches. And yet Zion's Herald, Boston, tells us that it is not so long ago that the Roman Catholic Church in Massachusetts was demanding the appointment of a Roman Catholic chaplain in the state prison, on the ground that 85 per cent. of the convicts are Roman Catholics.

Toronto, Feb. 21.—The police are now sure that the young man who committed suicide at 920 Dundas street and whom they first thought to be Frederick Thompson, but who was afterwards said to be John Neil, of Montreal until that man turned up at the morgue to deny it, really is Fred Thompson. He is probably a Hamilton man.

They have been led to this belief by a letter received here Saturday, addressed to Fred Thompson, 920 Dundas street, which bears a Hamilton post mark and is signed "Harry." The letter reads:

"Dear Fred—Just line to inform you of the awful fate that awaits you if you neglect accepting Jesus as your own personal Saviour. He died for you, that you might live. Oh, Fred, don't put it off any longer, I beg you, until too late. Write soon. Yours as ever, Harry. P.S.—Read enclosed and consider them very seriously."

The wording of the letter has led to the belief that the writer knew of his friend's contemplated suicide

CITY COUNCIL STRONGLY FAVORS PROPOSED NEW P. O. LOCATION

Radial Railway Presents Request for New Altetations on Their Present Lines

On Saturday night a meeting representing the people of Peterborough was held in the City Council Chamber to consider the proposed removal of the Post Office to the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets. The room was well filled. The meeting was somewhat delayed owing to the chairman being late.

Mayor Buller took the chair.

Mr. J. H. Burnham's letter, already published in The Times was read.

A petition to the City Council was read. A letter from Mr. A. E. Coulthard was read, recommending the proposed site, as was one from Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons.

Moved by Ald. Johnston that the communications be received.

Ex-Ald. Turner spoke briefly in favor of the site. He was pleased to note that $50,000 was placed in the estimates for the new Government building.

Mr. Goodwill said he represented the manufacturing interests of the city. He submitted a petition signed by many local manufacturers advocating the proposed site at Sherbrooke and George streets. This petition covered practically all the leading manufacturers of Peterborough. Peterborough can best be served by having one public Government building. He referred to the good such a public building on such a site would do Peterborough. He estimated that as there seemed to be no opposition to the proposed site, he would not use the arguments he had in hand.

Messrs. Cubitt and Thos. Barrie sent letters withdrawing from their former opposition to the proposed site.

Mr. Worth, of the Bonner-Worth Co., spoke strongly in favor of the proposed site.

Mr. N. Eastwood said the question in hand should not be handled by the City Council. Mr. Goodwill's arguments are all weak. The people who use the Post Office are those who have their investments and business near it (Cries of No! No! No!)

Ald. Gordon appreciated the courtesy extended to the Council in consulting them about the matter. The idea is to consider the exact commercial centre of Peterborough. He thought there would be required a couple of sub-post offices in the city. He thought there would be considerable regret if the post office were removed from its present site. He advocated a deputation being sent to consult with Mr Burnham. He spoke of the "landlordship" in the central part of the city.

Ald. Langford spoke strongly for the present post office site. He thought the other federal offices might be moved to Sherbrooke street.

The Mayor here, rapping his desk, said, "we are acting like a lot of children. Either we may get a $50,000 or a $200,000 building.

Ald. Anderson advocated the proposed site.

Ald. Duffus regretted that the post office should be removed.

Ald. Greene said the site selected could not be improved on.

Ald. McIntyre, of Ashburnham, said although his Ward would suffer, he would advocate the location, but would ask for a sub-station for the East Ward.

Ald. Johnston said it does not make two straws difference to the people here where the Government puts the post office. He advocated getting the new Government building.

Ald. Stratton said 80 per cent. of the taxes are spent by the central part of the city. He did not see why the post office should be sent away south. He thought the post office should be left where it is. The merchants use the post office more than the manufacturers.

Ald. Duncan moved (in short) that the Council should not interfere with the site proposed as a post office by the Government.—Carried.

Mr. Gordon moved that a vote of thanks be rendered to Minister Rogers advocated by Mr. W. H. Denham and also to Mr. Burnham for their efforts to support Peterborough's progress. Mr. Parsons showed a blue print de- [illegible] to save [illegible] car line at George and Charlotte streets. The company want a double track on George street. This would give a 10 minute service instead of a 15 minute service as at present. This double track would run several hundred feet north on George street. This would give a better service to the city. The Mayor advocated this idea.

Mr. Munro spoke of the contemplated changes. The company could thus give a better service to passengers for the C.P.R. The company was looking towards a future freight service for the city. The proposed improvements will make a quicker service for the public. It will also get cars to the C.G.E. Co. five minutes earlier than at present.

The matter on motion of Ald. Gordon was referred to the Board of Works, with power to act.

It was agreed with Ald. Gordon's consent that the request of the Street Railway be granted.

Ald Duncan thought the city solicitor should be consulted.

Ald. Gordon's motion was ultimately adopted.

The big meeting was strongly in favor of the proposed new post office site. Alderman Gordon, Langford and Stratton opposed the proposition.

Wasn't Quite Sure.

A Scotchman, in search of work, succeeded after much difficulty, in finding employment at a shipyard at Liverpool

The job, which consisted mainly in carrying heavy planks, was by no means to the man's lazy liking. After he had been at it for some time therefore he went to the foreman and asked:

"Did Ah tell ye ma name when Ah started to work?"

"Yes," replied the foreman. "You said it was Simpson."

"Oh then, that's a' right!" said the Scot, glancing toward the pile of planks which he had yet to carry. "I was jist a-wunnerin' if ye thocht Ah said it was Samson!"

Curran and Lord Clare.

Curran, the Irish advocate, was on terms of intense enmity with Lord Clare, the Irish lord chancellor, with whom, when a member of the bar, he fought a duel and whose hostility to him on the bench, he always said, caused him losses in his professional income which he could not estimate at less than £30,000. The incidents attendant on this disagreement were at times ludicrous in the extreme. One day when it was known that Curran was to make an elaborate statement in chancery Lord Clare brought a large Newfoundland dog to the bench with him and during the progress of the most material part of the case began in full court to fondle the animal. Curran stopped at once. "Go on, go on, Mr. Curran!" said Lord Clare. "Oh, I beg a thousand pardons, my lord! I really took it for granted that your lordship was engaged in consultation!"

Two Smart Actors.

In a popular historic drama the actor who takes the part of Napoleon is required to read aloud a document of considerable length which is brought to him by General Berthier. This, being written at length, is seldom committed to memory. A short time ago, however, the property master at an English theater mislaid the document, and Napoleon, who was new to the part, received instead a blank sheet of paper. For a moment he was aghast; then, eager to escape from his predicament even at the expense of a fellow actor, he handed the paper to General Berthier, saying, "Read it to me."

The other actor was not in the least confused. "Your majesty," he said, handing it back, "I am only a poor soldier of fortune, and you must excuse me. I do not know how to read!"

His Emancipation.

Away back in 1771 Josiah Woodbury of Beverly, Mass., thus published his happy emancipation from matrimonial woes:

> Beverly, Sept. 16, 1771.
>
> Ran away from Josiah Woodbury, cooper, his house plague for seven long years, Masury Old Moll, alias Trial of Vengeance. He that lost will never seek her; he that shall keep her I will give two Bushel of Beans. I forewarn all Persons in Town or County from trusting said Trial of Vengeance. I have hove all the old (shoes) I can find for joy, and all my neighbors rejoice with me. A good Riddance of bad Ware. Amen!

The Irishman Had Him.

John Tolmie, who represents North Bruce in the House of Commons, tells among his good stories, of the time when the joke was neatly turned on him.

An Irishman, who knew that Mr. Tolmie was Scotch and that he had been a politician for a great many years, asked why it was that Scotchmen showed such great ability in opposite directions. "Scotchmen are either preachers or politicians," said the Irishman.

"The Irish are just as remarkable," said Mr. Tolmie. "They are either policemen or—" The remainder of the remark was drowned by the laughter of the listeners.

At a gathering of the Bruce Old Boys' Association in which most of the people were Scotch, Mr. Tolmie told how he had got back at the Irishman. But an Irish Old Boy at the gathering turned the laugh on Mr. Tolmie. Said the Irishman: "I must admit that it takes about half the Irish as policemen to keep the other half out of jail, but Mr. Tolmie mustn't forget that it takes half the Scotch as preachers to keep the other half out of Hades."

Pitiful Sales.

Kits of sailors lost at sea are sold regularly at auction at the Albert docks in London. The sale provides many a pitiful sight. Most of the lots are contained in the regular sailor's sea chest, all marked with the name of the ship from which they come. It is not unusual for those who have lost friends or relatives at sea to attend these auctions, and there are times when the first news of such a loss comes through the recognition of familiar objects.

OLD TIME RAILROADING

TRIALS OF THE DAYS WHEN THE ENGINES BURNED WOOD.

They Used to Dig Peat for Fuel at Montreal—Veteran Engineer Tells of Early Life on the Old Great Western—A Man Never Knew When He Would Be Back—Anything Was Liable to Happen.

In spite of white hairs and snowy moustache, his eyes shone clear and keen as in the days when on their ceaseless vigilance depended the lives of scores of passengers. As he reminisced to a reporter a far-away look came into those once watchful orbs, and the old engineer imagined himself as of yore, back at the throttle gazing out of the cab window at the twin ribbons of steel along whose shining course the locomotive would rush quivering like a living thing.

"Railroading. Ah! It has changed a whole lot since I first started into it as a call boy over half a century ago in England. I got my first engine when I was only nineteen years old," said the veteran with pardonable pride. "Then, soon afterwards I emigrated to this country and joined the Grand Trunk. There was no starting in as fireman in those days and working yourself up to engineer as they do now. No, sir, leastways on the old Great Western. A man had to know all about it before ever the officials would allow him to take a loco out.

"They burnt peat in those days running out of Montreal. That was back in '60," said the old railroader. "Some of the officials had got hold of the big peat bogs around about the city, and they sold it to the company, and the dirty stuff was handed out to us to fire with. Leaving St. Lambert, we had our tenders to load up with this muddy fuel; but it didn't last long. You can bet the firemen knew how to get rid of it in a hurry, for just as soon as the tender got partly empty we could load on cord wood. You should have seen the way they dumped that peat out by the cart load. It lay so thick in places along the right of way that the company sent about special trains to gather it up.

"Well, one fine day, just about the time that every fireman on the road had got good and sick of the dirty crumbly stuff which was just a mess composed of mud and grass roots cut into little square-like bricks, some fellow on a locomotive threw a piece of blazing cotton waste right into the big stack where over a thousand tons of peat were stacked. The whole thing caught fire. There was an awful blaze, and the windows of passing cars were cracked by the heat. But that was the end of our troubles. No more peat was used on the Grand Trunk.

It was well on into the seventies before Canadian locomotives began using coal to any extent. The years '73 and '74 saw its introduction, but it was not until about '80 that it came into general use. Before that the cumbrous looking old wood-burners familiar only to the present generation from pictures, lugged the trains of box-like cars.

"These wood-burners were all smokestack, and they were a terror for puffing out hot cinders," said the old man. "That's why the Government made them put on those wire bonnets on top of the stacks. But they were very serviceable little engines, too, though they only weighed thirty-five tons. In those days each engineer had to look after his own locomotive and try and keep it in repair. He would get down out of the cab and tighten up a nut or adjust a bearing, and generally keep his eye on the whole machine. You didn't see any hammer marks on the wheels in those days. If the big drivers showed the least dint you can bet the engineer would hear about it. We were provided with lead hammers to do our testing, so that we wouldn't mark things.

"How did you ever manage in the days before the air-brake was invented?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, we did well enough. The engineer knew his crew, and when he whistled 'on brakes,' the boys were all on the job. It certainly seems pretty crude compared with what we have nowadays—the running along over the tops of moving cars, and the twisting and turning of the old 'Armstrong' brakes on the platforms, but we seemed to get along with it.

"And let me tell you," said the old man, "up to the time of the Great Western's amalgamation with the Grand Trunk, in '80, we hadn't had a single rear-end collision on my division—St. Thomas to the Falls and Buffalo. And there was lots of freight traffic over that line then, too. That was the great stock route from the American west. In those days there were big herds of cattle on the plains, and hundreds of train loads used to pass through from Detroit east."

But if collisions were few, accidents of other kinds there were a-plenty. "The St. Thomas division was built in the early seventies," said my informant, "and the road was a sure enough rough one then. There was something running off the track all the time. It was only used for freight in the beginning; and I can tell you we freight crews had our own time of it.

"A man starting out never knew just when he was going to get back. Once I was a whole week making the round trip. Just think of it. St. Thomas to the Falls and back, seven days. There were five crews tied up all near each other for over a day. We hadn't any provisions with us, and had a hard time foraging for food at one of the few settlers' houses in the vicinity. Twenty hungry men finally deserted their trains and went over in a body to a farmer's place. We were nearly starved, being a good day and a half without food, and I can tell you the pork and potatoes that farmer set out for us fairly melted away when our gang got after them."

Abrupt.

Judge Stevens had a slight hesitation in his speech, but that affliction did not prevent his using long words. One morning his dog Snip got into a fight with another dog. Tapping him with his cane, Judge Stevens exclaimed. "D-d-dis-con-t-t-tin-ue."—Success Magazine.

AFRICAN LIONS.

They Often Hunt in Couples to Start and Capture Their Prey.

Lions in Africa go hunting often in couples and then rather systematically. When, for instance, a couple of lions have traced out a kraal—that is to say, a place fenced by small cut thorn trees, where flocks of asses or oxen, goats or sheep are shut up for the night—the lioness approaches cautiously, profiting by every tree or bush to hide herself. At the same time the lion himself lies watching on the opposite in the distance.

Now the lioness exerts herself to arouse the cattle—which is not difficult, as they become excited merely by smelling a beast of prey—till the cattle are tormented to the utmost by fear and horror, break through the kraal on the side opposite to the lioness and thus fall an easy prey to the lion.

The lion chases his victim and throttles it by springing on its neck or breast and biting his teeth into this part. The hunted animal falls, and the lion now tears open the flanks. The lioness appears and has her share of the meal. Very often they cannot devour their victim in one night; then they come back to the place where the remains are on the following or the second night.

The lion's favorite food is zebra, quagga (of which there are few left in Africa) and wild ass. The meat of these three kind of animals is something alike in taste.

English Clay Pipes.

The clay pipe, which is vanishing from the Fleet street chophouse, was the only variety smoked in this country until quite recent times. The clay pipe made its appearance in England in the later years of the sixteenth century. Writing about a century later, a French author remarks that the English "invented the pipes of baked clay which are now used everywhere."

"Broseley, in Staffordshire, has been famous for its pipes and clay from the days of Elizabeth," writes W. A. Penn in "The Soverane Herb." "Now all the clay of which white pipes are manufactured comes from Newton Abbot and Kingsteignton, in Devonshire. It is sent to all parts of England and the world in rough lumps about the size of quartern loaves, weighing some twenty-eight pounds each."—London Spectator.

A Heartless Interruption.

A young Parisian, noted for his grace and readiness as a second in many duels, was asked by a friend to accompany him to the mayor's office to affix his signature as a witness to the matrimonial registry. He consented, but when the scene was reached forgot himself. Just as the mayor was ready for the last formalities he broke out: "Gentlemen, cannot this affair be arranged? Is there no way of preventing this sad occurrence?"

Plain Hunger.

"Doctor, what disease is the most prevalent among the poor?"

"An alarming condition in which the nerve terminations in the stomach stimulated by accumulated secretions of the gastric glands send irritations to the spinal cord by way of the pneumogastric nerve."

"Goodness! How awful! And to think that we rich people can do nothing for those unfortunate sufferers!"—Cleveland Leader.

Out of the Question.

"FREEZE" AND "BURN."

These Two Words Had a Common Parent In One Aryan Root

We are likely to consider "freeze" and "burn" as two distinctly opposite effects, but if, for a simple experiment, you will touch your tongue to a bit of heated iron and to a bit of iron that is extremely cold the effects, as shown in the blisters produced and in the sensation of the contacts, will be found to be surprisingly alike.

It is doubtful if our Aryan ancestors when they were planting the seed of the English and its sister languages thought of the scientific relations of what we call heat and cold, but they gave to us the root "prus," which they got out of the sensations produced by burning and freezing. As usual, Aryan roots beginning with the "p" sound change it to "f" on the tongues of the Teuton; so with these our more modern ancestors "prus" became "frus," and from it came our "freeze" and "frost." Again, as is usual, our Hindu brother in his Sanskrit usually preserves the Aryan "p" sound, so he has from this root "prush," meaning to burn.

This root of freeze became "freosan" in Anglo-Saxon, which is our "frozen." In Icelandic it became "frjosa," in Swedish "frysa" and in Danish "fryse." In the Latin the original "p" sound is retained in "pruina," meaning hoarfrost, and in "pruna," signifying a burning coal. Here we see united two apparently opposite meanings growing out of the old root "prus."—New York Herald.

A CHARITY PATIENT.

The Price He Had to Pay For Expert Surgical Treatment.

The famous surgeon Velpeau was visited one day at his house during the consultation hour by a marquis renowned for his closeness. Velpeau informed the marquis that an operation was urgent and that the fee would amount to 4,000 francs. At this the marquis made a wry face and left. A fortnight later Dr. Velpeau, while making his rounds in the Hopital de la Charite, had his attention attracted by a face that seemed familiar to him. In answer to his inquiry it was stated that the patient was a footman of a nobleman in the Faubourg St. Germain. The surgeon found that his case resembled in every particular the somewhat unusual one for which the marquis had consulted him a fortnight previously. He refrained, however, from making any comments. Three weeks after the operation, when the patient was about to be discharged, Dr. Velpeau called him aside and exclaimed: "Monsieur, I am extremely flattered and pleased to have been able to cure you. There is, however, a small formality with which you will have to comply before I can sign your exeat—that is, you will have to sign a check for 10,000 francs in behalf of the public charity bureau of your metropolitan district." The patient's face became livid. "You can do what you like about it," continued the doctor, "but if you refuse all Paris will know tomorrow that the Marquis de D. adopted the disguise of a footman in order to secure free treatment at this hospital and to usurp the place which belongs by right to a pauper." Of course the marquis paid.—Argonaut.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of diseases. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

The average automobilist is no respector of persons. If Sir John Macdonald were alive today he would be honked at a street crossing into a series of long and frantic jumps just as if he were no more than an ordinary pedestrian.

◆

It is now proposed to have a national people how to save, and after they are graduated we presume it will be their turn to teach the government how to do the same thing.

◆

In Toronto the other day Mr. Orange was married to Miss Flowers. An affair of orange flowers, beyond a doubt.

◆

The Ottawa Citizen inveighs against an alleged attempt to "force Thirty-One Mile Lake down the throats of the electors." The Citizen evidently realizes the antipathy of the average Ottawan to water as a beverage.

◆

We judge by a recent speech he delivered in Parliament that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is thoroughly convinced that the decline of the Dominion began with his retirement from office.

◆

A local minister is reported to have said, during a sermon on morality, that little girls who wander up and down the streets until nine or ten o'clock at night, are "little wild brutes." What he thinks of little boys probably would be unfit for publication.

A GREAT NATIONAL SCANDAL

The people of Canada should find food for reflection in the report of the special commission that has been investigating the charges of extravagance, corruption, corruption and mismanagement in connection with the building of the National Transcontinental Railway. The commission finds, in brief, that something like $40,000,000 has been wasted and stolen in connection with this work within the last few years.

The original estimates for the 1300-mile line from Monction, New Brunswick, to Winnipeg—the section that the Laurier government understook to build itself, besides lending its credit to the Grand Trunk for the rest of the line from Winnipeg to Prince Rupert on the Pacific coast—was $61,415,000. This has gradually grown, as the work went on, to $161,000,000, and by 1322, when the Grand Trunk will begin the payment of the three per cent. interest, the work will have cost the government, that is, the Canadian people, $234,651,521.

The origina l contracts were made with a few big contractors and they made $9,000,000 by sub-letting, "without doing a stroke of work," as the terms of the report have it. There was waste on every side. The late government had warnings enough as to what was going on but there was so much politics in the matter and the waste continued until it has reached the proportions of a great national scandal. The late President Charles M. Hays of the Grand Trunk was one of those who protested in vain. He was a practical railroad man and he grasped the situation, but the late government continued supremely blind to the incompetence and corruption. Now NoR comes the investigation and the awakening.

No More Asthma
A Cure Discovered
That Really Does Cure

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that a man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drugstore and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

The one-dollar package last two months; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Wonderful Victoria Falls.

"It is well nigh impossible to describe a scene of such wonder, such wildness," says Lady Sarah Wilson in her "South African Memories" of the Victoria falls. But she gives this graphic description: "Standing on a point flush with the river before it makes its headlong leap, we gazed first on the swirling water losing itself in snowy spray which beat relentlessly on face and clothes while the great volume was noisily disappearing to unknown and terrifying depths. The sightseer tries to look across, to strain his eyes and to see beyond that white mist which obscures everything, but it is an impossible task, and he can but guess the width of the falls, slightly horseshoe in shape, from the green trees which seem so far away on the opposite bank and are only caught sight of now and then as the wind causes the spray to lift. At the same time his attention is fixed by a new wonder—the much talked of rainbow. Never varying, never changing, that perfect shaped arc is surely more typical of eternity there than anywhere else."

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SIMCOE STREET THE CENTRE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Re public buildings that are now being advocated by our representative, Mr. Burnham, for the housing of our very rapidly expanding business. It has just occurred to me that the only people up to the present time who have taken a lively interest in this matter, are our live merchants. In a situation of this kind, which is of so much importance to the whole community, it would be well to turn over a leaf and see what the other side has to say. In speaking to some prominent gentlemen residents of our city and largely interested in its growth and welfare, the information I received from them would lead me to infer that Simcoe street is about the centre of our population, or in other words, that at least half of our population reside south of that street. In a case of this kind it occurs to me that the whole community has to be considered and not the few. Take the mercantile interests north of, say, Charlotte street. Would they com-combined employ 700 people? Then compare this number with the thousands who are employed south of Charlotte St. It certainly looks as if the balance was largely in favor of the south end.

What percentage of our population require to use the post office further than to buy stamps? We have our free delivery in the city and our county is fairly well covered by the rural routes. In the various sections of the city, we have our sub-stations, one in Riverside, one in Ashburnham, also one at Kawartha Gateway.

Taking the matter fully into consideration it appears to me that the agent of the Government, who is not interested in our local affairs, has made a very good selection.

Ward Two.

Too Careful

In politics as well as in business it is sometimes necessary to do things with a rather free hand, and it was perhaps the lack of ability to so rise to the occasion that made a former occupant of a Cabinet position in the Ontario Legislature not altogether suited to his position.

When this man was appointed, a newspaper man got from him some information for a write-up. The Minister was asked if he would like a few copies of the paper in which the write-up was to appear, and he said, "Yes, send me a dozen."

The newspaperman saw the Minister a few days later and said: "I've given you a pretty good show in that write-up. Don't you think you ought to get quite a number of papers and send them to some of the country editors?"

"It's a splendid idea," said the Minister enthusiastically. "How many papers did we arrange for you to send me?"

"Oh, we said about a dozen."

"Well," said the Minister in a tone indicating great decision, "send me two dozen, and send the bill to me."

A Lucky Find

Charles T. Currelly, the well-known Canadian archaeologist, tells of a curious piece of luck which befell him on one occasion. He was working with a party of one hundred men on the excavation of a number of important tombs in Egypt, when a native came to him with the story of an interesting discovery some distance away. Leaving the work on which he was engaged, he went to the place described by the native, only to find that it was a wild-goose chase. On the way back, however, from this fruitless expedition he noticed a pile of gravel which appeared to him to be of an unnatural arrangement. He stopped and sunk a pit. To his surprise and delight, a tomb was discovered which proved to be that of the Pharaoh "which knew not Joseph." This monarch had completely hidden his tomb, building it in an out-of-the-way place, and like that of the poorest peasant: underground, however, a veritable palace had been constructed.

A FEAST IN SAMOA

Develops Into a Conglomerated Scramble For Food.

A SCENE OF WILD DISORDER.

The Native Guests Steal All the Eatables Within Reach, Which They Pass Over to Crowds of Waiting Relatives Gathered on the Outside.

The principal native foods of Samoa are bananas, breadfruit, taro, fish and pork. Bananas prepared "Fa Samoa" would not appeal very strongly to an epicurean taste, for they are gathered unripe and baked under heated stones, as all Samoan cooking is accomplished. A baked green banana favors somewhat a roasted chestnut, but not enough to cause any mistake between the two.

The breadfruit, in my estimation, appeals more strongly to a white man's taste than any other Samoan food. The large, mealy balls are baked, broken open and eaten, usually with one or other of the two Samoan sauces palusami and fai-ai. Palusami is made from the young shoots of the taro plant, cocoanut milk and sea water. Fai-ai is evaporated cocoanut milk. The milk is poured into a leaf, the ends and edges tied at the top, and it is then baked until the water evaporates, leaving a thick cream, which is very rich and quite palatable. Faro is the root or bulb of a plant which is an exact counter part of what we call "elephant ear" in the United States and is somewhat like a yam, but inclined to be stingy or stredidy. The inside of a baked faro bulb is very solid and of a bluish tint.

The fish needs no explanation.

Pork is the supreme delicacy, according to the Samoan mind, and it is always eaten in a half cooked state. Since a Samoan will sell his birthright for a piece of pig one-half grown is worth $30 or $40 and will always find a market; therefore it is easily seen that pork can be afforded only on holiday occasions. The Samoan method of killing a pig is unique. The animal's feet are tied together, and it is laid upon its back. Then two large, heavy natives place a 2 by 4 scantling across its neck, after which they seat themselves one on each end of the scantling.

As the unfortunate pig is slowly strangled to death his heartless executioners calmly talk politics. The reason for strangulation in putting a hog to death is simply this: A pig is held in such high esteem that it breaks the Samoan heart to see even the blood being wasted. The blood is used in conjunction with the fatty parts of the entrails and when baked forms some kind of pudding. I have never tasted this kind of pudding myself, but a Samoan will tell you that it is simply delicious, and I am willing to take his word for it. Even the cleaned entrails are utilized, and right here in Samoa we can again bring into use the Chicago stockyard phrase that "only the squeal is lost."

I well remember the first and only Samoan feast I ever had the pleasure of attending. I received an invitation one day from a Samoan whose friendship I had formed to attend a feast the following night which he was giving to dedicate his new home. There were several white men present and about fifty natives. We were arranged in two rows facing each other, sitting cross legged, and in front of each was a small mat on which was a profusion of food, including a lupe (or pigeon), a piece of pork (palusami), taro (breadfruit)—in fact, everything which goes to make a Samoan feast—all to be washed down with cocoanut milk. I had taken two or three mouthfuls of the pigeon when I noticed that there was a ring of natives each with a basket waiting impatiently just outside the house. As I turned to the man on my right for the purpose of asking why these people were assembled outside I noticed a movement in close proximity on my left. Turning quickly around, I was just in time to catch a farewell glimpse of my fine supper being dumped bodily into one of those waiting baskets. I saw at once the reason for that overflow meeting outside. The woman who sat next to me had taken a favorable opportunity when my back was turned to pick up my mat and dispose of my meal to her waiting relative, who had attended the overflow meeting with a basket.

Then ensued a conglomerated scramble, and the feast was turned into a scene of wild disorder as each native strove to outdo his neighbor in securing the most food to send home. The strategy, flank movements and tact that they exhibited under the inspiring grab game so far provoked my comedy bump that I was more than repaid for the loss of my supper in watching their energetic struggles to obtain food gratis.

I was afterward informed that the spectacle I had witnessed was simply the natural course of a Samoan feast, that they always ended the same way and I was indeed fortunate to have secured a taste or so of my pigeon.—Los Angeles Times.

WOOD BLOCK CURLING.

Few Early Exponents of the "Roarin' Game" Had Real "Stanes."

In an article on curling in Canada in The Canadian Courier, A. W. Curran harks back to the days when wooden blocks were used.

There were very few stones in Canada before the sixties; though the Governor-General and the officials at Ottawa played with the granites.

The blocks were hardwood, larger at the bottom than the top. They weighed about four or five pounds, and slipped along the ice quite easily. The handle was made of any old piece of iron that could be found.

It was a great event in the different towns when the first pair of stones arrived. The owner would, without exception, want to play his forty pound rocks against the five pound blocks. One game was usually sufficient, as the rocks would clear the rink of blocks as though they were pebbles on the ice. After that, of course, everyone had to "dig down" and buy a pair of "Ailsa Craigs"; and as the players in those ancient days were all just fresh "frae old Scotia" it caused quite a tugging at the heart-strings when they parted with the wherewithal.

A pair of curling stones in those days were as highly valued as a house and lot, for the simple reason that if you lost them you had to wait for a pair to come from the old land—certainly not for their intrinsic value. If, perchance, a stone was broken then the man who broke it had to pay for it. That was one of the stringent rules of the game; and force of public opinion made it a good rule to observe.

They tell a story in a town of the north country of a prominent man, who had lost thousands of dollars speculating without a whimper. One day, in a close, hard game, an opponent, playing a running shot, broke his stone. That man raised more row about that old curling stone in five minutes than he ever had about losing thousands of dollars. It took him months to get over it. It was the only time his friends had ever seen him really upset.

In connection with the importation of the first stones into the town of Orillia, back in 1873, there is a rather good story. Stonewall Jackson, a braw Scot, was the proud owner of the first pair of stones exact replicas of the pair used by the Governor-General. He tried to use his stones against the blocks, and, as happened in other places, the blocks were knocked all over the ring. So, the following year, the other members had to get stones.

It so happened that one day on soft ice Stonewall took a running shot, which "wabbled," and hitting the shot on the edge, a piece was chipped out of his stone. Of course, no one was to blame but Stonewall himself. So, as nobody was buying him a new pair, he had the stone with the piece out of the side cut down to about half-size—the stone at that time were flat, regular pancakes, and wide. After that, whenever Stonewall had a narrow port to run he would use his small stone, which was a great advantage, as it would go through a hole half the size the regular stone would require, and saved many games for him, 'tis said.

There is a decided difference between the stones used then and those in vogue now. They were flat, less than three inches high, and wide, about eighteen inches across. They sat very low on the ice and caught all the dirt in sight; consequently luck was a greater factor in their game. In fact, the game in those days was not the scientific game that is played to-day. It was more of a roarin' game—but so were the times. Now, it is a science, and must be practiced and played for years before a man can hope to play really well.

The old-timers never played anything but the inturn, and the stones drew very little anyhow. They sometimes tried the straight handle, but the stone usually ended up with one turn or the other, dirt on the ice doing the trick.

Now, the out-turn is played nearly as often as the in, and the modern stones draw as much as ten feet on modern ice. The stones are so shaped that they brush aside almost any dirt, and so a great element of chance is eliminated.

One change significant of the times to which to a more or less extent is due the change in the tone of the sport, is the absence of whisky. In the fifties, and thereafter for forty years, no curling game was complete without a "guid old cutter of whisky" guid old rye. As the "skey" has disappeared, so the boisterousness has faded away. However, the games in those times, were much more interesting to the spectator, and goodly crowds gathered to see the curlers make merry. After every game three cheers was given all round and a tiger for good measure. It wouldn't hurt the game a whit to have this feature reinstituted. It is in keeping with the spirit of the game.

However, those were the good old days, when the men worked for their fun and over their fun, and, as we said before, the game is pretty well indicative of the trend of the times more scientific now, but not nearly so physically strenuous.

The Natural Park Man.

Howard Douglas, Edmonton, has been giving interviews down in Spokane, Washington. He's the natural park man who works for the Dominion Government. During fifteen years Douglas has managed eight national parks in Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. He was the first superintendent of the Banff Park, the first reservation of its kind in Canada.

Douglas is going to be superintendent of still another park. Up in the Yellowhead Pass through the Rocky Mountains, there are 4,500 square miles of hotsprings and scenery. This is Jasper Park—and Howard Douglas has commenced opening it up.

Too Much Realism.

"Do you not feel at times," remarked the fireside critic, "that realism can be carried too far on the stage?"

"Yes," replied the tragic actor, with a sigh. "The last man I was working for did it. He wanted to pay us all off in stage money."

Shut Him Up.

A SKILFUL ARCHITECT.

The Canadian Muskrat Is Cleverer Than the Beaver.

When it comes to ingenuity in construction and system in domestic arrangements the beaver, master builder that he is, can give the little Canadian muskrat few pointers. In building its house the muskrat selects a spot on the low marsh land that will be flooded at high tide or high water if on non-tidal margins. The animal tunnels from the bank of the stream or lagoon or pond, as the case may be, beginning below the edge of low water mark, to the site it has selected for its home.

These preliminaries completed, the muskrat cuts with its chisel-like teeth the broad, strong stalks and leaves of the flag and long, coarse grass. These materials the busy little builder carries to the building site, where it braids and twists them together in circular form and builds them layer upon layer, gradually narrowing the structure until a firm, cone shaped house is the result. This is further strengthened and made comfortable by a liberal mixture of mortar made by the muskrat out of the marsh mud.

The interior of a muskrat's house is always divided into two floors or stories. Sometimes it will have as many as four apartments, one above the other. The number is believed to be regulated by the expected height of the water. Access to them from below is by a chamber or gallery built around the inner edge of the house and rising like a spiral stairway. The muskrat expects and wants the ground floor of its house to be flooded, but there must always be a dry, warm room at the top. The interior is fined with a sheathing of dry grasses and leaves. The only entrance and exit to the house is the subterranean passage from the bank of the water, the ground floor being on a level with that tunnel.

If you want a hard case there is the case of a man who late at night bought a bottle of whisky at a public house—price, 3s. 6d.—says the London Globe. He handed over a five pound note, and the publican would not change it. "All right," said the customer. "Give me the whisky and 16s. 6d. and keep my five pound note." Next morning the customer came in, planked down four sovereigns and said, "Give me back my five pound note and we shall be straight." The publican and the sinner looked at each other. Can you tell at a glance which got the better of the bargain when the customer went away with his five pound note in his pocket?

The question puzzled a whole office full of literary, financial, sporting, philosophical and editorial men—until it reached a girl of eighteen who is engaged in dealing with cash. All the rest were calculating on paper and reaching the result by devious ways. The cash girl saw it in a flash of the eye. Do you? Shut your eyes and do it in five seconds if you wish to beat the cash girl.

Heartless Gamblers.

The rage for gambling at White's and Almack's clubs in London in other days led to most outrageous betting, as to which Walpole tells what he calls a good tale: A man dropped down in a fit before the door and was carried inside. The club instantly made bets as to whether he would die or not, and when a doctor was called in to attend him his ministrations were interfered with by the members because, they said, these would affect the fairness of the bets.

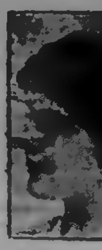
Flowers Add Last Touch to Neckwear

By MADGE MARVEL



I SEE the simple bow of black tulle used for the neck finish for many blouses. It also appears on some of the fichus that are worn outside the gown as a finish where the surplice crosses.

Embroidery on net is not difficult, and it is the thing that makes the best neckwear so very expensive. A few sprigs of conventionalised flowers on the edges of the collar and the yoke portion of the guimpe adds the touch that speaks volumes to the woman who appreciates the fine points of dress.

I have seen several noticeably attractive fichus with yellow lace used with the white net. This is usually Val, and used as narrow frills to outline white insertion. The cream Lierre lace collars are exquisite.

Another most practical dress transformation for the woman who counts cost is the adjustable tunic, which may be found ready-made or can be made at home at a reasonable cost and with very little knowledge of sewing. The one thing to remember in choosing the tunic is to have it appear as if it had a right to existence, and was not simply slapped on to make a show of smartness. Harmony is the one important thing to remember when you make over a frock or brighten one up, or when you plan a new one. It is the word that draws the line between style and dowdiness.

There is a plain shade and goods to match almost all the embroidered fabrics, and I am assured the coat of strong color will be a part of the most desirable summer frocks of lighter shading and fabric.

There are new linens, too, but even they are not the same linen we once knew. They have taken on a suppleness and softness which is due to silken threads, and they appear in patterns, checks and figures of different kinds.

One of the crepes which I actually saw being purchased was of white with yellow daffodils embroidered in solid effect. The coat was to be of yellow novelty duvetyne in the same shade of the daffodil and closely resembling ribbed velours.

The young woman for whom the gown was intended was tall and dark with a clear complexion and hazel eyes with yellow lights. She hesitated between the duvetyne and the satin crepe, which is another new fabric which is quite like panne velvet in appearance.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Sane Clothing Makes Tonic of Winter's Cold

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

DR. HIRSHBERG

I SING of bare arms and sanely clothed men! Of the cold, not "colds," I must speak. The effect of extreme cold upon the human body plays a vitally important part with regard to health. Look about you and judge, even with your non-medical, common sense. Observe the awkward mount of sickness, incapacity, decreased earning power, defective physical and mental powers in these Borean days of blastful winter.

Extreme days of lingering frigidity may, true enough, drive disease and death into many a human nook and corner, but the influence of cold itself for a reasonable time, no matter how severe, is actually an accessory to physical endeavor.

While this is true for robust individuals, who obtain the sleep of the just, the plain victuals of the ambrosial American homes, and who imbibe the temperate nectar of the Pythagorians it cannot be expected to hold for the decrepit, the half-starved, the Great White Wayites, the night owls and the aged.

Cold calms the changing cheek, it cools the scorching vein, restores sanity to the maddened brain, tempers the vengeful steel and inspires to daring deeds.

Cold Is Anaesthetic.

Cold is, medically speaking, like love. It is like a dizziness that "winna let a poor body gang about its business," if that business be bad for the "puir body."

Dr. Thomas Darlington, the former head of the New York department of health, has emphasized the fact that cold lowers your susceptibility to impressions. Even extreme degrees of cold some degrees below zero, if transient in character, increase muscular adeptness.

Curious to relate, cold actually generates heat in your living textiles. The freezing blasts which drive the blood from your skin really burn up food and tissue juices within you. It increases the chemical goings-on inside of you, and thus enhances your power to do and to dare and to hold.

This temporary exposure to inordinate degrees of cold is anaesthetic, removes pain and knits up the ragged sleeve of care by inducing sleep.

Long years of physiological discretion, however, are necessary to decide just how little cold Jane may safely withstand, and how much Roger can endure. The pseudo intelligence which tries cold first is like the old saw of "after meat the mustard, and after death the doctor."

For stern winter loves a dirge-like sound, and in this manner, to lock the stable door after the ass has gone, proves only too often a sad truth. Cold really makes severe inroads upon the health, stamina and vitality of any one not physically at par.

Since there be few, indeed, who may, like Hercules, do what they may, since those earthborn creatures who are 100 per cent healthful are few and far between, an insane desire to go beyond the limits of frozen tissue elasticity can only result in catastrophes.

Victims Are Many.

The efficiency brought about by occasional wafts of Aurora blasts is soon metamorphosed to debility and inefficiency when feelings of cold and discomfort show themselves.

The benumbing effects of an icy atmosphere, the very dulling of the senses so sought when the sensation of pain or absent somnolence indicates it, make for sluggish perception and slothful muscles.

Cold winter, with the strength of its sunbeam, touches the flesh and the soul awakes. If heavy, clumsy, overpowering overcoats, red medicated flannel lingerie and double shirts are worn, their cumbersome weight become a burden a Pantagruel could scarcely manage.

Cold weather is a grim reaper to the ill, the aged, the poor, the underfed and the bambino. Tempering the Greenland air with the glow of a February sun alleviates the frozen taint but little.

All of these sad victims of the cold suffer a stiffening of their blood grooves and that elevation of the blood pressure which makes a Niobe of even a hardened dry-eyed sinner.

Answers to Health Questions

C. R.—What is Jaborandi hair tonic?

Jaborandi tonic is made thus:

Quinine sulphate	20 grains
Tincture of cantharides	2 fluid ounces
Fluid extract of jaborandi	2 fluid drams
Glycerine	2 ounces
Bay rum	6 fluid ounces
Rosewater	16 fluid ounces

The quinine should be dissolved in the alcoholic liquids by warming slightly, then the other ingredients added, and the whole filtered.

This is widely recommended by retired prima donnas and beauty specialists for the scalp, but it is a very bad mixture, and has done lots of harm to the hair of beautiful women. Avoid.

• • •

B. S.—I have some boarders in my house who never clean their hair brushes and they often use each others. What shall I do?

Post a written sheet under each boarder's breakfast plate. Upon it write: "Baldness comes from the germs which hide in your neighbor's hair. Hair brushes are full of microbes."

The hair brush is usually in need of cleansing once a week. Ammonia in water will cleanse the brush. Do not let the back of the brush get into the solution. When all of the dirt is removed rinse the bristles with clean water. Then place the brush, bristles down, to dry.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

My chum says that a girl who marries for money is a fool. I say that a girl who doesn't marry for money is a fool. If you marry for love, you may stay in love and you may not. Then what? But if you marry for money, there you are with what you wanted sure enough. What do you think? BROWN EYES.

OH, fudge, little girl, I don't think about it at all. I don't have to, and then what's the use.

No girl who was ever worth marrying at all ever marries for money. She may think she will; she may say she's going to, and she may try her very best to do it, but, when the time actually comes for the wedding, any girl who is worth the snap of her own finger, will run away and take a place in somebody's kitchen as a very indifferent cook, or she'll go out and scrub floors for a living, or she'll go from door to door trying to sell books to people who never read or face cream to people who have no complexions to preserve—anything, anything she'll do rather than marry for money.

If you marry for love, the love may go—well, what of it?

You don't expect a plate of ice cream to last forever, do you?

Love is the flower that grows along the pathway of life, the only flower that is worth the picking, little girl—never forget that for one minute. If your particular little plant turns out to have more thorns than blossoms, that is your misfortune. But at least you stopped a moment when the dust lay thick in the road and smiled to see the flower springing there—for you.

And, as long as you live, you will remember.

I saw her at the cemetery the other day, a little, withered, plain, old woman. She rose from the side of a low grave, and her eyes were like stars as she turned to go away.

I looked at the name on the simple headstone, "Thomas Riley, beloved husband of Mary." I wonder if he was worth it all—Thomas Riley—the love, the faith, the trust, the deep devotion in that tired little woman's face. But whether he was or not, her love for him was worth the joy it brought her.

Being loved is all well enough, little girl, but, dear me, it isn't a patch on loving.

Let the girl with the mean little mind and the starved little heart marry for money.

She wouldn't know what love was anyway. Money is all she'll ever get; let her have it—and be sorry for her.

You marry for love. If he's plain or if he's handsome, if he's clever or if he's stupid, you marry for love, and hear the silver chimes ring in your happy heart, even if they only ring a little while, and then are mute forever.

They say in Ireland that you can tell those who have ever met a fairy face to face. There's a look about them, a something in the eye.

So it is with those who love or who have ever loved. I believe I can tell them even when I pass them in the street—those who love or who ever have loved. There's a look about them—a something in the eyes. Don't go down to your grave, little girl, without that look about you.

Marry for love and for love alone, if you have to live in one room and wear cotton stockings the rest of your life to do it.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

The Winning Power of a Smile

By Jeannette Young Norton

IT is the "cheery man with a smile that gets the job every time," it is said, so young woman take notice and smile on your would be employer. Sail into the office with head and shoulders erect, simply and suitably dressed, impressing the fact that you are energetic, ambitious, capable, with time enough for business and none for nonsense, and really want the job. Two to one you will get it.

After you get the job, young woman, remember that the habit of punctuality is invaluable, and the unfailing conscientiousness about keeping appointments will endear you to all of your business friends.

If yours is outside work, do not fail to keep in touch with the office, so, though out of sight, you may be reached and they know that you are on the job. Above all, do not plead illness to get a day off, rather say you are going to a funeral, a fight or a wedding instead, as nothing so queers one's employer as to feel that a helper is always ill. Smile on all impartially, from the office boy up; but choose your friends outside of business relations.

Never "discuss" your private home affairs in the office. The people are not interested, and it is best that you bear your sorrows and joys without their assistance. If you want to vote after awhile you must stand beside your business brother and show your ability to attend strictly to business, as he does, handle your earnings with discretion and develop self-reliance, financial judgment and concentration.

Tact, patience and willing endeavor win their way every time. Work full time for salary agreed upon, but demand pay for overtime. It is right and just you should have it, and if the employer is square and needs overtime work he will pay it. If not, he won't ask you to stay again.

If you are an inside worker, see that your desk is tidy and that you know where everything is that is likely to be needed in the course of the business day. Do not flourish about the office attracting unnecessary attention, and, above all, do not discuss your employer, his business methods, or your own salary with other employes. If you do not like it you can leave; if you do, nurse the job.

Sayings of Children

Willie—Grandpa, tell me a story.

Grandpa—Once upon a time, before people thought of marrying for money—

Willie—Oh, I don't mean a fairy story.

Phyllis accidentally discovered a doll that her mother had concealed in a trunk in readiness for the little lady's birthday. The following day at dinner she surprised the family by remarking: "I'm trying so hard to forget something I want to remember that I don't feel very hungry."

Anxious mother—Well, Bobby, and how did you behave at the party?

Bobby—Oh, mummy, I didn't behave at all. I was quite good!

A little Boston girl, who had been attending one of the public kindergartens, fell from a ladder. Her mother caught her up from the ground in terror, exclaiming: "Oh, darling, how did you fall?"

"Vertically," replied the child without a second's hesitation.

Queer Creatures on Land and Sea

Why a Flounder Is Flat

FLOUNDERS are not born flat. Mother Flounder lays her eggs way out at sea. The tide carries them on the surface of the water toward the coast. As the eggs drift they develop, and by and by all the eggs that have not been gobbled down by hungry fish hunters hatch out baby flounders.

At first Baby Flounder is only an ordinary little fish, swimming upright like other fishes. Soon after he is born he drops to the bottom of the ocean. When he is two years old he is about six inches long, but when he is three years his size doubles and becomes a foot in length. At four years of age Baby Flounder has become a full grown fish of some 14 or 20 inches.

Meanwhile a wonderful change has been taking place. Gradually Baby Flounder has grown thinner and thinner, and very, very broad, until at last he is no longer vertical, but flat as a pancake. Moreover, his eyes, which were on either side of his head like any normal little fish, have been travelling! They are now both on the top of his head in a line with each other.

Besides this, Mr. Flounder has wholly changed color. The upper part of him has become of a sand tint like the mud in which he lives, and the under part of him, where no light ever reaches, has grown to be a dull, creamy white.

Nature never does anything without a reason—not even a flounder. Bit by bit she has been fitting Mr. Flounder to live at the bottom of the sea—to slide over the mud easily, to detect his prey as it darts over his head and to hunt for his food without being seen.

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

WHAT'S the matter with you?" asked Brer Rabbit of Mister Squirrel.

"My wife won't tell me a secret I want to know and I am very sad."

"Ha! ha!" laughed Brer Rabbit. "I'll tell you what to do. My wife put my hand in water one night. She thought I was asleep, but I wasn't. I told her a lot of things."

"That's a good idea," said Mister Squirrel. "When my wife goes to sleep tonight I'll put her hand in water and she will tell me where she put my pipe.

"She hid it because she thought I set the house on fire. Good-by," and away scampered Mister Squirrel.

That night, when all was quiet and Mrs. Squirrel was asleep (as her husband thought), he put her hand in water and she began to talk:

"What a dear, dear husband I have. He is so good and kind to me. I don't know what I would do without him."

"Where's my pipe?"

"The boys hid it," said Mrs. Squirrel.

That was all she said, and Mister Squirrel went to sleep without learning where his pipe was.

The next day Mrs. Squirrel met Mrs. Rabbit. "I am very much obliged to you for telling me about Brer Rabbit putting your hand in water. Squirrel did that to me last night."

"What did you tell him?"

"I told him he was the dearest, sweetest husband in the world."

"That's good," laughed Mrs. Rabbit. "People like pleasant things told them, but they don't like to hear what is disagreeable."

FREAK PAINTINGS.

A Tiny Work of Art and Rosa's Transformed Harpsichord.

Specially prepared canvases and gilded frames are not essential to the making of great paintings. This has been demonstrated by the artists who have painted masterpieces on scraps of board, shells, grains of corn and the walls of rooms and prison cells. Some of the most valued art objects belong to the freak class.

The smallest painting in the world of distinctive merit was executed on the smooth side of a grain of corn by a Flemish artist. On this limited surface the artist painted in perfect detail a mill, a miller with a sack of grain on his back, a horse and cart and a group of several peasants standing in a road.

The largest picture ever painted is said to be a panorama of the Mississippi river, executed by John Banvard, an artist who died in Watertown, S. D., in 1891. The gigantic canvas was twenty-two feet high and nearly two miles long. It gave a detailed representation of 2,000 miles of the Father of Waters.

The largest of the old masters' canvases is Murillo's "Appearance of the Christ Child to St. Anthony of Padua." The picture is ten feet wide and eighteen feet high.

It is related that a friend called on Salvator Rosa in Florence one day and found him playing on an old harpsichord. The caller asked the artist why he kept such a worthless instrument.

"Why, it is not worth a scudo!" the friend said.

"I will wager," replied Rosa, "that it shall be worth a thousand before you see it again."

A bet was made. Rosa immediately painted a landscape on the lid that not only sold for 1,000 scudi, but was accounted a work of great merit.

The celebrated St. John's Wood clique of artists in London executed a series of large frescoes in oil on the walls of the studio of J. E. Hodgson, one of the members. The paintings were begun in the winter of 1864-5. Shakespearean subjects were chosen, and the figures were a little under life size.

When Hodgson moved from his studio an unappreciative tenant covered the walls of the room with brown wall paper, completely hiding the paintings. The frescoes were rediscovered by accident forty years afterward and restored.

New Brunswick Amendments.

J. K. Pinder, one of the present members of York County in the N.B. House of Assembly, once did some work for the old Conservative Government on Grand Island Bar in the River St. John, which was very severely criticized by his political opponents.

Some years later Mr. Pinder was making some remarks in the House which rather ruffled the temper of a member on the opposite side, who called out: "What about Grand Island Bar?"

"I do not wonder at the question," replied Mr. Pinder, "for all of the honorable member's troubles in life have sprung from the work on 'bars,' but there is this difference, that there is plenty of water on Grand Island Bar."

SAMSON AND DELILAH—
The Old Testament Version of "A Fool There Was."

Text: "And she said, the Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that the Lord was departed from him."—Judges 16: 19-21.

* * *

The story of this Biblical Hercules I cannot at all understand. When I read it as a literal biography, I stagger in unbelief. The fantastic capers of this middle-aged boy, his wild adventures, his reckless going in and out among enemies, flirting foolishly with the women of his nation's foes; his queer weapon for slaying a thousand men, his going to the trouble of catching three hundred foxes and tying fire brands to their tails to do what could have been more easily accomplished with less trouble and danger, his final overthrow of what must have been a veritable Colosseum—all these unlikely incidents prompt me to look beyond the exact literal story and try to see in it the picture of some great spiritual truth. And this is what I conceive to be the lesson of the story: THE CATASTROPHE OF THE UNBALANCED CAREER OF A SPIRITUAL GENIUS.

Samson is the eccentric genius of the Bible. Emerson says that genius is a ship afire at sea for the diversion of the people on the shore. Genius is lawlessness in talent, brilliance with a blemish, a comet without an orbit, a ship without a rudder, an engine without a governor, a train without a time-table, a locomotive without an engineer.

You can never be quite sure of a Samson's next move. He is not conventionalized. You cannot study one day of his life and then anticipate all the curves and straight lines he will take during the rest of the week. Conventionalised people have a pattern in their make-up, like the wall-paper of your dining room. You know with mathematical certainty what they are going to do to-day. A Macaulay will write so many words in the forenoon, walk just so many miles in the afternoon and play exactly so many games of whist at night. But you can never tell what a Lord Byron will do to-morrow, whether he will be in Scotland or in Greece, in exultation or depression. The Samsons are uncertain character.

And yet there are so many things about this big fellow that we cannot help liking. He is of good parentage for instance. His father and mother were God-fearing people. Before her child's birth Manoah's wife did not drink wine nor strong drink. An angel taught the couple the much-neglected theory of pre-natal influence. Then too what a great big giant he was physically and, I think, mentally. I warrant he could get up his lessons with a lick and a brush, make a note or two concerning his chapter in history and rattle it off in a class the next morning, spending the rest of his time in playing pranks. Like a robust Beattie Nesbitt he could have divested himself of his clothing and on a zero night run a block or two around the college campus on a wager. It is to be noted too that he kept up his youthful enthusiasm in middle life. Mind, he governed Israel during twenty years, and the jokes and puns must have extended into the years when his long hair was turning grey. The world likes a man of fifty who is still a big boy.

So you can easily imagine such a man to be a popular hero. He was the man for the age. There are great extremes of individuality between God's heroes of the ages. God can use all kinds of temperaments. He enlists the work of a rough John Knox and a gentle John Wesley, a burly Oliver Cromwell and a tender Richard Baxter, a fighting Peter Cartwright and a scholarly Charles Finney, an athletic dashing John D. Morrow and a polished Archdeacon Cody. On that particular day a Samson was needed. The Philistine was in the land, the Hebrew youth must have a martial hero, a giant, an optimist, to follow.

But he had an ill-balanced character. His religion was lop-sided. He belonged to the Nazarites, had taken their vows, and his religion was like unto that of modern men whose first duty seems to be loyalty to some fraternal order. You have met such folks; they may be Masons, Odd Fellows or Royal Templars; they take these very legitimate institutions more seriously than they would a church membership, and very often they are most particular about keeping a vow they have given, and not at all careful about other principles very much more important. This man Samson adhered to total abstinence. And like the Dunkards of our county he set a high value on his unshorn hair. But his Nazarite vows did not include a virtuous life. He might have been addressed as the poet addresses poor Abelard:

> "Desire of wine and all delicious drinks,
> Which many a famous warrior overturns,
> Thou couldst repress, nor did the dancing ruby
> Sparkling outpoured, the flavor or the smell,
> Or taste that cheers the hearts of gods or men,
> Allure thee from the cool crystalline stream;
> But what availed this temperance, not complete,
> Against another object, more enticing?
> What boots it at one gate to make defence,
> And at another to let in the foe,
> Effeminately vanquished?"

On the other hand many men of virtue have left other gates unguarded. Francis Bacon, for example, yielded to the single sin of bribe taking. Poor Sulzer, preaching public rectitude and battling against corruptionists with sincerity, we dare believe, did not apply his doctrines to his more personal financial matters.

REVEREND BYRON H. STAUFFER

And the great danger of such freaks of character is an overweening confidence in their own strength, and the false encouragement given by previous escapes from the grasp of temptation. Samson was an ancient example of the once-in-grace-always-in-grace delusion. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Samson is playing with the fire. "Ah, tell me, Samson; tell me the secret of your strength. How do you manage to get away every time?" Delilah asks not from curiosity and admiration, but because she is under contract to the lords of the Philistines. She has not the loyalty of a wife. She lacks even that mis-shapen devotion often shown by weak, sinful women towards a paramour. She is a vampire!

But the cunning old joker does not intend to yield. Oh, no. He has his little jest ready. "If they bind me with seven green withs, I shall be weak." But at the cry, "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson," he breaks those fetters "as a thread of tow is broken when it toucheth the fire." And so, again and again, she finds him still possessed of that strength of which she would have him sapped. But she has a resolution worthy of a better cause. "She pressed him daily with her words and urged him, so that his soul was vexed unto death. And he told her all his heart." At last the Fool becomes the victim of the Vampire.

A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I!)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair,
(We called her the woman who did not care),
But the fool he called her his lady fair
(Even as you and I!)

Oh the years we waste and the tears we waste
And the work of our head and hand
Belong to the woman who did not know
(And now we know that she never could know)
And did not understand.

A fool there was and his goods he spent
(Even as you and I!)
Honor and faith and a sure intent
(And it wasn't the least what the lady meant),
But a fool must follow his natural bent
(Even as you and I!)

Oh the toil we lost and the spoil we lost
And the excellent things we planned
Belong to the woman who didn't know why
(And now we know she never knew why)
And did not understand.

The fool was stripped to his foolish hide
(Even as you and I!)
Which she might have seen when she threw him aside—
(But it isn't on record the lady tried)
So some of him lived but the most of him died—
(Even as you and I!)

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That stings like a white-hot brand
It's coming to know that she never knew why
(Seeing at last she could never know why)
And never could understand.

The fatal day is here at last. Any amateur prophet could have forecasted its coming with mathematical accuracy. But to Samson it comes as a shock. Isn't he feeling fit as ever? The Philistines upon him? Why that is nothing new. He need but go out and shake himself as at other times. What? Is that arm lame this morning? Then he can do it all with the other. But the left hand also seems palsied. The Philistines overpower him in a trice. He is bound, his eyes are bored out. It is all over in what the German calls an eye-wink. "He wist not that the Lord was departed from him." That morning had been marked on the calendar these many years but he knew it not. He had long since been living on excitement. There had to be "something doing every minute." Some people's excessive pleasures are like noxious drugs; they need a larger dosage each succeeding week.

Meanwhile, he "wist not." Pugilist Sullivan wist not that his strength had been sapped during many days of indulgence until he met the younger antagonist.

And all these experiences of eccentric Samsons may occur in middle age. Remember that he had judged Israel twenty years. Paul is well along in the fifties when he writes: "I keep my body under; I bring it into subjection, I smite it between the eyes lest having preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."

What a sad scene! A Samson grinding corn in a Philistine prison! They use him as they would a big elephant captured from the wild. Oh, the crushing sight! A giant, a genius, a God-touched dynamo, furnishing power for the Devil's grinding! A Boston clergyman ran away with a silly woman, leaving wife and children, duty and responsibility, behind him. His "soul-mate" was not long in leaving him, deserting him just as he had deserted another a thousand-fold more worthy. A year later a reporter found the poor fool working in a New York saloon, washing beer glasses and cleaning cuspidors!

But I rejoice that we need not close the book here. The story has a better ending. "Goodbye, Samson, goodbye. Never again will we see thy deeds of valor. Goodbye." "Not yet, not yet; wait just a little till I recover myself," whispers the forsworn prophet. "Come back and see me die. It will be worth while to see me even in my death throes." Aye, Samson is to have one more triumph, even though it be fruitless and unavailing. The spectators on the shore will see one last spectacle, more dazzling and more awful than that which the conflagration of the ship Genius has furnished. The magazines are yet to explode!

Samson must grace the great celebration in honor of the capture of Samson. "Bring out the great woolly dog. Let him make sport for us. Isn't he funny? What an elegant clown he will make for our court gatherings." There he is, in the centre of the Colosseum. His lips are moving. He is praying: "Only this once, O Lord; only this once. Remember me; strengthen me, only this once, I pray thee, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes." The blind man whispers to the boy who is leading him: "Take me to the big twin pillars in the centre yonder, laddie; I am weary. I would lean upon them." Now watch. He grasps the pillars. The shaggy head bends down. The muscles stand out. He roars: "Let me die with the Philistines!" The columns shake and fall! The walls cave in with a crash! The assembled thousands are crushed beneath wood and stone! "So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life." And his brothers come and bore away the body to give it a decent burial in his father's family plot.

O! Samsons toiling at the mill, I speak to you. You may still triumph against your erstwhile victorious adversaries. God will vouchsafe you this last melancholy opportunity. It will be a dying victory, barren to your earthly interests and yet one of great good to all who have gazed on your orbitless life. Pray for strength today to once more rise against your overpowering foes of sensuality. Nerve may have left you, bodily organs may be diseased. Yet summon your will once more and grimly enjoy a dying victory. Declare, by mute humility and penitence, your deep regret for past errors. Let the world know that you die with your face towards Father's House!

O, young Samsons, full of possibility for good or evil, I speak to you. There is no chance like the first chance. Do not forfeit that. We are all given opportunity to triumph over temptation. Life is a great country which we are to explore and possess and cultivate. Thank God for the chance to give battle to sin's besetments. Even the striving against temptation adds zest to life. There is still on record the curious deed given to Sir Philip Sydney by Queen Elizabeth settling upon him three millions of acres of land in North America, "to be by him discovered." But Philip never went out to claim his unique gift, and the glories of exploration slipped from him. But a century later Charles II. gave to the Quaker William Penn a similar deed and he came out to America and took possession. So it is William Penn and not Philip Sydney who stands in stone effigy upon Philadelphia's city Hall. And the great state is called Pennsylvania.

The trophies of moral enterprise are before you, young m[illegible] God-given might, and take possession.

AN HOUR OF THRILLS.

Shooting the Rapids of the Hodzu River, in Japan

The rapids on the Hodzu river near Kyoto must fill even the most blase of tourists with excitement. A train from Kyoto climbs slowly and painfully upward until finally it deposits its passengers at a quaint little siding.

From here, says the Wide World Magazine, one goes to the river bank and embarks in a rude, flat bottomed boat, which is pushed out by four men into the middle of a broad river, reed edged and sleepy.

For a few minutes one glides dreamily along; then, rounding a curve, one suddenly hears the roar of water, and the boat tears down a rapid, just missing the rocks on each side. The high banks race past, death appears imminent, and then, with one mad swirl, it is all over and the boat is on the quiet unruffled stream once more.

This happens again and again for about an hour. At first one's whole mind is filled with the conviction that an accident must happen, but gradually comes a delicious feeling of safety as one notes the marvelous skill these men show in piloting the boat through the seething rapids and one is able to appreciate the beauty of the scene.

Lucien Bonaparte and Wellington.

Lucien, whom I had never seen before his arrival in England, as he was in disgrace with the emperor, was said to be at least as able as his brother and to have more decision of character. I have heard it said that it was he who saved Napoleon on the 18th Brumaire, and, in fact, I had heard him greatly praised. My actual meeting with him, as often happens, did not come up to my expectations. He seemed to me cringing in his manners and false in his look. He is like Napoleon in the outward shape of his features—not at all in expression. I saw him last year, at a concert at the Duchesse de Canizzaro's, beg her to introduce him to the Duke of Wellington, who was present. I saw him cross the room and come up bowing and scraping to be presented to the victor of Waterloo, whose reception was as cold as such baseness deserved. —From Memoirs of Duchesse de Dino.

Spiders and Whooping Cough.

"Will you please give mother a nut to put a spider in, as baby's got the whooping cough?" This extraordinary request was made to a Tiverton shopkeeper the other day by a little girl whose mother believes that if she imprisons a live spider in a nutshell and ties it round her infant's neck the whooping cough will disappear when the spider dies.—London Mail.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

In Pitt's Day the Speaker Kept Himself Stimulated With Porter.

The speaker of the English house of commons holds an enviable position today, but it was not until comparatively modern times that the speaker ceased to be a partisan, nor was his position always one of its present dignity. In the time of Pitt the speaker was accustomed to solace himself with a draft of porter:

Like sad Prometheus fastened to the rock,
In vain he looks for pity to the clock,
In vain the effects of strengthening porter tries
And nods to Bellamy for fresh supplies.

Manners were somewhat looser in those days than they are now. Pitt himself on one occasion showed signs of a too copious libation to the gods, and this gave rise to the celebrated couplet:

I cannot see the speaker. Hal. Can you?
What? Cannot see the speaker? I see two.

It is said that on one occasion Mr. Disraeli arrived at the house somewhat "under the influence" and was so indiscreet as to attack Mr. Gladstone, then prime minister, upon some point of foreign policy. Mr. Gladstone replied witheringly that "the right honorable gentleman evidently has sources of inspiration from which her majesty's ministers are debarred."—Argonaut.

Censure and Curiosity.

"Mr. Johnson," says Mr. Miggles, "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but that story you started to tell at my house last night was one no gentleman of refinement would have told in mixed company. I feel that it is my duty to express my disapproval of such conduct."

"I'm quite sorry," says Mr. Johnson. "I should have thought before beginning it. Halfway through I realized what I was telling, and, you remember, I did my best to end the thing at once."

"Yes, I noticed it fell pretty flat, and everybody could see that you were terribly ashamed. Er—how does the story finish, Johnson?"—Chicago Post.

Modern Improvements.

Patient — Doctor, I'm having an awful lot of trouble with the gas in my stomach. Doctor — Yes, yes; I know. Those old fashioned fixtures are giving people a lot of unnecessary trouble these days. Just step into the next room, and I'll have my engineer wire you for electric lights.—Puck.

Worldly Wisdom.

"Now that my engagement to Edgar is broken off I wonder if he will ask me to return the jewels that he gave me."

"If he doesn't ask for them I'd send them back at once, for in that case they're not genuine!"—Fliegende Blätter.

POSTED ON RUBBER.

He Couldn't Be Fooled About the Growth of the Trees.

A promoter for a rubber company was trying to persuade Mr. Spangler to invest some of his savings in the company's stock. The demand for rubber, he said, was worldwide and constantly increasing. The company owned immense forests of rubber trees and kept an army of workmen employed all the time in gathering the crude rubber. The output was enormous, and the profits—well, the scheme was certainly better than a gold mine.

"I have heard," said Mr. Spangler suspiciously, "that the forests are being exhausted."

"That's true to some extent," answered the other, "but we are not depending on the existing trees. We are planting hundreds of square miles with new trees."

"How long does it take for a tree to grow big enough to tap?"

"Only six or eight years."

"That won't go down with me," said Mr. Spangler, with emphasis. "My wife has had a rubber plant in the front parlor for six years, where it's warm all the time, winter and summer, and it hasn't grown a foot in all that time. No, sir; you can't fool me on that!"—Youth's Companion.

He (to second wife)—I am glad to be in this charming spot once more. She—I thought you were here on your bridal tour with your first wife. He—Yes, but I was so much in love I never saw the landscape.—Fliegende Blätter.

Mean.

"What did the lady say when you told her I was out?"

"She smiled and said, 'Friday's not always an unlucky day.'"

An Ancient Rain Gauge.

The credit of inventing the rain gauge has always been given to Castelli, a contemporary of Galileo, who made one in 1639, but the director of the Korean meteorological observatory, Dr. Y. Wada, has shown that it is due to a Korean king. The latter, King Sejo, in the year 1442 caused an instrument of bronze to be constructed to measure the rain, and it is set out in the historical records of Korea that this was a vase fifteen inches deep and seven inches in diameter, placed upon a pillar. An example of this was placed in the observatory, and each time the rain fell the officials were instructed to measure the height and to make it known to the king. Other instruments were distributed to the provinces and cantons, and the results of the observations made were sent to court.—Knowledge.

Without Imagination.

There is a certain New York business man of a rather waggish disposition who contends that his wife has no imagination.

At dinner one night he chanced to mention a tragic circumstance he had read in the evening paper on his way home. A passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in midocean and had never been seen again.

"Was he drowned?" asked the wife.

"Of course not," answered the irrepressible hubby, "but he sprained his ankle, I believe."—Lippincott's.

SHORT COAT BLOUSES SMART WITH THE MODISH TIERED SKIRTS

We have had nothing more fascinating and becoming than the contrasting blouse and skirt for some time. The figured silks with their quaint printed designs are especially suited to combinations of this description. An excellent illustration of a figured blouse and plain skirt is given in 8094. Russian green duvetyn fashions the skirt and the panel on the front of the blouse. The blouse itself is made of a figured silk serge in which there are minglings of green, blue and red. A French blue velvet girdle is effective. To make this frock in size 36 it requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material for the skirt and 1¾ yards of contrasting silk for the bodice. The short coats and coat blouses are particularly smart with the new two and three tiered skirts.

An extremely smart little coat blouse is shown in 8109 happily combined with a two tiered skirt. The skirt is of plaid velvet, which is one of the very newest materials, and the coat is of plain black velveteen with revers of the plaid. The blouse is cut all in one piece.

To copy this costume in size 36 it will require 1¼ yards of 36 inch material for the blouse and 3⅝ yards of 36 inch for the skirt in size 24.

No. 8094—sizes 34 to 44.
No. 8109—sizes 32 to 42.
No. 8002—sizes 22 to 32.
Each pattern 15 cents.

THE CONTRASTING BODICE OF CHIFFON OR SILK EFFECTIVE AND ECONOMICAL

Feminine to a degree are the simple blouses of net and chiffon that are used on so many of the afternoon and evening frocks. Very often their sole adornment consists of a few tucks or plaits and a narrow band of ribbon outlining the neck and perhaps edging the sleeve. A few rhine-stone or pearl buttons serve to close and to trim them at the same time.

The effective little gown shown in No. 7965 is developed in one of those quaint figured silks which are so reminiscent of grandmother's day and are so becoming to youthful, slender figures. The underblouse of tucked figured net is rendered doubly pleasing by the trimming straps which give the impression of suspenders. Two broad plaits on the front of the skirt afford the necessary drapery.

In size 18 this frock may be copied with 2⅜ yards of 36 inch material with 2⅝ yards of 36 inch figured net or silk for the blouse.

Crepe de Chine in cream color with a tiny scarlet ring scattered over the surface is the very effective material used for the other blouse (8067), which is a kimono with a collar slightly draped in Japanese fashion. Two yards of 36 inch material are needed to make this blouse in size 36.

The skirt is a two piece model showing the fashionable "burnous" drape made up in broadcloth in a harmonizing, dull shade of red.

For size 24 2⅜ yards of 43 inch material will be required to copy this skirt.

No. 7965—sizes 16, 17 and 18.
No. 8067—sizes 32 to 44.
No. 8068—sizes 22 to 32.
Each pattern 15 cents.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK AND ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills 'begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve indigestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Haliburton, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Grocery Traveller Objects.

Yesterday, Mr. G. Prescott, of Montreal, an old grocery traveller, who has been coming here for more years than a blushing bride of 21, admits to, asked the Times, "Why did the Retail Merchants Association of Peterborough turn down Coleman Bros. and Tommy Hooper, when they placed an order for the Monday banquet." He also said, "Surely these local merchants should have got a piece of the business of the Retail Merchants' Association.

Nethersole's Tribute.

Olga Nethersole, the famous English emotional actress, who has played in nearly every civilized country, and travelled throughout the length and breadth of the globe, has paid a high tribute to hotel accommodation in Winnipeg, in a letter addressed to Chas. L. de Rouville, resident manager of the Fort Garry Hotel. At the conclusion of her week's run at the Orpheum Theatre she wrote: "Before leaving I would like to tell you how very comfortable I have been during my stay at your beautiful hotel. Your staff and service is perfect and the cuisine excellent."

New Hybrid Animal Described.

Mr. William White, who 41 years ago moved from Smith township to Verulam township, Victoria County, was in the city yesterday. In conversation with a Times reporter, Mr. White told of the new hybrid animal being raised by Mr. Missom Boyd of Bobcaygeon. Last winter he fed 15 of these hybrid animals which are a cross between a buffalo bull and domestic cows. He noted that the hybrid animal is taller than domestic cattle and heavier in the front shoulders. The hair is longer than that of cattle. They are very wild, and, strange to say, have no horns. Mr. White drove back to his home yesterday afternoon.

Couldn't Work So Cheap.

The crops were heavy, and the field-hands were few. 'Silas Warren [illegible] owned one of the largest farms in the country, tried to induce even [illegible] Blodgett, the laziest man in the village, to help with the harvest. "[illegible] Si," said Ned, laying down his whittling, "how much will ye pay me for work for ye?" "I pay every man what he's worth," answered [illegible] Warren. Ned scratched his head meditatively. Then he picked up his whittling. "No, Si," he drawled, "[illegible]

A LOCAL DOCTOR IN SERIOUS RUNAWAY

Last week a local doctor had a somewhat exciting experience. This, as magazine writers would call "Disciple of Esculapius" was driving down George street. The name of this doctor shall be nameless, but it rhymes with that of Oriental Hotel manager. As the steed sped down George street, the bit in its mouth broke.

One witness insists that the horse saw a lady dressed in a slit skirt, thus the accident. Another witness claims that the cold weather snapped the bit. Anyhow, the bit broke. The medical man, like Marconi, felt at the end of his "ribbons" that an electric storm was on. Did that doctor wilt? Not on your life, gentle reader! The doctor was not phazed any more by his broken bit than though he were weilding a scalpel searching for a vermiform appendix full of peanuts on a floating kidney, abroad on the bosom of Little Lake. Well, that horse sped down George street at a rate, it is said, taken by Det. Newhall, of 43.27. As its pace increased the animal reached abnormal speed of 41.78. It finally wound up at the family barn in safety. No damage was done, but this exclusive story is the result.

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS--"CASCARETS"

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, mean Liver and Bowels are clogged—Cheer up!

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull throbbing sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Other points in proportion. Fares from points East of Toronto will be slightly higher. Return limit two months.

Homeseekers' trains leave Toronto each Tuesday during March and April.

LIQUOR BARRED AT GRADUATES' DINNER

First Arrangements Were "Wet," But Temperance Spirit Will Prevail.

Toronto, Feb. 21.—The University College graduating dinner will be dry in spite of the arrangements of the committee in charge, who decided otherwise. As a result of Principal Hutton taking a hand in the matter some of the existing arrangements had to be cancelled, and the date had to be changed from Feb. 24 to some time during the early part of March. The head of University College called the offending committee into a conference which had as a result a considerable change in the arrangements. The plans of the "wet" committee were completely changed, and the official graduating of U.C. for 1914 will be along strictly temperance lines.

Principal Hutton reminded the men of the class of '14 of the disgraceful scenes which had accompanied similar affairs at Oxford, and urged that in this respect at least Toronto should herself be superior. The desired result was obtained.

WHAT WILL BRITAIN DO IN THE BENTON CASE?

Her Action is Anxiously Awaited by the Authorities at Washington—President Wilson's "Watchful Waiting" Policy Severely Denounced

Washington, Feb. 22.—Another day of waiting has not served to minimize the serious status of the Mexican situation produced by the killing of Wm. S. Benton, a British subject, at Jaurez, by the constitutionalists there. The Government, while still investigating the tragedy, sees no reason for rejecting the explanation of the Constitutionalists that Benton was tried by a military court on charges of being an "armed prowler" and making an attempt on the life of Gen. Francisco Villa, and was executed by shooting. In these circumstances the problem of future action by the United States or Great Britain resolves itself into a determination of several questions, all interrelated, based on the broad principle of whether the execution was justified.

What Was Benton's Crime?

This main question of whether Benson was guilty of acts that would give any military court authority under the common practices of war to inflict the death penalty has a number of ramifications, any of which might serve as the actual basis for a demand that would produce a crisis in Mexican affairs involving the United States. Among them are these suggestions:

Was Benton given a fair trial? Could any trial of a foreign subject be fair when he was denied communication with the proper representative of his country's interest, in this case the American Consul at Juarez, had no opportunity of obtaining proper counsel or time to prepare a defence? Without doubt the British Government will insist that it has the right to determine what the answers to these questions should be.

THE FRENCH LANGUAGE

The Postmaster-General, Hon. L. P. Pelletier, has stated that no orders or printed matter in the two languages or in the French language has been issued by the Department, not sanctioned and required by the B.N.A. act under Sec. 133 which section is as follows:

"Either the English or the French language may be used by any person in the debates of the Houses of the Parliament of Canada and of the Houses of the Legislature of Quebec; and both of these languages shall be used in the respective records and journals of those Houses; and either of these languages may be used by any person or in any pleading process in or issuing from any Court of Canada established under this Act, and in or from all or any of these courts of Quebec. The Acts of the Parliament of Canada and of the Legislature of Quebec shall be printed and published in both those languages."

At Lethbridge, Alberta, there will be a $25,000 Carnegie library erected by the end of the year.

SURVIVORS OF WRECKED BARQUE ARE STILL MAROONED ON ROCK

Wild Seas Prevent the Rescue of Men, Who Have Been Without Food Since Friday

London, Feb. 22.—Eleven survivors of the barque Mexico, from Mexico for Plymouth, which ran on the rocks off the coast of Wexford, Ireland, on Friday, have been on the rocky Islet of Keragh since the afternoon of that day. They have been without food or water, and have no shelter except that afforded by a rough screen which they made of sails that were washed ashore. The wild seas which have prevailed have prevented the tugs and lifeboats that have been in that vicinity from reaching the marooned men.

One lifeboat got within forty yards of the little island to-day, and the men attempted in vain to throw a line to the islet. The lifeboat men say the survivors are all foreigners. They are unable to speak English and indicated the fact that they were hungry and thirsty by pointing to their mouths.

The lifeboat men and the tugs were compelled to withdraw from the scene at nightfall to-night on account of the danger to their own craft, so the castaways must endure another night of suffering. It is feared that some of them will not survive the night. The rescuers will start out again at dawn.

The Mexico has been pounded to pieces and all signs of her have disappeared. There is no doubt that the entire crew of fourteen of one of the lifeboats which went to her assistance have been drowned. Another lifeboat was smashed against the side of the Mexico but the crew clamored aboard the vessel and were afterwards rescued.

It has been a terrible week-end along the British coasts. Fierce westerly gales have prevailed, and many wrecks were reported.

There's a Reason for Aches and Pains

Often some unsuspected habit, such as tea or coffee drinking, is the root of the trouble.

The average tea or coffee drinker who suffers from sleeplessness, headache, indigestion, nervousness or heart trouble usually says, "Tea and coffee don't hurt me," until some day Nature hauls him up with a jerk.

It's poor business to trade health and a clear brain for a few cups of tea or coffee.

The pure food-drink

Postum is made of prime wheat and a small portion of molasses. It has a delicious flavour, but none of the drugs, "caffeine" and "tannin," which make tea and coffee health destroyers.

NORTH OXFORD MAY VOTE ON LOCAL OPTION

D. R. Ross Re-elected President of Temperance Association.

Woodstock, Feb. 22.—The North Oxford Temperance Association passed a resolution at their annual meeting yesterday afternoon recommending that Woodstock submit a local option by law at the next municipal election.

The proposal to vote on the Canada Act was discussed and rejected. If the ministerial association fall into line, it is quite likely that local option will be tried out again next January. So far they have not been a unit on the matter, their congregation being divided as to the wisdom of submitting the question to a vote next year. D. R. Ross, of Embro, was re-elected president.

"JACK CANUCK" PRAISES MR. J. H. BURNHAM, M.P. FOR HIS BILL.

The following appeared in the last issue of Jack Canuck, and will be read with interest:

To Ham Burnham, Esq., M.P. of Peterborough:

Dear Ham.—A Montreal paper has been actually saying that you have no brains. That, we take it, is altogether irrelavent. Brains are not a strict necessity for men who go to the House of Commons. If they were there would be a lot of vacant seats there, especially in the Senate.

You seem to have stirred up the Montreal Star, which is Sir Hugh Graham's paper. Anybody who can say things which get under Graham's skin has some class, believe us. He is the man who is reported to have told another newspaper proprietor, some years ago "Take my advice, never pay any man who works for you more than you can help." We don't know that the advice would be needed with the average newspaper proprietor in Canada. We never yet heard of a newspaper proprietor who went to the poorhouse because he paid his help too much. If anybody went to the poorhouse it was the other fellow.

As to your bill to abolish titles in Canada, Ham, we think you were perfectly right. Canada has been made a laughing stock by the way knighthoods and other titles have been handed out to a lot of dubs who have never done anything but write fulsome editorials in praise of anyone who happens to be in power; who got rich by means of thousands of acres handed to them by the Government; or who built big houses for the purpose of entertaining royalty, and then declined to pay a fair amount of taxes on them.

To our mind, the man who works hard and honorable all his life, trying to earn an honest living and supports his wife and family, in the face of hundreds of discouragements, is a whole lot more deserving of a title than a Cabinet Minister who has never done anything but talk politics and draw his salary; or a millionaire who has gained his wealth by the sweat of men who worked for him and to whom he failed to pay a decent wage. Keep it up, Ham. Your bill will pass some day.

JACK CANUCK.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION A BIG SUCCESS---SPLENDID ADDRESSES

The annual banquet of the Retail Merchants' Association, held in the large and splendidly appointed dining room of the Oriental Hotel last night was a success in the biggest sense of the word. About 125 gentlemen sat down to a sumptuous repast. Mr. R. C. Braund asked a blessing, and the gathering proceeded to spend the most enjoyable hour of the evening. Business matters were forgotten and the happy laughter and merry hum of voices drove the cares of shop and warehouse to a remote corner of the minds of all present.

The menu was the subject of favorable comment on all sides, and the spread was a credit to Peterborough's fine hotel.

After the tasty vituals had gone to what the late President Cleveland of the U.S. called "innocuous Desuitude," Mr. Thos. Barrie, chairman, rose and opened the toast list by proposing the toast to The King. This was drank right heartily and all responded by singing the National Anthem.

"The Provincial and Dominion Legislatures," was next proposed, and responded to by Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P. The speaker voiced the pleasure he felt at being present at the annual banquet of such an organization as the Retail Merchants' Association, and remarked at some length on several bills now before his Parliament affecting the Retail Merchants' Association. He paid a glowing tribute to the spirit of thankfulness that prevailed amongst the members of the Provincial Legislature, irrespective of politics, at the recovery of Sir James Whitney, and was sure that the feeling was mutual throughout the whole Province. He closed by again thanking the chairman and members for the opportunity afforded him of addressing them on the splendid facilities they offered to the public of Peterborough for the sale and purchase of goods; on the beautifully lighted and ventilated store of our city and on their whole-hearted endeavors in catering to the comfort of their patrons.

"The Wholesale and Retail Merchants" was next on the toast list and was first dealt with by the chairman, Mr. Thos. Barrie welcomed both wholesalers and retailers alike, and stated his pleasure at seeing the two mingle together for the common good.

Mr. J. Edgar, as a wholesaler, expressed his appreciation of the courtesy and business ability displayed by the retailers in their dealings with him. He was pleased to see the friendship and harmony existing between the two, such unity of spirit tending to more pleasant business relations, and having a great influence on the maintained of a standard of prices by our dealers.

Mr. Kishor and Mr. Hopwood, in short addresses thanked the chairman and getlemen present for the opportunity of expressing their delight in being able to unite around the festive board with the business men of Peterborough.

"The Retail Merchants' Association,"—President Barrie here delivered a splendid address on the needs of association in all walks of life and the duty of the Association as a whole, and of each indivihual member. The high cost of living came in for considerable comment at the hands of Mr. Barrie—its causes, results, etc.

Mr. R. C. Braund, the 1st vice-president of the Association, made a stirring appeal to the members for a spirit of brotherhood to exist in the Association. "Take as your motto the Commandment, 'Love one another,' and success is bound to attend your efforts," concluded Mr. Braund.

Secretary Cameron gave a brief review of the aims and objects of the Association. He commented at some length on several bills now before Parliament, affecting the merchants of our Province, and dealt at some length on the question of cartage and transportation facilities. Mr. Cameron paid a glowing tribute to the power of the press. An Association with the press a unit behind it can have no fear of ultimate success, said Mr. Cameron, and the press was a unit behind our Association. He looked forward to an increase in membership to 150. The present membership numbers 134, and made a strong appeal for renewed activities and greater efforts on behalf of the members for the coming year. He paid a tribute to the Oriental, and in explanation of a statement made by a traveller appearing in yesterday's Morning Times, stated, that both Messrs. Coleman and Hooper were interviewed regarding the banquet, but it was found they could not accommodate the large attendance expected.

The guest of the evening, Mr. M. S. Madoel, of Napanee, was next introduced, and for a half hour held the undivided attention of all present. Mr. Madoel is a clear, forceful speaker, and his words sunk deep in the minds and hearts of his listeners.

In his opening remarks the speaker dealt with the value of organization, not only of one branch of industry or business, but of all walks of life—bankers, lawyers, doctors, etc. He was pleased at the presence of Mr. Peck, it gave them assurance that he had their interests before him, and that they had a strong backer in the Legislature. He was proud of the advancement the city of Peterborough had shown in recent years. He referred to the conditions now-a-days as compared to years ago. Stores now opened at 8 o'clock and closed at 6, instead of opening at 7 and staying

WOMAN'S NEW HAT CAUSE OF FATAL DUEL ON FRIDAY

Husband Upbraided Her For Making Extravagant Purchase — Appealed to Brother

Budapest, Feb. 22.—A woman's hat let to a fatal duel here on Friday. A lawyer named Baboossy quarrelled with his wife about a new hat she had purchased. The wife appealed to her brother, an aviator named Lieut. Madin, to take her part. The brother did so, and was insulted by Baboossy. The Lieutenant thereupon challenged Baboossy to fight a duel, and the lawyer accepted. Baboossy is not a duelist, but happened to hit his brother-in-law and killed him at the first shot.

Twice since the duel Mme. Baboossy tried to commit suicide, but was prevented in the nick of time. She is completely demented and has now been placed in an asylum.

"APPLYING THE PASTE MAKES HAIRS VANISH

(Toilet Tips)

The popularity of the delatone treatment for removing hairy growths is due largely to the fact that it is quick in action and does not mar the skin, and since its introduction many beauty experts use it in preference to the electric needle. To remove the hair or fuzz, you mix some powdered delatone with a little water and apply to the objectionable hairs, then in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have entirely vanished. Excepting in rare instances, one treatment is sufficient.

A C.N.R. UNDERSTANDING WITH THE GOVERNMENT

Report That the Borden Cabinet is to Make All "Reasonable Efforts" to Secure the Federal Granting of Substantial Aid to the Railway

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Despite denials of "official" arrangements or agreements it may be taken for granted that Sir William Mackenzie and his associates have reached an understanding with the Government under which the latter is to make all reasonable efforts to procure the Federal granting of substantial aid to the C.N.R. in return for political assistance in time of need.

According to the unconfirmed, but quite generally accepted rumor, the Government is to continue its efforts to have the Grand Trunk Pacific break its agreement, charging such a possible culmination against the previous Liberal Administration, and to plead that it would not do for the country to run the risk of having two mammoth railways thrown back upon it. This, it is estimated, will prove a weighty reason for further financing the Canadian Northern from the public treasury.

To Call a Conference.

Another argument which is to be of service for those who desire to see the loan go through concerns principally the western Provinces, from which, at the present time, the most vigorous protests are being made. It will be pointed out that Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia have extended huge bond guarantees to the Canadian Northern and its subsidiary railways, and that failure of the Federal Government to come to its assistance at the present time may seriously jeopardize the credit of the Provinces by making them subject to heavy liabilities. To this end it is suggested that, in extremis, the Dominion Administration will summon an interprovincial conference in an endeavor to secure thereby a stay of the alarming public sentiment which seems to have set in all over the country against further raids upon the treasury by Mackenzie & Mann interests.

DANCING OF TANGO FORBIDDEN TO CANADIAN ROMAN CATHOLICS

Archbishop Bruchesi Declares That "Unquestionably Its Author is the Spirit of Evil"

Montreal, Feb. 22.—In a circular letter read to the faithful Roman Catholics to-day Archbishop Bruchesi describes as "bad and scandalous," and absolutely forbids the dancing of the tango. "A certain dance has invaded our society," says the Archbishop. "I do not know its origin, but it has spread over the whole world with increditable rapidity. Unquestionably its author is the spirit of evil. No words are too forcible to stigmatize as they deserve these unbecoming movements of the body, those really lascivious contortions, which no self-respecting person would allow. Certain hotels popular in Montreal did not hesitate to use it as an advertisement, which fact does not redound to their credit."

After referring again to "this dangerous and unseemly amusement," the Archbishop goes on: "I forbid it absolutely as bad and scandalous, and I likewise forbid the other new dances which resemble it. I appeal to all truly Christian women, and I beg of them to band together against these licentious dances and the indecent fashions of the day."

THE BLANKET FISH.

This Dreaded Sea Monster Wraps Its Body Around Its Prey.

The manta, or blanket fish, is common to the warm parts of the Pacific. Around the Mexican penal colony on Tres Marias islands, not very far from Manzanillo, it is one of the most efficient guards for the prisoners incarcerated there. Not a man has ever been known to escape from this dreaded prison by swimming. No sooner does a human body strike the water than a school of these monsters appear, flying like giant bats through the sea. They throw themselves on the hapless swimmer, crushing him to the bed of the sea, and there suck the flesh from his bones with their powerful mouths.

The manta grows to mammoth dimensions, though the one which I saw, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, was comparatively small, not weighing over two or three tons and not being more than fifteen feet across. The fish is nearly square in outline, the wings forming great right angles, which stretch out from the body, giving it a rectangular appearance. The fish swim by flapping these wings and are sometimes called "sea bats" on this account.

Mantas swim with incredible rapidity for what is apparently so ungainly a fish, and once they sight anything in the water, unless it be the speediest fish or shark, they overhaul it and simply close it, wrapping the entire blanket-like body around the unfortunate victim. Even with a sharp knife it is almost impossible to reach a vital point in the manta's body. For this reason they are the most dreaded by divers of all the dwellers in the sea, and the diver's life is not without its perils, take my word for that.

Getting Back.

"Gee, no!" exclaimed the pretty cash girl. "I don't want nothin' to do with you. I wouldn't marry you if you was the last man on earth. Is that plain enough English for you?"

"It is certainly plain enough," said the mortified bookkeeper, "but it isn't English!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Dear Girls.

Milly—You know, dear, we've been engaged for two years, and I think it's time we were getting married. Tilley—Oh, I don't know, dear. If you really love him you'll let him be happy for a little longer yet.

Pandemonium.

"Nature knew what she was doing when she deprived fishes of a voice."

"How do you make that out?"

"What if a fish had to cackle over every egg it laid?"—Exchange.

Fame can never make us lie down contentedly on a deathbed.—Pope.

PEPYS, THE DIARIST.

Pronouncing the Name of the Garrulous Old Gossip.

Lovers of Pepys often dispute over the correct pronunciation of his name. The form Peeps is the one that has chief authority on its side, and it is according to analogy in other like spellings, such as Wemyss, pronounced Weems. Peeps still holds good at Cambridge and dates from its bearer's own time. It is also retained by the representatives of Samuel's sister, the Pepys Cockerell family, who are heirs to his fame and some of his property. The late Rev. J. W. Ebsworth, an indefatigable collector and editor of ballads, adopts this pronunciation in his pleasing stanzas on "A Gossip at Deptford."

For instance:

The state has no servant of all whom she keeps
Like my squab little friend, who no labor does shirk,
The pattern of quill driving clerks, Sam Pepys

A disturbing element in the discussion is that the branch of the family represented by the Earl of Cottenham pronounce the name Peppis.

No bearer of the name has ever been known as Peps, though Ashby Sterry, a respected member of the Pepys club, follows this common but erroneous pronunciation in this excellent epigram, published in the London Graphic November, 1891:

There are people, I'm told—some say there are heaps—
Who speak of the talkative Samuel as Peeps,
And some, so precise and pedantic their step is,
Who call the delightful old diarist Pepys,
But those I think right, and I follow their steps,
Ever mention the garrulous gossip as Peps!

Woes of Translators.

The way of translators is hard, especially where African native languages are concerned. Favorite English hymns, translated for the benefit of the natives, sometimes contain renderings not altogether faultless. "Go labor on, spend and be spent," was given as "Go blunder on," etc. The most extravagant instance, however, was the hymn, "Lord, Dismiss Us With Thy Blessing," which the natives were exhorted to join fervently in singing. Months later the missionaries discovered that what they really had been singing was, "Lord, kick us out, softly, softly."—Glasgow Herald.

Selfishness Real Cause of Divorce

By WINIFRED BLACK

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.

Winifred Black

YOU can no more drive a man away from a good table than you can a cat, and if you do he will come back. The way to keep husbands at home is to feed them well."

So says Dr. Wiley, the food expert.

Tell me truly, Dr. Wiley, do you and the rest of the men really mean half of the astonishing things you say about yourselves?

I hope not. I really do hope not.

Men seem to be such good, kind, well-meaning creatures.

Some of them actually appear to have hearts and souls and consciences and will power, and some wish to have self-control. I should hate to believe that it's all a sham, and that under all the civilization and all the polish and everything that means or seems to mean an attempt at some kind of spirituality, men are just plain animals after all.

Haven't you changed a bit, Dr. Wiley, since we women wove a mat of rushes for the front of the fire and hung garlands of scented grass on the stonewall of the cave where we all lived together with the bones and the dogs and the half-dried skins of wild animals?

"Who ever heard of a divorce in rural France?" says Dr. Wiley. "The French peasants know how to cook."

True, Dr. Wiley, who ever did hear of divorce in rural France. And who ever heard of a club there either, or of theatre parties, or golf links, or any of the other things that take men away from their homes.

Egotists Instead of Animals

If I had a husband who lived with me just because I was a good cook I would hand him his hat and tell him to go and find some affinity who had a better recipe for rabbit pie or chicken a la marengo than I had.

What a lot of nonsense people do talk about divorce and the cause of it.

There is just one cause for divorce, and cooking hasn't a thing in the world to do with it.

Any man who would run away from his wife because she put too much salt in the soup would run away from her because he woke up one morning and noticed that her nose was too long or her eyelashes were not quite as curly as the eyelashes of his perfectly good stenographer.

What is the one cause for divorce—the real cause? Selfishness, and selfishness alone.

It takes different forms, but you look into the records of any divorce court in the world, and right at the bottom of the whole miserable business you will find the wretched trait of selfishness squinting out at you like an evil spirit.

"My husband did not understand me."

"My wife was not sympathetic."

"He fell in love with some one else."

"She met some one she liked better."

And little children are left homeless and some poor woman is turned adrift in the world—alone; or some wretched man nurses for the rest of his natural life a cruel bitterness of the heart. All because of the old, old reason.

"I couldn't stand it another day; I wouldn't put up with it; I was so lonely; I was so unappreciated; my wife never gave me a decent meal; my husband never took me out with him."

I, my, mine, me, myself—always the same old story.

So you fell in love with another woman did you, Mr. Man, and after that you really couldn't endure your home at all and be happy.

Who asked you to be happy? All that any one on earth asks of you in this world is to be good, to be decent, to be just, to be honest, to be kind.

What if you are in love with another woman—or think you are? Does that release you from the promise you made to love, cherish and protect the girl that you took away from her father and mother and sisters and brothers and people who really did love her, when you only pretended to?

Love—sometimes when I look at the divorce records I wish there was never any such word.

Selfishness the Real Cause

It is so profaned and so dragged into the slime of utter selfishness.

It is not love that you feel when some little goose of a girl makes a fool of you—Mr. Middle-Aged Husband. It is just flattered vanity.

It is not love that makes you forget your own little children and run away with some man who won't care a button for you after his month or so of infatuation—Mrs. Feather Head. It is vanity with you, too, and utter and complete selfishness.

Bad cooking at the root of divorce! Fie, fie, Dr. Wiley. Who is it who gets the divorce? Nine times out of ten it is the woman, and, if you will go to court some fine spring morning you will see there a good many plain, honest, kindly women who are not at all bad cooks, as cooks go, in their station of life.

And if you could see the other woman in each particular other case, it would probably be impressed upon you that cooking has very little to do with the matter.

When a man leaves his wife for another woman, I don't believe he even thinks of the salt shaker or the pepper pot. I hope he doesn't anyhow.

I'd rather see a man a sentimental egotist than to believe that he was just an animal that was all right so long as he is comfortably fed.

The French peasant woman is an excellent cook. She is also, from what I hear, a good many other things that the average American would prefer not to talk too much about. What suits a French peasant would never in the world suit a plain everyday American—either in the way of food or in the way of wifely devotion.

Good cooking is a good thing, Dr. Wiley, an excellent thing. But when you say that bad cooking is at the bottom of the divorce evil you are like a man standing on top of a tall building shouting the time of day through a megaphone, and shouting it wrong.

Nobody is going to believe you. Watches are too cheap and too easy to get.

Lucky King Solomon

By Tom Jackson

KING SOLOMON was big and great, his wisdom still survives; he was a muchly married man and had three hundred wives. He managed to support them all and they were quite content—those who could not live in the house he corralled in a tent. In those old days the price of eats was cheap in foreign lands. Today King Solomon would be in the receivers' hands. Think of three hundred loving wives demanding steak today, think of the awful butcher's bill that Sol would have to pay!

They had no opera dresses then, or other fancy frills, or Solomon would surely have defaulted on his bills. The tango and the turkey-trot were not then all the rage, or Solomon, for safety, would have lived within a cage. For ev'ry wife most surely would insist upon her right to do the pretty tango step with hubby ev'ry night. Three hundred tangoes in a night of dance would be too much. 'Twould put a king, or any man, no matter who, in Dutch, to follow with three hundred trots and then with bunny hugs, would send the strongest man on earth to dwell amid the bugs.

If Solomon at present reigned instead of days of yore, three hundred limousines per day would stand before his door. For ev'ry wife would want, of course, her own exclusive car, and Solomon's old pocketbook would get a fearful jar. So Solomon was wise indeed to live long years ago, when no one had a motor car and cost of eats was low.

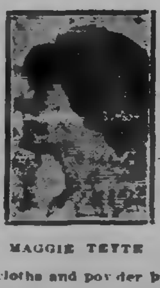
PRESERVING BEAUTY'S BLOOM

Grace Valentine,
Who Advises Against "Rough" Massage

Complexion "Don'ts" for Springtime

By Maggie Teyte

Prima Donna of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company.



MAGGIE TEYTE

I MET a woman famous in her profession and in society for her marvellous complexion and her matchless figure. She was buying great quantities of sterilized gauze and absorbent cotton in a drug store.

"Laying in a year's supply of washcloths and powder puffs," she explained. "I never use anything more severe than this gauze on my face. There's a beauty secret for you. And the only powder puff I possess is made of a dab of cotton. I make them up by the hundred, tying each little puff with a bit of thread, and keep them in a perfectly air-tight glass jar. I never use one but once. I better say I use two or three every time I powder my nose."

There's a useful hint for all of us. It is simple and cheap to have always a clean and germless puff. And, really, many women are a bit careless about the powder puff. They forget that it accumulates dust and distributes it with the powder. The chamois is worse.

I gained many suggestions in my little chat with this lovely woman, who, at the age of a grandmother, has the face of a debutante.

She never uses hot water on her face, because she says it dries and wrinkles the skin and makes one old before her time.

Lukewarm water and the purest of castile soap form her nightly face bath, and in the morning she dashes cold water over her face and neck. She gives the cold water treatment as the best remedy she knows for keeping the throat firm and youthful.

She warns against massage, no matter how gentle, and says it, combined with steaming, will put more wrinkles in a woman's face than any other treatment she knows of.

After washing her face and drying it on the softest of linen towels, or with the gauze, she pats into it a nourishing cream made of only the purest and simplest of oils.

Whatever cream the skin will not absorb is removed with a bit of gauze, and in removing the cream she is careful not to rub the skin, but uses the same gentle patting.

Grace Valentine, who is noted for her beauty, describes a recent experience as follows:

"The vigorous rubbing which has been called massage is so seldom resorted to nowadays that it seems almost superfluous to mention it, but the other day I had a young woman sent to me by a friend with the request that I give her whatever beauty work I had to be done, as she was young and ambitious, and my friend was anxious to see her succeed.

"She was a pretty girl, and told me where she had studied and how she felt she was peculiarly fitted for the work.

"Then she commenced on my poor face. She rubbed with deep and heavy strokes which loosened the skin from its moorings and brought the tissues from place. I stopped her. But I fear the explanations I gave her of why the entire theory and practice of her work were wrong had no effect. She left with more resentment than sorrow in her bearing."

If there are lines forming it is permissible to use the gentlest smoothing stroke in the opposite direction. It is a stroke between smoothing and patting. It is the same motion you would use in smoothing the crease out of a delicate bit of lace or fragile trimming. It really surprises me to see how careful women are of their dresses and finery, and how thoughtlessly careless of their complexions.

Yet it is easier to replace the lace than the bloom of the cheek.

This is the time of the year when I am ever so careful of my skin. I use no more water on my face than I am obliged to. The water is hard, the air in the house dry, the outside air raw and cold, and the skin dries and chaps so easily. During the day when my face needs cleansing I wipe it gently with some good cleansing cream without dragging the skin. There are many such on the market. The idea is to get one that will not promote a growth of hair, and I prefer one which is composed only of vegetable oils.

Before going in the air I apply plenty of good, pure powder. Powder over cream forms a splendid protection for the face. Also, if properly used, it is not apparent. It is not necessary to make a powder and cold cream plaster

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

Pets or Babies?

XXXII.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

"ISN'T he cunning!" cried Mary.

I glanced at the horrid pampered little Pomeranian Mrs. Ascot was holding in her lap, and politely assented. I made a mental reservation for the good of my soul.

We were calling on the Ascots that evening, and had been duly introduced to this horrible, exotic little tyrant who fills the place of a child in Mrs. Ascot's somewhat fevered existence.

I can't for the life of me see what women find to like in these beastly little canine rats. I learned much of the habits of this particular one in our evening with Mrs. Ascot.

"He's so clever!" exclaimed Mrs. Ascot, with enthusiasm. "Do you know in the morning when the maid opens the door he fairly flies up the stairs to me and jumps in bed. And when I cover him up in the eiderdown comfortable he rolls up in the most beautiful fluffy little ball and goes sound asleep."

Hygienic, isn't it? I had a shudder down my backbone. I can't for the life of me understand such an attitude. A woman, daintily clad, fastidious, esthetic, will shudder if a dirty beggar brushes her skirt ever so lightly, but she'll permit an animal with unsanitary, germ-laden hair to curl up in a comfortable ball in the eiderdown comfortable that covers her. Another marvel of inconsistence!

I thought, of course, that Mary shared my opinion of the unspeakable little canine, whose spoiled yap for attention had punctuated our evening.

"Wasn't he a dear, Peter?" inquired Mary on the way home.

"Who?" said I rebelliously. "Mr. Ascot?"

"Mr. Ascot, indeed!" sniffed Mary unhumorously. "Certainly not. I meant Tiny Tim, the Pomeranian."

"Lord Almighty, Mary," I exclaimed, "I think it's positively revolting to see a grown woman act like a fool over such an animal as that. She'd much better be fondling a baby."

"Peter," said Mary, indignantly, "don't be coarse!"

"Coarse," I exclaimed, a little shocked. "I had no intention whatever of being coarse. I mean it. Whenever I see a woman fondling a beast like that I lose respect for her. She's wasting, in a horrible way, a lot of maternal energy. Wouldn't you rather see the wonderful mother light in a woman's eyes over a baby than over such a disgusting little brute as Tiny Tim!"

"Peter," said Mary primly, "you do say the most indelicate things. Mrs. Ascot hasn't a baby, and she doesn't like them."

"Doesn't like them!" I exclaimed heatedly. "And still she likes that hirsute bunch of rags?"

"It's different," said Mary haughtily.

"A baby and a Pomeranian are certainly different," I admitted, "and the advantage lies heavily with the baby. I hope Mrs. Ascot will have a baby some day and chloroform the Pomeranian."

Mary frowned.

"Peter," she said primly, "I see no reason why we should be vulgar or indelicate."

Now Mary, I fear, is a prude. I've run aground on the shoals of propriety before.

Tonight somehow it nettled me.

"Mary," I said, "the sooner you learn that mention of the big salient facts of the universe is not indelicate the nearer you'll be to a wholesome broadening of your mind. Women have babies, and it's a fine, true, holy fact. We ought all to be glad of it and not ashamed. Prudishness doesn't conduce to dignity of any kind. There's a great difference between licentious conversation and facing reverently the facts of life."

Prudish women make me tired.

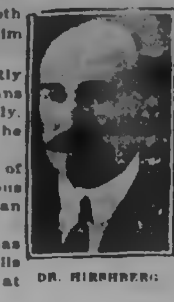
Secrets of Health and Happiness

Ills Cannot Flourish Where Laughter Reigns

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.



DR. HIRSHBERG

PICTURE to yourself Jennings or Baker holding both his sides! That is laughter. Laughter is manly vim and muscular perfection clasping his pelvis.

To be grave exceeds all power of face in a buoyantly healthy individual. The saving grace of humor means that men, no matter how successful socially, financially, pedagogically and politically they may be, are not in the full bloom of human vigor without laughter.

Laughter is the cipher-key which Hygeia, goddess of health, clasps to her bosom. Men may be wise in various ways, but they are not full of health unless they can laugh.

He who laughs last laughs best only because he has learned that health means success, and laughter spells health. Laugh first, last and always with others, at others and most of all at yourself.

The proof that militant emotionalists, vice-crusaders, antis at this and antis at that are below par mentally and physically rests upon the universal observation that such romanticists are wofully lacking in a delectable sense of laughter.

Do they ever smile? Are the walls vibrant with their laughter? You may bet the bottom of your boots the answer is nay.

It is inconceivable that such physiologically unnatural sentimentalism could be associated with the joys of life and the human nature which goes with the sunshine of laughter.

Health Is Infectious.

Life without laughter is a dreary, sickly blank. People who do not encourage themselves to laugh, whether they are clergymen, philosophers, reformers, moralists, prudes or presidents, are always pompous, self-centred and sneeringly domineering about the very habits, health and happiness of others.

The word "hearty" is correctly associated with laughter because laughter is a muscular act which includes the heart muscle and the rest of these valuable and vital organs.

Health, like disease, is infectious; therefore the inextinguishable guffaws which rock the very skies are contagious and stimulate the lazy, flagging, disused muscles of those within hearing.

The man that laughs is the man that is beloved. Laughter is the flow of the soul, the embodiment of certain liquid emotions called "hormones," juices which pour into the tinkling brooks of your blood current as well as into your lava stream called "lymph."

The reason that you, perforce, make yourself laugh often when you might rather cry is because you are well and hearty. It is not mere philosophy carried by manly men to its highest pitch to conquer melancholy tumults of the soul by shaking laughter.

The Antidote for Gloom.

It is more than that. It is the sound, physiological antidote for depression, the "dumps," Old Whiskered Gloom and the other "hormones" of grievous emotions and ill-health.

That want of the capacity to laugh was recognized before these new experimental discoveries proved it, as evidence of degeneracy, physiological and hence moral, is plain from Herr Teufelsdrockh remarks in "Sartor Resartus". "The man who cannot laugh is not only fit for treason stratagems and spoils, but his whole life is already a treason and a stratagem."

Answers to Health Questions

READER.—Since I had nervous breakdown, when I read or study much I have pain, heat and itching in the crown of the head. What treatment would you recommend?

If you have pain, itching and heat all at once in the head it is not a serious condition, merely the same sort of an annoyance which you have with a fly or mosquito buzzing about.

You must direct your attention away from this physical buzzing and put your thoughts upon some task, business or ambition to be accomplished. Keep out doors in the sunlight, sleep in an airy room and wear eye-glasses if you need them.

* * *

J. F. C., Philadelphia.—Kindly explain why people cannot keep awake when they are reading.

Usually this indicates that there is an improper strain upon your eye muscles which require first aid from eye-glasses. Have your eyes examined by an ophthalmologist—not a spectacle "fitter"—at once.

CONSTANT READER.—My 6-year-old girl has had a swollen ankle for nearly a year. The X-ray shows it was only a sprain.

Have the ankle massaged upwards toward the knee, never downwards. This should be done three times a day for several months. Be sure, however, that there is no tuberculosis in the joint.

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

WHO is that coming?" asked Jack Rabbit of Billy Bunny one evening when they were both peeking out of the window.

"It looks like Mr. Squirrel," said Billy, as that interesting little fellow hopped along the fence near the Rabbits' home.

Sure enough, there was a knock at the door and in walked Mr. Squirrel, bowing very low to Brer Rabbit, who was reading his paper.

"Tell your good wife that Mrs. Squirrel wants her to come over to tea tomorrow," said Mr. Squirrel.

"Very well," answered Brer Rabbit. With that Mr. Squirrel went out.

Baby Bunny was fast asleep in the next room. He woke up and asked for his doll.

"Jack," said Brer Rabbit, "take Mirandy Lou in to your baby brother."

Baby Bunny took Mirandy Lou and went to sleep. Brer Rabbit began reading again.

"I wish you would tell us a story," said Jack Rabbit.

"You boys bother me too much," said Brer Rabbit. He took Jack and Billy on his lap and began:

"Once upon a time there lived an Indian boy by the name of Silver Star and he had a sister named Ka-wash-a. Every day they used to go into a large cave near their home and play house.

"One day they were playing as hard as they could when a great big bear came right in front of the cave and looked at Silver Star and Ka-wash-a. He growled 'Br-r-,' just like that."

"Oh! Oh!" came a voice from the next room.

Brer Rabbit rushed in to Baby Bunny and there he was holding Mirandy Lou tight in his arms. "What is the matter?" asked Brer Rabbit.

"I dreamed Mirandy Lou fell out of bed," said Baby Bunny.

When Brer Rabbit came back Jack asked: "What became of the Indian boy and girl?"

"Well," said Brer Rabbit. "Right in front of the cave where they were some hornets had their nest, so they poked the nest and the hornets came out and drove the bear away, while Silver Star and Ka-wash-a hid in the back of the cave. They ran home when the bear was gone and——"

But Billy and Jack were fast asleep.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

King George is quoted as saying that he is greatly pleased pleased because the Conference on Safety at Sea was a success. George's pleasure may be due in large part to the fact that he feels that if the suffragets makes things any hotter at home than they are now he will be compelled to take refuge on the briny deep.

FARMERS AND PARCEL POST

But the farmers and the city dwellers must make use of this new instrument placed at their service, or they cannot derive from it the proper benefits. In this work, from the nature of the case, it is necessary that the farmers should take the first step. They must take practical steps to let the city dwellers know where they live and what they have to sell. With such information made public the city dwellers would be helpless.

CONSERVATION OF OIL

The federal government is to be commended upon its move to retain a certain control over all petroleum lands owned by the Dominion. Petroleum lands are natural resources of immense potential value. By monopolizing the oil fields of the United States at an early stage of development, the Standard Oil trust has grown tp be a world-power of menacing proportions. Navies of the world might be dependent upon the supply of petroleum, as fuel; aeroplanes, motor cars, and nearly all engines driven by internal combustion, also draw their source of energy from the petrokeum fields. The United States government is taking steps to secure its own oil supply by nationalization of certain petroleum lands not grabbed by Standard Oil. The British Admiralty is scouring the world fot sources of oil fuel. Although petroleum has not been found in very large quantities so far in Canada, the government is making a wise provision by preparing legislation to control its export, if it should be discovered in the western provinces. It is intended to give the British Admiralty first claim on all exported petroleum Following the policy of conservatism, so ably advocated by Hon. G. E. Foster regarding forest lands, it would be well to retain the oil fields of Canada for the benefit of all the people from the first, and not allow them to pass under the control of private monopoly as they have done in the United States.

"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New"

ALL WHO LACK VIGOR, THOSE WHO ARE DISPIRITED AND WORN OUT SHOULD READ THIS CAREFULLY.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that efort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and the perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

ABOLISHING ENTRANCE EXAMS.

A year ago Inspector Putnam of Ottawa, got rid of the High School entrance examinations in that city. And now the Toronto board of examiners has decided to do the same in Toronto. Hereafter the certificates of proficiency issued by the principals of public and separate schools will be accepted for admittance into the high schools. If, however, the principal of a public school refuses to grant a certificate of proficiency to any pupil, and that pupil thinks that he, or she, is really qualified for high school work, an examination will be granted, and if the pupil passes he may enter the high school. And in the case of pupils of private schools the examination will, af course, still be necessary.

$100 REWARD $100

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

COWBOYS OF SPAIN.

Splendid Horsemen, but They Use Their Spurs Without Mercy

The perfection of Spanish horsemanship is to be seen among the vaqueros, ganaderos [illegible] by various names the mounted herdsmen of the Andalusian plains are known in brief, what we should call a cowboy. Every farm seems to maintain a large number of these, for each herd flock or drove has its own herdsman goatherd or swineherd, as the case may be. The vaqueros are a fine looking lot of men. Tall, thin, light and loosely made, they look ideal horsemen, as, in point of fact, they are though their mounts are poor.

The vaquero rides very high on a huge saddle, with a long stirrup and straight leg, using a single rein and a very heavy curb, but he has such beautiful hands that, although using this barbarous bit, he never cuts his horse's mouth about. It is different with the animal's sides, however, for he uses his spurs without mercy, and the white horses of which there are a large number all have ominous red stains behind the girths.

All the herdsmen who look after cattle carry a long lance, called a garrocha, of thick and heavy wood, which, except when standing still, they always carry "in rest" and not "at the carry," presumably on account of its great length and possibly its weight. With this weapon, in the use of which he acquires amazing dexterity, the garrochista is able to control the most unruly brutes in the herd, not excepting the savage fighting bull.—Wide World Magazine.

BIRTH OF A WING.

Evolution of the Aquatic Pupa Into the Dragon Fly.

Says a writer in the Scientific American: "A wonderful spectacle is presented by the sudden apparition of an insect's wing at the completion of its metamorphosis. The transformation of the grub into the butterfly, though familiar, is none the less amazing; but the evolution of the active and gossamer winged dragon fly from its ugly and sluggish aquatic pupa is still more impressive. Early on a May morning the pupa emerges from its cocoon at the bottom of a ditch, swims on its back by paddling with its long haired paws to the stem of an aquatic plant and climbs up out of the water. Then after a momentary pause the skin suddenly bursts open and the perfect insect appears, with closely folded wings, which soon unfold and assume their final form.

"The older naturalists thought that the insect 'swallowed air,' with which the wings were inflated. In reality the air is absorbed in the digestive organs, causing an increased blood pressure, which mechanically expands the wings. The presence of dew is also necessary; hence the first flight is always made at dawn.

"This spectacle of the birth of a wing may be observed in dragon flies reared in an aquarium, the atmosphere of which should be moistened with an atomizer when the pupa rises to the surface."

Ego.

An ego is a Latinized I. All men are created egos and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable something of which neither statute, ukase, edict, injunction, beggar, magnate, book agent nor promoter can deprive them. He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who filches from me my ego takes that of which he already has enough and makes me not at all.

Women without votes have egos and, strangely enough, would still have them if they secured the votes; hence egos are not a political issue.

An ego is what a man is when he has nothing and is nothing else; that is to say, he is then first person singular and no particular gender.

An ego is neither soul, body, spirit, family, country nor [illegible]. It is neither moral nor pathological. A criminal has just as much ego as a parson and no more. Some egos are better than others, chiefly our own.—Life.

Cockney Chivalry.

There was a crush in the pit, and the anaemic looking girl stood with the late comers behind the last bench. The young man in front of her, comfortably seated, was not too absorbed in the musical comedy to note that the girl looked tired as she doggedly stood out the first act. He rose when the curtain fell. "Would you," he said, pushing past her, "like to mind my seat while I go out for a drink?" The age of chivalry is not past.—London Chronicle.

Peps What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tabloid or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages?

Peps—this newest remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing-tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tabloid form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and lung troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

ZAM-BUK IN THE HOME

Read How Useful It Proved in These Widely Different Cases.

Zam-Buk's strongest point is its effectiveness in all kinds of skin diseases and injuries. Just note how excellent these persons proved it in widely different directions.

Sore Heel.—Mrs. C. A. Campbell, of Powassan, Ont., writes: "One of my heels was very badly blistered by a pair of new shoes, and the poisonous dye from my stocking got into it, and made a bad sore. For a week I could not put on a shoe, and suffered great pain. I applied Zam-Buk, and in a few days it drew the poison out and healed the wound."

Bad Cut.—Mrs. J. Virgint, of Onondaga, Ont., writes: "Zam-Buk healed a bad cut which I sustained. I was hurrying across my yard one day when I slipped and fell heavily, my knee striking a sharp stone. At the moment I did not realize how badly I was hurt, but I found I had a bad cut about two inches long, very jagged and very deep. We bathed the cut and applied Zam-Buk. This stopped the smarting very quickly, and in a few days it had healed the wound completely. For cuts and bruises Zam-Buk is a splendid remedy."

Eczema Cured.—Mrs. Antoine Arsenault, of Maximville, P.E.I., writes "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to any person suffering from eczema. I had this disease and was under doctors' treatment for two years, without any good result. I then tried Zam-Buk, and in the end it cured me."

Zam-Buk is just as good for piles, blood-poison, festering sores, pimples, eruptions, cuts burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap 25c. tablet.

THE SPIRAL NEBULAE.

One of the Terrifying and Mysterious Forces of Space.

The most stupendous manifestations of force of which we have any knowledge are presented by the spiral nebulae, whose mysterious and terrifying forms were first clearly revealed by the Lick observatory photographs made in 1898-1900 by the late Professor James E. Keeler. The heavens are full of them; they exist by thousands—and as astronomical photography is brought to greater perfection their amazing shapes tend more and more to upset all former ideas concerning the processes of creation and destruction going on in the interstellar spaces. They affect in an equal degree all theories about the origin and ultimate fate of our own solar system.

Who would imagine on looking up at the starry heavens some quiet night that the earth is like a person lost in the midst of the whirring wheels and spinning shafts of some enormous mill or machine room, where running belts, whirling spindles, champing pistons, grinding cogs, gyrating governors, dizzying flywheels and leaping rods confuse the eye and the mind and paralyze the limbs with the terror of impending annihilation? We are not aware of this startling situation because, while we see the stars, we do not see what is among the stars. The spinning machinery of the universe is revealed only in photographs, and as far as our senses are concerned it performs its functions with a silence which to the imagination becomes a part of the horror of space.

These cosmic wheels spin with incalculable velocity, but the span of human life is but a second of time in comparison with their periods. If we could magnify time so that a second would become as a century, then an hour would be equivalent to 360,000 years, and the true aspect of the spiral nebulae would burst upon our astonished senses.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Glass Windows.

The first glass window in England was put up in an abbey about the year 680. Glass windows, however, did not become general for many hundred years, and as late as 1579 the glass casements at Alnwick castle, the Duke of Northumberland's seat, were regularly taken down when the family was away from home.

MOTHER! THE CHILD IS COSTIVE, BILIOUS

Don't hesitate! A laxative is necessary if tongue is coated, breath bad or stomach sour

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful today often saves a sick child tomorrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, halfsick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally. This is a sure sign that it's little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy, after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig strups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Company." Don't be fooled?

FOND OF ELECTIONS.

In Switzerland They Select Even Gravediggers by Ballot.

According to Professor F. F. Roget of Geneva, the Swiss have the greatest political intelligence in the world today.

"Every citizen of a canton is a Swiss citizen," says Professor Roget. "One must become a member of some local commune to become naturalized and in order to do so must be accepted by the local communal council.

"Every male Swiss citizen is an elector from the age of twenty, there being no property qualification. Every Swiss is a soldier and every soldier an elector. The federal elector may vote wherever he may happen to be, guarantees being taken that he votes only once.

"The cantons are the political units, and no elector may exercise political rights in more than one canton. On moving from one locality to another the Swiss must wait three months before he may exercise the franchise in his new neighborhood."

Professor Roget declares that "every collective authority in Switzerland is elected.

"The foreigner," he states, "is often surprised to see in a Swiss newspaper on a Monday the results of all kinds of elections on the Sunday. If he had gone into a polling booth on the Sunday he would have found in this corner a clerk at a desk, at which the elector would vote for the local schoolmaster.

"In another corner would be a desk at which he would vote for the local judge, in another part of the same room he would vote for the local gravedigger, and so on through a whole series of officials, all of whom are popularly elected.

"The result of this training is that the political intelligence of the Swiss is extremely developed, and that he thoroughly understands what he is voting about at home in his native country, and that when he goes abroad he finds it very easy to understand and to take part in any political movements among which he may find himself."—Exchange.

A Sinecure.

General Horatio C. King, on one occasion narrating some war memories, said:

"We suffered many hardships on both sides, but the poor, brave Confederates suffered most. I remember a grizzled old colored man who at the outbreak of the Spanish war applied for a place as an army cook.

"'What experience have you had?' the old fellow was asked.

"'I was cook, sah, fo' a Confederate regiment in sixty-fo',' he answered—'that is, sah, I had the position of cook, but, to tell the truth, I didn't work at it.'

"'Why not?'

"'There wasn't nothin' to cook, sah.'"

Doctors in Russia.

Dr. Ralph Thompson, in Medical Europe, states that "in Russia nobody ever asks a physician the amount of his bill. It is universally understood that a gentleman pays his doctor a fair sum—such a sum as he can afford to pay within the limits of his income and his sense of generosity. The Russian mind cannot conceive how a man engaged in the holy pursuit of saving life and alleviating suffering can put a price on his services." After this it is not surprising to learn from the same authority that Russia is the only European country of importance where the medical profession is not overcrowded.

The City of the Dove.

When mighty Amru went to conquer Egypt he camped on the east bank of the Nile opposite Memphis, that great twenty miles long capital of mud bricks whose western verge was the pyramids and whose mud brick houses have all vanished. Amru crushed the Egyptians and came back to get his camp to move over and occupy Memphis. A dove had built in the folds near the top of his tent. Blood bathed Amru, the ruthless, would not let her be disturbed. A new city started about his tents. It grew northward along the Nile. It is today Cairo. Memphis is only a name.

His Flag Was Up.

When the crowd assembled for their game of ball Johnnie, the pitcher, was missing. Jimmie was sent to investigate.

"Is Johnnie at home?" asked Jimmie of the sister who answered his knock.

"'Course," answered the sister. "Don't you see his shirt on the line?"—Success Magazine.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR EXPLORERS

Huge Tracts of Globe's Surface Are Desolate Wastes or the Home of Savages

On a rough estimate, about seven millions of square miles, or one-eighth of the total land surface of the world, are waiting to be discovered. Some 900,000 square miles of this lie in the Arctic regions of the North, but among the frozen tracts that form "Antarctic" in the South, where Scott and his gallant followers perished, nearly 5,000,000 square miles are relegated to the sole use of whales, seals, penguins, petrels, and other animal and bird inhabitants of frozen homes.

It is true that human communities could never be formed in such climes as these, but the scientific world is ever eager for the discoveries of explorers, and even among uninhabited districts their work is never wasted.

In Arabia there exists a tract of unexplored country nearly five times as large as Great Britain. It stretches from Mekka almost to the south-east coast, and is called Dahkna, or "The Dwelling of the Void."

A Riverless Tract

Probably no more desolate waste is to be found on the globe, for not a single river is estimated to flow throughout its entire 400,000 square miles. Some authorities state that the whole desert is not worth a dollar. Others give credence to the legend that treasures and hidden cities lie in the heart of the sands.

Of quite a different character are the enormous mountain-fastnesses of South America, which lie along the Upper Amazon and in the districts of Columbia and Peru. The celebrated treasure of Cusco lies secreted among the Peruvian heights. Impenetrable forests, mountain jungles, and innumerable fever-spreading rivers hold the most intrepid adventurers at bay, to say nothing of carnivorous ants, malignant snakes, water-moccasins, and those most deadly of serpents, anacondas. During recent years over a dozen expeditions were either wholly or partially wiped out in their efforts to wrestle with these regions.

Rich in Minerals

Although the famous El Dorado which set the sixteenth century ablaze has never been unearthed, the country generally might fittingly be called El Dorado, from the rich minerals and priceless stones emanating therefrom.

Strange, wild-eyed men descend occasionally from the mountains, bringing wonderful fragments with them. But they refuse to act as guides to those who would accompany them back.

It is curious to realize that vast portions of our own Empire have never been seen by British eyes or the eyes of any white men. Nearly a quarter of Australia is still unexplored, mainly in the west, where the population averages only one person in about twenty square miles. According to this basis, England's total population would work out at 2,500.

New Guinea has baffled countless expeditions, though many are still trying to fight their way inland from the coast. Despite the fact that the interior of this island is practically a geographical blank, it is neatly divided on the maps between Britain, Germany, and Holland. Among its products are birds of paradise, spices, and cannibals.

An Amazonian Empire

Another particularly interesting district which has so far defied civilization lies secreted among the Himalaya Mountains. Rumor says that it is presided over by women, who are responsible for such rude laws as are necessary even in a lawless district, manage the affairs of state, and live in a luxury of inverted Mormonism by possessing four or five husbands apiece.

The foregoing selection does not exhaust by any means the list of geographical blanks waiting to be filled. Before the Atlas Complete can lie on our shelves we must penetrate the darker haunts of Borneo, North America, the Congo basin, the seven-hundred-mile mountain range that stretches from Der Fur into the heart of Sahara, and numerous other spaces.

SCRAPS OF KNOWLEDGE FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Lighthouses and lightships dot the coast of Great Britain at the average rate of one every fourteen miles.

Immigrants landing in Canada between November 1st and March 1st must possess at least $50, at other periods of the year at least $25.

A regiment of 1,000 men could readily find shelter under a single banyan tree. In India there is one of these trees which has 400 main trunks and over 3,000 smaller ones.

It is said that the Bank of France has an invisible studio in a gallery behind the cashers, so that at a given signal from one of them any suspected customer can instantly have his photograph taken without his knowledge.

France has a new device for carrying on correspondence by phonograph. The record is made on a square of prepared cloth, which can be sent through the post in an envelope, and is said to reproduce the voice with great accuracy.

A petrified man was sold by auction in Paris. The man lived some thousands of years ago in Patagonia. He was about 6 feet 3 inches in height. Though he is now a stone statue, the body bears traces of two deep wounds.

Within the Antarctic Circle there has never been found a flowering plant. In the Arctic regions there are 762 different species of flowers.

The scarcity of elephants in India may be inferred from the fact that in 1835 one of these animals could be bought there for $225; now the price has advanced to $4,000.

From the summit of Mount Diablo, California, may be seen a phenomenon of a curious description. Four times a year—once every three months—the sun rises at such an angle that a shadow about thirty miles long is thrown on the plain beneath.

In order to attract domestic servants the New Zealand Government decided to pay the whole of women's passage money if the immigrants were unable to pay the prescribed portion of the fare, the money so advanced to be refunded by instalments.

The clock in the facade of St. Lazare Station is the first in Paris to have the newly adopted official numerals of 13 to 24 for the hours after noon. From 1 a. m. till 12 the figures 1 to 12 appear on the dial. As noon strikes they disappear, and the figures 13 to 24 will take their places.

SNAKES LIKE MUSIC

Their Nerves Are Affected in a Similar Manner to Dogs

Science has been studying the question as to whether or not snakes have an appreciation of music. This applies particularly to the cobra, which responds to the piping of a gourd instrument played by the East Indian fakir with a rhythmic movement suggesting a dance. The conclusion seems to be that it answers to the musical notes much in the same way as a dog does—that is to say, through a special or nervous sympathy. When the whistles blow at noon in the Zoo the wolves set up a great howling in concert. Whether or not they enjoy this sort of music is disputed, though probably they do, for some dogs undoubtedly take pleasure in harmonious strains and will run a considerable distance to sit up in front of a hand-organ and "sing," while other dogs unquestionably suffer from certain kinds of music and express their pain in lugubrious howls.—London Tit-Bits.

THE WEARING O' THE GREEN

It was the Bard of Avon who asked: "What's in a name?" but there are plenty of modern instances where names seem meaningless. Take, for instance, the title of "the Irish-Americans." This is a worthy athletic organization with headquarters in New York. Its active members are widely known both in the United States and Canada, where their fleet feet, sturdy arms and powerful limbs have brought fame to their colors. The athletic championship of the Unittd States was won by them at Chicago, and in the list of prize-gatherers the "Irish-Americans Club" was represented by men bearing the truly Celtic names of Myers, Rosenberg, Abel Kiviat, Hannes Kolehmainen, Bruno Brodd and P. Lund. But they were aided by such sturdy Finns and Swedes as Mel Sheppard, Pat McDonald, T. Ahearn, M. Fahey, Mat McGrath and Pat Ryan. Quite an athletic melting-pot.—Montreal Star.

Blind Men Swim Straight

The man who is unfortunate enough to lose his sight, or to be born blind, is, says a medical authority, severely handicapped on dry ground but he can, if he is a swimmer, find his way easily enough in the water. Blind people generally have a keen sense of hearing, and they can steer themselves in the water by sound as well as an ordinary man by sight. If they are swimming towards a certain point, a whistle from time to time will enable them to reach it with unerring accuracy. This fact has recently been proved by some interesting experiments. A race which took place between blind men and ordinary swimmers on a lake resulted in a victory for the former. Normal swimmers lose a good deal of time in raising their heads for the purpose of keeping an eye on the winning post. This also prevents them from concentrating all their attention on speed.

A remarkable photograph of the trail of a meteor in flight was made by an English soldier in India.

Mr. Balfour's Drive

Mr. A. J. Balfour is very enthusiastic about golf. And thereby hangs a tale. One day he was waiting for a train for Windsor at Paddington Station. He was carrying a resplendent, gold-handled umbrella, and as he gazed abstractedly round, his eye caught sight of a cork lying on the platform. Obviously forgetting his surroundings, he strolled towards the cork, took up a correct attitude, and made a splendid drive with the cork. Just as he did so his umbrella snapped, and a portion of it followed the cork across the line. This recalled Mr. Balfour to his surroundings, and he was embarrassed to find that he had been providing a free entertainment for the people on the platform.

DAVE ALTIZER

"Base Devil Dave" Altizer, who has a fine record in the American association, is a base ball freak. Each fall some major league magnate pays Joe Cantillon, of Minneapolis, a good price for Dave, hoping he has finally "arrived," and will shine in the fastest company. And each spring Altizer is sent back to Minneapolis for much less than he cost. He is much of a baseball mystery as the "why" of the spit-ball. Altizer is gingery and fast, although he has rather a crabbed temper which he shows when he goes to bat muttering. At his best he is a Trojan—mighty at bat and in the field.

It cost one million dollars to excavate for the foundation of the Woolworth Building, New York.

BETTER TEAM WORK NOW THAN OF YORE

Cy Young Says This is Indisputable Fact But It's Hard to Judge Individuals

There is no denying that baseball has improved since I started in the game nearly a quarter of a century ago, says the veteran Cy Young. Perhaps there hasn't been so much improvement in the individual players as some may imagine, but there has been a big change in team play. There really is no way to tell whether individuals have improved or not. In horse races and athletics we have records which indicate whether there has been improvement, but in baseball we have nothing of the kind.

We cannot prove, for instance, whether a pitcher like Walter Johnson has more speed than Amos Rusie had in his palmy days. It is merely a matter of opinion whether our best infielders are better than the men of a quarter of a century ago.

But in team play there is no chance for an argument. You no longer see outfielders rooted to one spot. For almost every batter they change position, and, in fact, knowledge of the batters is almost half the game. Infielders use their brains more than they used to. It is no hit-or-miss arrangement which man will cover second on an attempted steal; it's clockwork for the second baseman to cover first on a sacrifice. Nothing is being overlooked to make the game better and faster.

Do not imagine, for a minute, that pitching hasn't improved. When I started into baseball, all a pitcher needed was speed. As a matter of fact, that was all I had. Now, to be successful, a pitcher must, first of all, have control. He must know the weakness of each batter. He needs a change of pace, a fast one and a slow one, to be anywhere near the top, and he must include a curve ball in his stock.

And just as long as men think, the game will improve. It is only natural that it should do so, when brainy men devote the best part of their lives to the study of the game. Baseball is not perfect. It never will be, and for that very reason it continues to hold its popularity.

WOOD IS VALUABLE

Good Substitutes Found For Rapidly Vanishing Oak of Ontario

Over 1,200 wood-using industries in Ontario contributed the data for a bulletin on this industry issued by the Forestry Branch, Ottawa. Thirty-four different kinds of wood are used by these industries.

The bulletin shows the increasing poverty of Ontario with regard to the more valuable work-woods. Almost half of the thirty-four kinds of wood used are obtained principally from outside sources and three and one-half million dollars are annually sent out of the province for imported wood stock. The imported oak alone costs one million six hundred thousand dollars annually, for this tree has become commercially extinct in Ontario while the hickory and chestnut groves of southern Ontario have also almost entirely disappeared. Even good clear white pine is becoming hard to obtain and its market value is steadily rising for it represents twenty-one per cent. of the total wood consumption in Ontario for industrial purposes.

Of more interest to the small consumer of wood-products are the side lights thrown on the possibility of substituting cheap home grown woods for the expensive foreign species. Recent tests made of their physical properties have demonstrated the suitability for certain purposes of many native species, hitherto despised by the dealers. For hardwood flooring in place of the oak and maple now in general use, may be substituted the home grown birch and beech which take a high polish and have the advantage of being considerably cheaper. Likewise for interior finishing, the expensive oak can be very closely imitated by stained black ash and stained birch is almost undistinguishable from mahogany, while stained red gum requires an expert to distinguish it from the costly Circassian walnut. The expensive white pine is being replaced where durability is not a requisite, by the cheaper spruce, basswood and elm. Poplar and balsam-fir are two of the most common trees in Ontario and that they have wider uses is evident from the fact that poplar is highly valued for hardwood flooring in Manitoba while balsam-fir is perhaps the most widely used native species in the Maritime provinces.

FOOTBALL NICKNAMES

In England the big football teams have nicknames just as the baseball and lacrosse teams have here. For instance the Norwich City professionals are the "Canaries." Other clubs bears the name of either bird or animal. Millwall are described as "Lions," and their playing-pitch as the "Den." Newcastle United are the "Magpies," and Hull City are "Tigers." In fact, nearly every professional club has a second name of some sort. Bury are usually referred to as the "Shakers," and Woolwich Arsenal as the "Gunners." Fulham, the "Cottagers," and Nottingham are the "Lacemen." Sunderland are called the "Wearsiders," because of their close proximity to the River Wear, Chelsea are the "Pensioners," and Southampton are more often known as the "Saints."

Freak Golf Games

Two English golfers undertook to play from Maidstone to Littlestone-on-Sea, a distance of about thirty-five miles, in 2,000 strokes. They actually accomplished the feat in 1,087 strokes. In view of this a well known player made a bet with Neville Foster of Ashdown Forest Golf Club and W. Warman of Newton Green Golf Club that they could not play from Forest Row to Crowborough over Woodland Heather, over several steep hills, a distance of about eight miles, in 250 strokes. The feat, however, was accomplished in 184 strokes without the loss of a single ball.

SOME BISLEY HEROES

STORIES OF THE REDOUBTABLE SHOTS IN GREAT EVENTS.

Only Two or Three Men Have Won the King's Prize Twice and Among Them Is Lieut. W. T. Davies of the 6th Welsh Regiment—Two Youths of 21 Have Carried Off the Big Trophy—Thompson's Boast.

Since the splendid shooting of Canadians at the great Imperial rifle meet in England the subject of the annual contest for the chief shooting prizes at Bisley must be more than ever attractive and interesting. Hence a few words about some of the more famous marksmen who have won the $1,250 and the premier prize of shooting in past years may be interesting.

Lieut. W. T. Davies, of the 6th Welsh Regiment, is one of the two or three men who have won the medal twice. His last occasion was in 1903, and his former one in 1893. Moreover, in 1897 he ran the actual winner very close; and in 1903, besides winning the $1,250 and the gold medal, he tied for the silver one with three other shooters. He is a Llanelly man, and, owing to his striking success, may be regarded as the finest marksman who has taken part in the great contest, or at any rate the most consistent one.

Lance-Corporal Ommundsen's name is one well known as Bisley, where he ahs taken prize after prize for years. He is of Scandinavian descent, as his name implies, and he was the hero in 1901 of one of the most sensational finishes in the records of shooting. Everybody was already congratulating Sergt.-Major Burr, of the Hants Regiment, on being the winner, for it seemed as if he must carry off the prize. But he was so upset with their congratulations and the excitement of the moment that he missed the target altogether with his last shot, and thus finished equal with Ommundsen. In firing off the tie Ommundsen easily beat his rival, scoring two bulls to the latter's two magpies; and so he came out a most sensational winner of the blue ribbon of marksmanship.

We have also Private George Gray—not the celebrated billiard player, by the way—who astounded everybody in 1908 by bearing away the premier honors of the classic struggle, though less than twenty-one years of age at the time! George Gray belongs to the 5th Scottish Rifles, had only been shooting for three years ere he won the $1,250, and is in business with his father at Glasgow. When asked how he came to be such a first-class shot, the Caledonian George Gray replied, naively, "By practicing with a miniature rifle in my father's back garden at Helensburgh!"

Lieut. Addison, who is a South Australian, was another noted winner. For his father won the Queen's Prize in Australia in 1884; the son followed up this by taking the King's Prize at Adelaide in 1893, and again in 1894. This double feat was very clever, when one remembers how finely Australians can shoot as a rule. But his supreme performance was when he came off first at Bisley in 1907, amid the plaudits of the Antipodes, who had waited eagerly to learn how their best representative would succeed against the Mother Country's picked marksmen. Addison, then thirty-two years old, fully justified their confidence.

Rennie, of Glasgow, bears a name well known to most good shots. Curiously enough, when asked how he came to be such a marksman as to be able to beat all comers at Bisley for the $1,250, he put it down to a coal strike! This strike was in 1894, and it threw him out of employment for the time being.

"Having nothing to do, owing to the strike, I simply lived on the range, in order to pass the time usefully," Mr. Rennie said. "I was always practicing shooting, and this undoubtedly made me so proficient that in my great year of success at Bisley I won no less than $1,500 in hard cash, besides special medals."

Sergt. Reid is another frequent attender at the camp, and a shot whom all intending winners of the chief prize have to watch closely. He carried off the chief event in 1889, and is in the general postoffice, London. He lives at Ealing, and he can boast of what few noted marksmen can—viz., that he has during his career as a shooter carried off no fewer than 600 valuable prizes as mementoes (very useful and solid ones, too!) of his success. The sergeant has other claims to special fame in the competition, for he was the last winner under the old regime, when the shooting took place on Wimbledon Common. Moreover, he had made the record score up to that time with the Martini-Henry.

Major Thompson has a unique boast. He can claim that his name has appeared six times in the last hundred for the great prize, and of these four were in consecutive years. It is questionable if any other marksman but Thompson has ever done this. As a striking example of his consistent shooting, we may mention that in 1895 he was eighth, in 1896 he was first, and in 1897 he was second, only beaten on the post by Ward, a Devonian who made a most remarkable succession of bull's-eyes right at the last minute.

The major's fateful position, he avers, is second; for he tells how, in the year he won the $1,250 and the gold medal, he was second for the silver medal, second for the bronze medal, second for the Barlow Cup, and second for the Volunteers' best aggregate! As if this were not enough, the major has also on three separate occasions been second for the Caledonian Shield and the Championship of Scotland. So no wonder he regards "No. 2" as his fateful number on these occasions.

Good Time to Turn Farmer.

In theory there never was a better time than right now for a sensible man to move from city to country. The movement has been away from the farm until prices of all kinds of food and fiber are high. There is nothing in sight to indicate that prices will be greatly reduced by increased production. A crop well grown and handled with good business judgment will be reasonably sure of sale at a fair price. There never was a time when it was so easy to learn new methods and the principles of scientific farming. A man starting now may receive at once the benefit of thirty years of the experience and study of good farmers and scientific experts.—H. W. Collingwood in Metropolitan Magazine.

Touching Verse.

At first she touches up her hair
To see if it's in place,
And then with manner debonair
She touches up her face.
A touch to curls behind her ear,
A touch to silken collar,
And then she's off to hubby dear—
To touch him for a dollar.

Man Eating Wild Men.

In the celebrated "Travailes" of Edward Webb (1590) are dozens of stories that would make Munchausen turn green with envy. One of the most celebrated of these is his story of the wild men of Prester John, which is as follows:

"In the court of Prester Iohn there is a wilde man and another in the high street of Constantinople whose allowance is every day a quarter of raw mutton, and when any man dyeth for some notorious offence then they are allowed every day a quarter of man's flesh. These wilde men are chained fast to a post every day, the one in Prester Iohn's courtd, the other in the high street of Constantinople, each of them having a mantell about their shoulders, and all over their bodyes they have wonderful long haire. They are chained by the neck lest they speedily devour all that cometh within their reach."

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a cry-baby and an umbrella? Well, an umbrella you can shut up.

What is the difference between a light in a cave and a dance in an inn? One is a taper in a cavern; the other is a caper in a tavern.

What is the difference between a boy looking upstairs and one going up? One is stepping upstairs; the other is staring up steps.

Why is a lemon stick like a race horse? Because the more you lick it the faster it goes.

A SMART FROCK OF SERGE SHOULD HAVE A PLACE IN EVERY WARDROBE

There is nothing more satisfactory, especially at this time of the year and a little later, than a plain dress of serge, ratine or other dark, durable material. By way of trimming, a bit of contrasting material, a few colored buttons or a frill of net or chiffon is all that is needed.

In No. 7628 a dull blue hard finish serge is smartly relieved by trimming bands of dark green cotton duvetyn. This cotton duvetyn is a velvety looking fabric, somewhat higher priced than most cottons but rich appearing, and one gets the impression that it will wear very well.

To copy this dress in size 36 it requires 5½ yards of 36 inch serge or other fabric. Serge may be purchased in good quality from 75 cents to $1.50 a yard.

In 7658 silk poplin makes up very effectively, charmingly relieved by a high Medici collar of white organdy. The color is an olive green bordering on the yellow. A feature of this frock is the collar, the wired Medici effect in back extends into a broad, softly draped fichu in front, which is graceful and becoming.

This design may be copied in size 36 with 4½ yards of 36 inch material. Silk poplin may be purchased from 75 cents up.

A DRAPED COLLAR AND AN EFFECTIVE RUSSIAN BLOUSE

The draped collar standing out a trifle from the neck in back is one of the novel features that mark the new frocks. In some instances it gives a slight suggestion of the fichu, but ordinarily it is strictly Japanese. A most attractive costume of Ratine is illustrated in No. 8189. This material shows a silk corduroy stripe on a foundation of voile. Here the color is dull green combined with plain black satin. This costume shows a novel skirt and an attractive blouse with a draped collar.

In size 36 this dress may be copied with 4 yards of 42 inch material.

In 8192-8193 we have another Japanese collar which is highly attractive. The blouse itself is kimono in effect, has a chemisette of net and a small in-set vest. A band at the bottom of the peplum gives a new and pleasing effect.

To copy this design in size 36 it requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the blouse (8192) and 2⅜ yards of 36 inch material for the skirt (8193).

No. 8189—sizes 34 to 44.

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headache. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1 smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.: all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Richard Dawson.

A highly respected resident of South Monaghan passed away Thursday (Feb. 19th) in the person of Richard Dawson. Deceased was born March 27th, 1824, nearly 90 years ago. He was probably the oldest living man who first saw the light of day in South Monaghan. He was one year old before the Hon. Peter Robinson brought his army of Irish immigrants to Peterborough.

LET US DO LIKEWISE.

Lindsay's winter carnival was a huge success. Thousands of visitors were present and spent money among the merchants at a time of the year the merchants want it. Why can't this city get a move on and bring dollars to the city instead of sending all the local money out of town?

Mr. Madoel gave much valued advice to the local members. "Do not allow your interests to become self-centred," he cautioned. "Our object is to forward the condition of all classes alike. We are asking no class legislation. We are asking legislation that will benefit no one man more than another."

The speaker scored the Freight Bill now before Parliament. It was not a just Bill, and he hoped the members would turn it down hard. United, and acting as one man, the Retail Merchants' Association were knocking at the door of Parliament, and they were going to knock the Freightage Bill.

In conclusion, Mr. Madoel voiced his pleasure at the spirit of enthusiasm displayed by the city of Peterborough. He paid a glowing tribute to the work accomplished by Secretary Cameron, and hoped to see the Association grow in strength and influence to meet the expanding trade conditions bound to result on the completion of the great scheme of railroad building, which he thought would be not later than the year 1915.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Madoel for his splendid talk, and replied to by that gentleman.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

GREAT BRITAIN BEGINS TO PROBE INTO BENTON CASE

Starts an Independent Inquiry, and Calls on the United States to Assist — Note to Washington

London, Feb. 24.—The British Government will undertake an investigation on its own account of the slaying in Mexico of William S. Benton, a British subject. The United States Government to-day was requested by Great Britain to obtain assurances from Gen. Francisco Villa that he would not interfere with the British enquiry, according to a statement in the House of Commons by Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Continuing his statement on affairs in Mexico, begun yesterday in answer to questions, Sir Edward announced that the British government had through Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, informed the Washington Government of the feeling in England engendered by the killing of Benton and the disappearance from Juarez of other Englishmen.

Consul Percival at Galveston, had been selected for this purpose and he was to supply the most adequate reports possible regarding Benton's death and concerning the two missing Englishmen Lawrence and Curtis. Sir Cecil was instructed to ask the United States Government, as Great Britain had no means of communicating with Gen. Villa, to instruct the United States Consul at Juarez to inform Gen. Villa and to request an assurance that the British Consul should not be interferred with.

Sir Edward Grey read a communication from the State Department at Washington to Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, which the British Ambassador cabled textually to the Foreign Office. It was as follows:

"The State Department desires to advise the British embassy that instructions had been sent heretofore to the American Consul at Juarez to make a most searching inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of William S. Benton. The Consul has been instructed to make every effort to secure the exhumation and examination of the body of the deceased, to take the statements of any and all the witnesses whom he can find to employ in his investigations medical and legal assistance as far as may be desirable and to do everything in his power to elicit the facts."

The comprehensiveness of the U.S. Government's instructions called forth hearty cheers in the House of Commons.

Sir Edward Grey added that no reply had yet been received to his communication concerning Consul Percival.

TO THE READERS OF THE TIMES

For the next two or three weeks the work of installing a new web perfecting press will be going on at The Times office. This will necessarily upset to some extent the regular newspaper work. In this connection we ask the indulgence of our readers. If the paper during the interval is not up to the mark in appearance, our patrons will know the reason and will bear with us. The new press will print and fold The Times at the rate of 5,000 per hour. In addition we will instal (as soon as the present machines are disposed of) a number of new and up-to-date Intertypes—the latest things in typesetting machines. They are the most modern machine of their kind, and are, we believe, far ahead of any similar machine in existence.

The new plant, when once in operation, will enable the publisher to produce a newspaper that will be in keeping with the growth and rapidly developing city of Peterborough, as well as the entire district, of which our city is the centre.

AMERICAN COMMENT UPON THE SITUATION IN MEXICO

Opinions of Various United States Papers on the Condition of Affairs Following Slaughter of a British Subject

New York, Feb. 24.—The World says of the killing of Benton:

"While to a certain extent we have made ourselves responsible for some of those who are in revolt against Huerta, we guarantee no one, not even our own citizens, who have been urged to quit the troubled districts, against the perils of marauding warfare.

"Sharp as has been the criticism of President Wilson's policy in some places, it has been mild in comparison with what would have appeared if the United States had revealed disposition to act hastily and powerfully in Mexico. At home as well as abroad he would have been accused of conquest. The President's motives are correct."

Cannot Recognise Villa.

New York, Feb. 24.—The New York Globe says:

"The relations between the United States and Great Britain are happily such as to make misunderstanding over the affair impossible. The Administration will throw no impediment in the way of any action that the British Government may be led to take if it shall appear that Villa committed a crime. President Wilson has refused to recognize Huerta because he is an assassin. He will demand that the Constitutionalists eliminate Villa should it appear that he also is an assassin."

U.S. Must Move Soon.

New York, Feb. 24.—The Sun says:

"The murder of a single British subject, so extraordinary is the situation brought about in Northern Mexico by the Monroe Doctrine and Wilson theory, does more to force our hand in dealing with Villa than the accumulated deaths of all the American citizens who have lately lost their lives in the anarchy-ridden State of Chihuahua. The action by the British Foreign Office makes it plain that our long-suffering acquiescence in the ways of the Constitutionalists is unlikely to go on forever. If foreign powers are to be kept from disregarding the Monroe Doctrine and entering Mexico to protect their nationals, then the nation which upholds the doctrine may expect to be asked to supply that protection."

Do Not Take Villa's Word.

Buffalo, Feb. 24.—The News says:

"We assume certain functions that are related to the Monroe Doctrine and grow out of it. The efforts now seem to be to have Villa prepare such a case as to justify the killing of the British subject Benton. There is a disposition even to take the word of that villain at its face value. It is right for the Department of State to get all the facts before acting, but it would be right also if the department should put its own men on the ground with resolute purpose to find out the actual truth."

A party from Toronto entertained the Connaughts Saturday evening under the auspices of the Canadian Academy of Music.

MONROE DOCTRINE WORKS BOTH WAYS

The United States Bound By It To Protect Foreigners In Mexico.

London, Feb. 24.—Sharp comment is made by the Manchester Guardian today on Sir Edward Grey's statement in the House of Commons yesterday in regard to the killing of William S. Benton at Juarez by General Villa. The newspaper asks:

"Is it not mere playing with words to say that in such a case the United States has no responsibility? If that were so the Monroe Doctrine would be a mere instrument of international anarchy, whereas the whole tendency of President Wilson's policy has been to make it a force for order and good Government. If we are not responsible, then the United States is. We certainly do not wish to drive the United States Government into intervention, but it cannot deny to other powers the right of defending their interests and at the same time refuse to defend them itself."

LIEUT. BECKER GETS NEW TRIAL BUT THE GUNMEN WILL DIE

Court of Appeal in New York Gives Police Officer a Chance for Life

Albany, N.Y., Feb. 24.—By a vote of six to one the Court of Appeals today granted Charles Becker, the convicted New York police lieutenant, a new trial. Becker was convicted Oct. 24, 1912, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a notorious gambler, and sentenced to death at Sing Sing prison. Justice Werner was the only one to vote against a new trial.

The decision did not come as a big surprise for it had been rumored among the lawyers for several weeks that Becker would have another opportunity to establish his innocence.

Rosenthal was murdered at one o'clock in the morning, July 16, 1912.

The conviction of the four gunmen was unanimously affirmed.

The prevailing opinion is written by Judge Hiscock and concurred in by all the judges except Judge Werner. It does not pass either way upon the argument made in behalf of Becker, that his conviction should be reversed because the verdict that he was guilty of Rosenthal's murder was against the weight of evidence, but the refusal is based upon errors committed by Justice Goff during the trial. Rosenthal was shot as he was coming out of the Hotel Metropole early in the morning. Becker was a prominent member of the police force. It has never been claimed that he took any part in the actual killing, but it has been the theory of the prosecution that because of quarrels between him and Rosenthal, springing out of alleged unlawful relations in the gambling business, Becker desired to have Rosenthal "put out of the way," and that at a night meeting in a vacant lot in Harlem some time in June he made arrangements to that end with three gamblers, who in turn hired four gunmen who did the actual killing. These gamblers were Rose, Webber and Vallon.

An understanding between the C. N. R. and the Government for Federal aid is rumored to have been reached.

CANADIAN COLLIER OVERDUE

Sydney, N.S., Feb. 24.—The Dominion Coal Company's giant collier Lingan, ten thousand tons, which left Everett, Mass., Tuesday last, on a two-day run to Louisburg, Cape Breton, is now four days and a half overdue. It is feared that the ship struck icefields and foundered with a crew of forty. Ice floes extend some hundred miles from Belle Isle Strait to Halifax. Six steamers, names unknown, are reported jammed in floes about 30 miles south of Louisburg. The Government icebreaker, Stanley, was sent to the rescue.

COMPANY SEEKS THE POWER RIGHTS ON WELLAND CANAL

But Commons Committee Will Consult Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario Before Allowing the Bill to Pass—Provincial Rights Involed

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—In the Private Bills Committee to-day the bill of the Niagara-Welland Power Company wa considered. This company is asking a charter to dispose of power that will be developed by the building of the new Welland Canal.

"I think it is just a question if this Government has the right to dispose of power rights of that kind in the Province," said Major Sam Sharpe, chairman of the committee. "We have the marine rights, but I doubt if we have the power rights. We will just send a copy of this Bill to Adam Beck and see what he thinks of it before referring it to the House."

A bill incorporating the United Empire Loyalist Association of Canada to succeed the present U.C. Loyalist Association of Ontario was reported.

The bill of the McClary Manufacturing Company, of London, granting the right to operate a vessel or vessels and also to undertake a housing scheme for its employes, was also approved.

COFFEE TAX FOR HUERTA

Mexican President Puts Export Duty On to Raise Funds.

Mexico City, Feb. 24.—An export tax on coffee, which will provide President Huerta with a considerable amount of money for the prosecution of the war, is announced in a decree issued to-day. The tax amounts to three pesos per one hundred kilograms (220 pounds) on unhusked coffee, and three and a half pesos on the cleaned product. The tax becomes effective February 25. The coffee crop is now moving.

HOCKEY NEWS

Bosto Exploits Put Up Fast Game and Defeat "Y" By 4 to 3

In one of the best exhibitions of hockey ever witnessed at the Brock street rink, the Boston Exploits, under the management of Peter Gettas, defeated the Y.M.C.A. by the score of 4 to 3.

The game was fast from start to finish, especially the work of the Boston Exploits forward line, which without doubt, was nice to watch. Wolf at right wing showed up better than in other games this season, his checking, rushing and stick handling was splendid. Butcher at centre put up a grand exhibition, while Graham, the speedy little Lakefield rover, was at his best, scoring the winning goal. Rose at left wing, was without doubt the best man on the ice, his snooting was very dangerous. Phelan and Regan on defence put up grand hockey, breaking up rush after rush. The never-failing Grant Latimer, in goal, was again on the job, playing a star game.

Knapman of Y boys put up a good game, while Jackson and Smith played their limit.

After the game Manager Gettas and Proprietor Douros gave the boys a big banquet.

Is it right that Mr. Gettas will look for a mahogany case for his silverware—Oh you Exploit speed boys.

By-law to License and Inspect Laundries Approved of—Normal Fee of $1 Per Year — No License Will be Issued Unless Premises Are Thorougly Sanitary -- Aims at Chink Laundries

The City Property Committee met in business session last night, Chairman Ald. Langford, presiding. There were also in attendance His Worship Mayor Buller, Aldermen A. H. Stratton, Saunders and Duncan.

On motion of Mayor Buller and Ald. Duncan, in the Southern district, Heart and Rutherford avenues will be eliminated from the garbage collecting area, the line west of Park being struck at Park street, both sides. In East City the line will run on Hunter street from the river to Driscoll Terrace, thence northward, east side of Driscoll Terrace to Douro street. In other respects the areas adopted last night were left as outlined at last meeting, and published in these columns. Under the new act, assessment for garbage collection must be charged against all property within the defined areas, churches and public buildings included, Dominion Government property alone being excepted.

The incinerator this year will save the cost of a refuse ground, some $300. The ashes from the incinerator being of a vegetable nature, are, it is estimated, very valuable for fertilizing purposes.

On motion of Ald. Stratton and Saunders, the cost of the up-keep of the incinerator will be charged against the city as a whole; and the cost of garbage collection charged against the area from which it is collected. The city solicitor to prepare a by-law to provide for collection from the extended area from June 1st next, and also to collect the rates.

Resolution Rescinded

The resolution of last meeting transferring garbage collecting and plumbing inspection to the Board of Works department were rescinded, and the systems left in the Property Committee's hands. The Board of Works has too much to attend to this year to assume additional responsibilities inspection shall remain under the engineering department's supervision.

Milk By-law.

The amended milk by-law was considered. It is mainly of a sanitation nature. The license fee is $1 per year, and fine for violation of the by-law is such as provided by the Milk Act. A license for peddling milk will not be issued unless recommended by the Sanitary Inspector after examination of premises.

Eating House By-law.

The by-law governing victualling houses has been amended, and the provisions of same were considered. This by-law does not apply to boarding houses. All eating houses shall be inspected by the Sanitary Inspector or Medical Health Officer and no license shall be given unless premises are reported sanitary. The license fee is $5 per year. A cost of $1 will be charged for transfer of license, such transfer to be satisfactory to the authorities. Violators of this by-law will be subject to a fine of $10.

Laundry By-law.

A laundry by-law was read and approved of. It provides for a license fee of $1 per year, and thorough inspection of laundry premises, which must be kept in a sanitary condition. No license will be granted unless the premises are reported satisfactory by the Sanitary Inspector. No gambling will be permitted on laundry premises, and no sleeping allowed in any room in which laundering is done. Any violation of the by-law will be subject the violator to suspension or forfeiture of his license at discretion of the Medical Health Officer. All laundries will be regularly inspected.

The Dog By-law.

The dog by-law was taken as satisfactory. The only change therein is providing that the police issue the licenses instead of the City Clerk.

These by-laws will be submitted to Council next Monday for approval or disapproval, as the case may prove.

Keep Dogs at Home.

Any dog found running at large will be pounded. Unless claimed by owner within 48 hours, license procured, together with an additional charge of $1 for pounding, the animal will be destroyed, and fed to the incinerator.

Fowl by Weight.

On motion of the Mayor, seconded by Ald. Stratton, a by-law will be prepared to provide that all fowl sold on the market must be drawn, cleaned and sold by weight, the by-law to take effect on April first.

Market Tolls.

On motion of Ald. Duncan and Saunders, the Market tolls will this year be again sold by tender. Bills will be posted to this effect.

Token of Respect.

The city flag will be hoisted at half-mast to-day in respect of the late Rev. Mr. Mansell. As many of the Aldermen as possible will attend the funeral service at Charlotte street church.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, Hon. W. H. Hearst, and others will address Barrie Conservatives next Friday.

AID FOR A RAILWAY

Vancouver Rival to Edmonton for the Peace River Trade.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 24.—It is rumored that Provincial aid in the shape of a guarantee similar to that given the Canadian Northern Railway in British Columbia is to be provided at the present session of the Legislature for 330 miles of railway running north-eastward from Fort George through Pine River Pass and on to Alberta boundary. Foley, Welch and Stewart are to build the line. The line will be built as an extension of the Pacific Great Eastern, now under construction between here and Fort George, and is designed as a route to secure the trade of the Peace River district to Vancouver, and as a rival of the Edmonton line now building.

Archbishop Bruchesi has absolutely forbidden Roman Catholics to dance the tango and other similar dances.

FRONT DOOR NIGHT BELLS.

Doctors Are Not the Only Ones Who Have Use For Them.

At 1 o'clock in the morning a man who was looking for a doctor found a door plate on which he distinguished the words, "Night bell," and rang the bell. When the door opened and a figure appeared in the semidarkness of the hall he said:

"Hurry up, please. There is a sick woman at No. 1[illegible]."

The man inside said "All right," and in a few seconds both men were racing down the street to No. 132. In the top floor front room lay a very sick woman. The newcomer pulled a small table to the bedside and took from his pocket a sheet of paper and a fountain pen.

"What on earth are you doing with that?" said the man who had summoned him. "You're a nice doctor, you are."

"Doctor?" echoed the man. "I'm not a doctor; I'm a lawyer. Didn't you read the sign, 'Lawyer's night bell?'"

"But what does a lawyer need of a night bell?" the other man asked.

"To enable the people who want to make wills in the dead of night to find him readily," was the reply.

"Once in a while I'm called up to straighten out more serious entanglements, but most of the legal papers I write after 10 p. m. are wills. A lot of people who take sick suddenly recollect that they have never made a will and they want to repair the omission while there is time. When you said there was a sick woman here I naturally thought of wills, not medicine. There is a doctor in the corner house." —New York Times.

"Magic" Cloths.

Many housewives gladly pay 25 cents for so called "magic" cloths, as they are very useful for silver and other metals. Being dry, they do not soil the hands or clothing and do their work until the cloth itself wears out. To make such a cloth take one quart of gasoline, one-half pound of whiting and one-eighth ounce of oleic acid, mixing all together and shaking well. Soak pieces of woolen cloth in the mixture and hang them in the open air in a shady place to dry. When the cloths are dry the "magic" qualities have been given to them, and these they will never lose. The material must be wool.—New York Globe.

A Statesman's Queer Ambition.

The great Lord Grey had an ambition far above politics. He had passed the reform bill, but that did not satisfy his soul. There was talk of Taglioni, and Grey said quite earnestly, "What would I give to dance as well as she!"

The statesman who had been prime minister and had left an indelible mark on the history of his country was actually envious of an opera dancer.—London Globe.

TOBACCO CHEFS.

Experts That Make Sauces For Flavoring the Different Brands.

"I am a tobacco chef," said the sallow man. "I make the sauces that give us smoking or chewing tobacco as a food chef makes the sauces which give us sole colbert or poulet creole.

"Take this dark, sweet, juicy plug of navy brown, so popular among the more prosperous type of teamsters. Well, the flavor of this plug is due to a sauce made of sugar, licorice, whisky and honey.

"Here is a mild, cool pipe tobacco that college boys favor. Smell it. Very aromatic, eh? Well, it has been steeped in a sauce composed of the essential oils of citronella, bergamot and cassia.

"But it is when you come to the high grade Havana cigar, the cigar that sells for 40 or 50 cents, that you see the tobacco chef at his best. He doesn't make his sauces then of such common ingredients as sugar, bergamot, licorice and so forth. No, he makes them of bacteria. The flavors of the high grade Havana tobaccos depend, you see, entirely on their ferments. Each tobacco undergoes a different fermentation, and here the chef comes in, applying the bacteria of years which cause these fermentations to the leaf.

"Yes, the tobacco chef of the highest type, the one who ferments Havana tobacco, handles the various breeds of bacteria as an ordinary chef handles pepper and salt, mustard and cloves and mace."—Buffalo Express.

Marvels of India.

What a wonderful country is India! There is only one India. Its marvels are its own. There is the plague, the black death. India invented it. The car of Juggernaut was also India's invention. So was the suttee, and within the time of men still living 800 widows willingly and, in fact rejoicingly burned themselves to death on the bodies of their dead husbands in a single year. And 800 would do it this year if the British government would let them. Famine belongs especially to India. India has 2,000,000 gods and worships them all. On top of all this she is the mother and home of that wonder of wonders, caste, and also that mystery of mysteries, the Satanic Brotherhood of the Thugs.—Churchman.

Simplicity In Models for Kiddies

By Madge Marvel

MAKING children's clothes is an art by itself and quite distinct from any other branch of dressmaking.

In almost every city one or more establishments are given over to clothing the youngest generation, and many a clever needlewoman has found the way not only to a livelihood, but to a substantial prosperity, by designing and making clothes for little folks.

Unless one can make her small daughter's clothes, she is confronted by an expensive problem, if she wishes to have the latest and most approved garments, for children's clothes are undeniably expensive if one desires material and smartness.

Fortunately simplicity is the aim of the best designers, and it is possible to make garments with the aid of a seamstress which, if bought ready made, or if procured through a specialty shop, would cost a pretty penny.

The child of today is picturesque. Old prints must have furnished the inspiration for many of the newest frocks and suits. Look over the pictures of some of the Dickens children and you will see the pattern for the most approved school suit for the modern small boy.

Model Is Varied

There is a straight little blouse cut with scarcely a bit of fulness with the plain little knee length trousers buttoned to it at the waist line.

There are variations of this model. For every day wear the suit is made of some of the heavy suitings which are washable. For the street the trousers are often of corduroy and the blouse of some washable fabric, as linen or tub silk, and for ceremonious occasions the blouse is made of white washable silk or satin with lace frills at the wrists and collar and with trousers of heavy ribbed silk, bengaline being a favorite weave.

Coats for wear over these suits are smart tweed affairs or Russian blouse effects in corduroy. They usually button close at the neck and have the slightly lowered belt.

The smaller boys have been wearing funny little peasant-like costumes which I am told will be more used for the summer, as they are so simple, so easily adjusted and so comfortable. These are quite straight and reach the knees. The trousers which may match or be of a contrasting material, as striped trousers with a plain outer garment, are fastened to the under waist.

The frocks for the little girls are just as simple in lines. The straight effect is retained and the sash is as often at the regulation waist line as it is applied nearly to the knees, which has been the accepted belt line.

For the young girl, 7 or 8 years, there is a noticeable heavity of skirt and the coats are usually the same length as the frock. When they have the banding of fur the effect is quaint and attractive.

Kimono Sleeve Popular

The kimono sleeve is used in nearly all the dresses for the small lady. Serge seems the approved material for the street dress. I have seen an attempt to introduce the suit style in some of the best and newest of the spring clothes and it is most attractive and would surely please the wearer. In several models there was a skirt, short and scant, a wide, soft sash and an Eton coat made quite loose. Underneath was a blouse of batiste.

The sash frequently becomes part of the frock and fastens at the side. On the very best of the lingerie frocks there is sometimes an appearance of the smocking which was once so fashionable as adornment.

When the low belt is chosen the skirt is frequently merely one or two little ruffles of silk contrasting with the serge of the frock. These ruffles are plaid if the serge is plain.

While the frocks are simple, there is the finish which bespeaks skill. There is the same demand for style in the clothes for the child of today as for his parents, and youthful eyes are wonderfully critical in detecting flaws in the garments of their companions.

As for their own apparel, children seem to have a most uncanny idea of what is right and fitting which surprises the onlooker who has no children for whom to buy raiment.

A Tender Smile and a Song

By Adolph Roeder

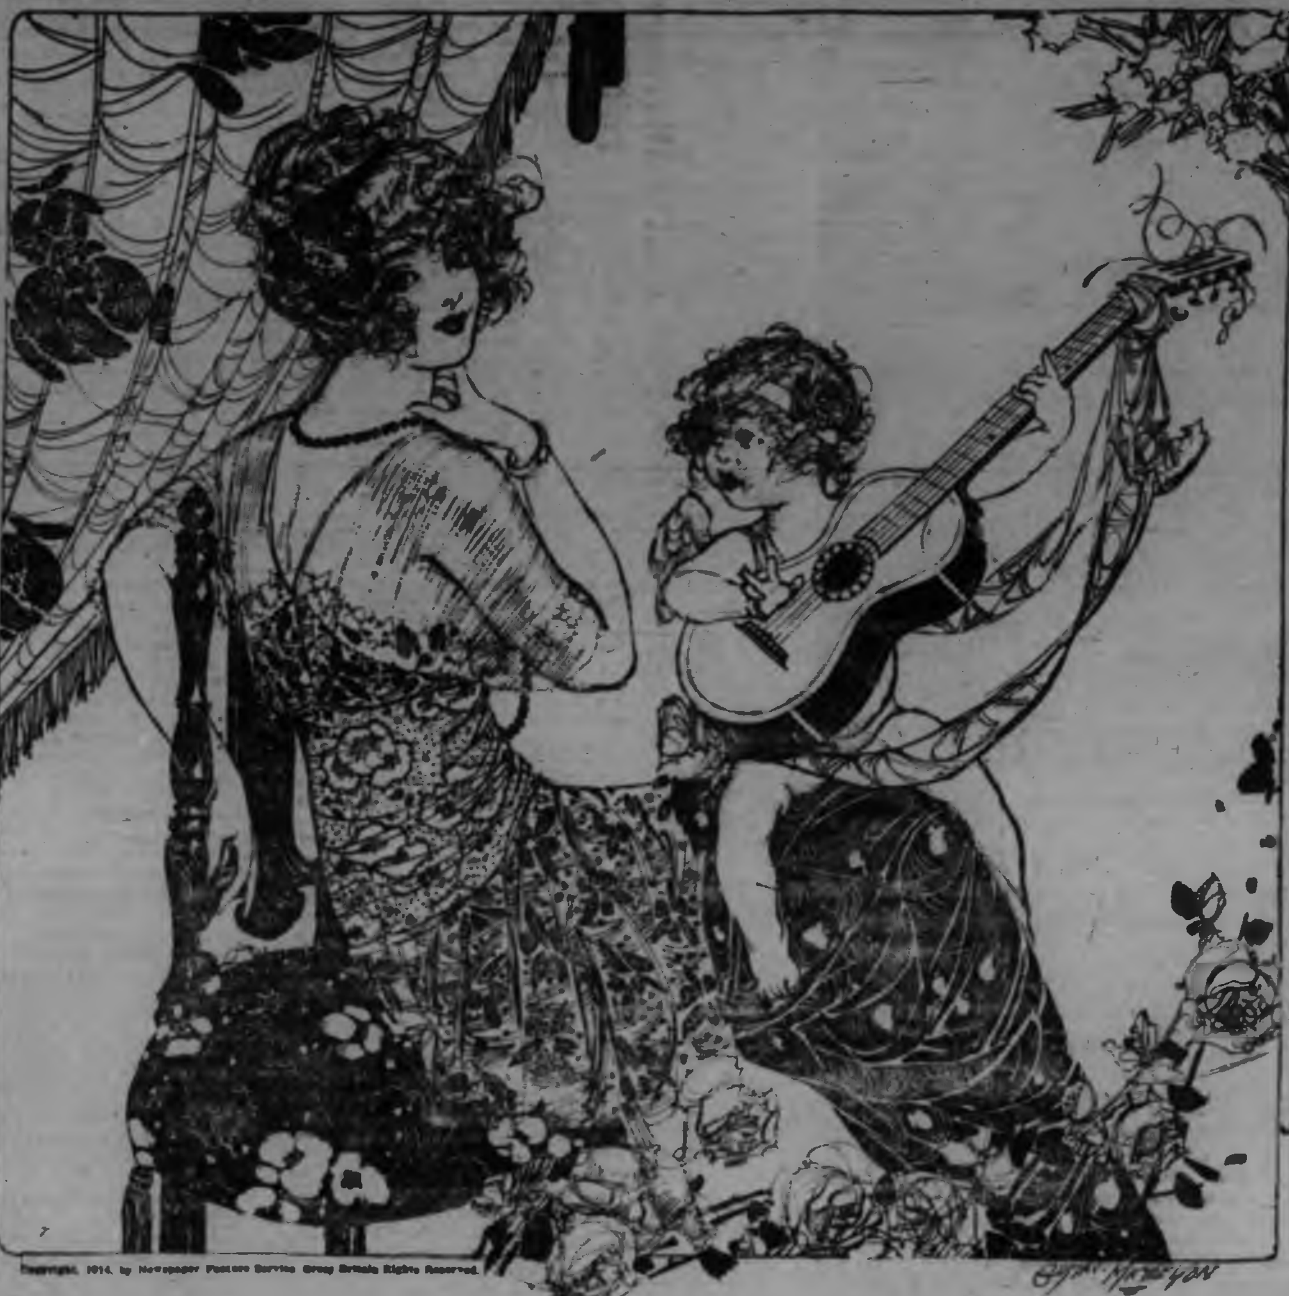
I PLANTED a smile in the heart of a friend,
And it blossomed forth into song;
For it rose to his lips in after days,
In cadences, low and long.

It winged its way to the twilight woods,
Beyond life's hurry and rush;
And wove itself into liquid notes,
In the throat of the hermit thrush.

And it fell on the ears of a sleeping babe,
That lay on its mother's breast:
And turned again to a tender smile,
An earnest of heavenly rest.

An angel paused in his heavenward flight
To harvest the smile from that face,
And it turned in his heart to song again,
And he sang at the throne of grace.

THE SONG OF THREE WORDS :: :: By Michelson



Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service Great Britain Rights Reserved.

AN old song, if you care to put it that way, but sung in a new way—so new a way that she herself has never discovered that it is an old song.

She thinks it never happened before. "I love you" has for her the freshness, the brand new wit, the exquisite novelty, the transcendent cleverness of a mighty creation.

This is one of the means by which you know that the song is being sung by the right one at the right time, in the right way.

A thing that sounds like a BROMIDE is said by the wrong one, or maybe only in the wrong key—there's something in that.

Meanwhile, notice the three words: "I" on one side, "you" on the other, and LOVE between. A wise "I" and "you" keep it there, steadfastly, securely, always.

Are You Afraid of the World?

A MAN killed himself in Los Angeles the other day and left a note telling the mourners what song to sing at his funeral.

The man was young, in good health, comparatively speaking; he had enough to eat, and a place to sleep, and nobody was persecuting him for any reason whatsoever. But he was a thief.

He had embezzled money from the firm for which he was working. When he saw an expert put on his books he went to his room, wrote a good-by letter to his mother, another to his friends, and blew out his brains with a cheap revolver.

Both the letters that he left were very sentimental, and supposed to be very touching, especially about the songs he wanted sung at his funeral.

Somehow I couldn't weep very tragically over these songs. I kept thinking of the young man's poor old mother, and, when I thought of her and what she felt when she found that the boy for whom she had such high hopes had died a thief and a suicide, I couldn't cry so very hard over the man.

Sentimental Tommy—that's what they called him, the companions of the man who killed himself.

Sentimental Tommy, always talking about the stars and the roses, and shivering when he heard a discord in music, and shuddering at the tones of a harsh voice.

And very pleased with himself and with his "sensitive nature" and his "temperament"—I haven't a doubt in the world—if he was anything at all like the Sentimental Tommys of my acquaintance.

I know quite a few of them, the Sentimental Tommys, worse luck for me. And if the truth must be told, I know very little good of them.

One of my Sentimental Tommy friends couldn't keep his job because the man he worked for was so rude and coarse. So Sentimental Tommy gave up his position, and went home and let his mother support him for a while.

He was not too sensitive to do that. They never are too sensitive to do anything they really want to do—the Sentimental Tommys.

Another Sentimental Tommy, who is married to a friend of mine, makes eyes at every girl he meets. The plainer she is the more he makes eyes at her, and if she will let him, he holds her hand and sits in dark corners with her and steps on her foot under the table. And then, if she will let him, he writes her letters—such entrancing letters, all full of stars and moonlight and mocking birds and magnolias!

I wondered why he always chose the plain girls.

I found out that it was because the plain girls were so grateful. They weren't used to lovers and love making, and they couldn't tell the difference between sentiment and sentimentality. So Sentimental Tommy had a glorious time with them. He's always sad and yearning and misunderstood. One day, when he had made a particularly effulgent and unanimous idiot of himself we had a talk about it.

"This poor little girl you're having such a time about," said I to Sentimental Tommy. "She's really a good deal of a goose, don't you think? She shows your letters to everybody—and then she really isn't the goddess you tell her she is, and people are laughing at her. Can't you see what a cruel, silly thing it is that you are doing?

"Can't you come down out of the clouds for a few minutes and look at the world as it really is—just for a change?"

Sentimental Tommy gave me a look of deep and tragic import.

"If I looked at the world as it really is," he said, "I should blow my brains out in an hour."

And he couldn't see, poor, Sentimental Tommy, why I wasn't hideously shocked at the idea.

Poor Sentimental Tommy—afraid to look the honest world honestly in the face—the good, clean, decent, well-meaning, and, light-hearted, frivolous, work-a-day world as it really is.

He doesn't know what's the matter with him, but I do. It isn't the world he can't look in the face—it's himself.

He's built a kind of rosy dream around his own personality, and, oh, he can't bear to be awakened.

No wonder.

Do you remember Hawthorne's story—or was it Hawthorne's—of the man who had a glass through which he could see people as they really were—stripped of all pretense, all fuss and feathers and all hypocrisy.

He looked at a great king through this glass and saw sitting on the throne a grinning tiger.

He looked at a beautiful woman—and lo, she was a peacock, brainless, heartless and without conscience.

He looked at an ugly old woman—and she stood revealed to him a white lily growing in a shady place, pure, sweet and undefiled.

Oh, he had a great time with that glass—the man in the story. He was always chuckling to himself and laughing and being so pleased to think that he alone of all the world knew the world as it really was.

One day the man with the glass passed through a deep forest, and in the deep forest was a clear, dark pool of water.

"What's at the bottom of the pool?" said the man with the glass, and he looked over, his glass in his hand.

And staring him in the face he saw a withered ape holding in his hand a bit of parti-colored glass.

"Who is it?" he sobbed, startled almost into common sense. And when he realized that he was looking at himself as he really was he jumped into the calm depths of the deep pool and died.

Poor fool. I don't wonder that Sentimental Tommy can't bear to look at the world as it really is. He might, by some miserable chance, catch a glimpse of himself as he really is—and die of chagrin.

His wife has seen him for many years as he really is, and people wonder that she was not more deeply in love with her good-looking husband.

Poor woman. I wonder if she sometimes wishes she could be Sentimental Susie for awhile and make herself believe that she is married to a man and not to a vain, strutting popinjay.

So you wanted certain songs sung at your funeral did you, Sentimental Tommy? I wonder if you heard them when they were sung?

Secrets of Health and Happiness

One Faint Is Harmless, But Beware the Habit

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

DR. HIRSHBERG

HAVE you ever felt like Mark Twain's horse, which was so feeble that it "wanted to lean up against a post to think"? If you have, you belong to the fainting fraternity, even though you have never really swooned.

Physiologists now admit that the syncope and instantaneous prostration may be due to many things which are known and a great many others yet to be dug out.

The pundit who will completely unloose the Gordian knot responsible for feminine fainting will be sung and honored down the corridors of the ages. Ask savants today of knowledge of swooning and they will talk like an expert on Athens, Rome, virtue and stuff, but speak little sense.

To faint or not to faint is a question as much of digestion, delusion and disease as it is of dress, dreams and discipline.

When a fair maid, ruddy with the glow of youth, falls in a swoon, Dr. Cupid prods her with his stethoscope of love. His diagnosis is not a dangerous disease, but instability of her heart power.

What They Come From

Swooning, true enough, comes from "bleeding into the abdominal veins." Indeed, the syncope from shocks, from cold, from want of fresh air, from hunger, from hysteria and from poisoning may be as much an irritation of that part of the medulla oblongata which is the spigot of the red stream as of want of the full blood around the brain.

Even so, swooning must be unusual even among women and fair maids. If you are subject to Lady Malaprop's convenient device to decoy sympathy, you are either a hypocrite or truly ailing.

The type of stage swooning, once the vogue among scheming old maids, widows and foolish girls, is, I take it, so passe as to be a thing in the limbo of dirks, snuff-boxes and oracles.

Therefore, if you faint more than once in a year, as permissible as resolutions on New Year's day, either your kidneys are affected in some more or less serious way, your flow of blood or its quality needs correcting, your heart is not up to the hundred mark, or your nervous textile is in serious need of overhauling and renovating.

Absent-Mindedness and Fainting

Absent-mindedness, being far-away and distrait, when you are not truly thinking of something, is a first cousin to fainting. When you scratch your head for want of thought; when you have "to stop and think"; throw your head back; pull your mustache; stroke your beard; smooth the side of your nose with your forefinger, grind your teeth, smoke or chew gum in order the better to complete your appointed task, you have a situation which just falls short of swooning.

Faint heart never won fair lady, because bravery is the strength which the tender sex worships. Women know instinctively that a faint-hearted fop or youth is one who may be given to fainting, who is necessarily feeble in physique. Beauty craves masculine vigor.

The habit of taking snuff or sucking on canes, so common among dandies of another day, is a step toward feebleness. It is actually evidence of weak physical fibre. Fops really do faint, just as weak women do.

Syncope then is the sign that you need strength and health in one way or another. To be faintless is to be happy and strong. But Hercules himself must yield to odds, and many strokes, honest, with a little axe, hew down and fell the hardest timbered oak. One swoon may be disregarded, but even the strongest cannot afford to ne… ing if it recurs.

Sayings of Children

"I know how we walk," said Willie. "We put one foot down and let it stay 'till it gets 'way behind and then do the same thing with the other, and keep doing it."

"Well, little chap," said the stranger in the family, picking up one of the children, "what are you going to be when you are a man?"

"Nuffin'," said the child.

"Nothing? Why so?" asked the stranger.

"Because," said the child, "I'm a little girl."

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

THE brook has gone away," said Charlie Chick to his mother … came in the henhouse after something to eat.

"It must be frozen over," said Mrs. Cackle.

"I guess that is it," replied Charlie. "I walked across where it used to be with the Duck children. We are going skating this afternoon. I don't know what skating is, but the Duck children say it is sliding with … on your feet."

After Charlie had taken a nap under his mother's wing he started off in search of the Duck children.

He found them skating on the brook.

"Here you are!" they shouted. "We saved a pair of skates for you."

Charlie's skates looked like pieces of wood, but he managed to get them on his feet and soon he was going across the frozen brook with Dick and Danny Duck.

Suddenly he raised his wings and he went faster than ever. The Duck children raised their wings, but they were so short they did not catch the wind like Charlie's.

They were all having a beautiful time when suddenly Danny Duck went "ker-splash!" right in a big hole in the ice. Down he went, but soon he came up.

"Don't worry," said Dicky Duck. "You must remember ducks can sw…"

"I'm not worrying," said Charlie Chick. "Only I don't want to … the water."

Just then Danny came out of the water and Charlie said:

"Didn't you get wet?"

"No," replied Danny. "Ducks never get wet."

"I forgot," said Charlie, as he skated off.

CROSSING THE ATLANTIC OVERNIGHT

Years ago Kipling wrote a story he called "With the Night Mail." It was a highly fanciful account of a trip in an airship bringing the mail from London to Quebec, across the Atlantic overnight. It was told with all the wealth of detail only the mind of a Kipling prodigal imagination could not bring the story nearer the present day than the year 2000.

Things seems to be shaping to prove Kipling's wonderful imaginative powers most commonplace, and the author conservative.

On a boat now approaching New York is a British naval officer, coming to America to complete arrangements for a flight across the Atlantic in an airship in 1914. Authorities are not sanguine that his venture will be successful, by any means and yet there is a general disposition to accord him prospects of success.

Over 115,000 aeroplanes of all types are now in almost daily use. The number is being increased every day. Accidents are still numerous, but, when the number of machines in constant use is considered, they are remarkably few.

There are four great manufacturing plants in the United States devoted solely in the manufacture of aeroplanes, and all of them are being operated to capacity. To secure an airship from the factory, it is necessary to order months ahead. England, France and Germany likewise have immense manufacturing plants for the purpose of satisfying the demand for aircraft.

Experienced aviators fly upside down for pleasure nowadays. They no longer consider it a feat for exhibition purposes.

Surest sign of all that aviation is a commonplace now is the newspapers devote little space to it. An aviator nowadays must be planning or accomplishing something wonderful—such as a flight across the Atlantic—to secure mention in the news of the day.

The philosophers of old times, who took an age or so to meditate upon each further development of human progress, would as surely find life today most exciting and disturbing.

NAT GOODWIN TO APPEAR HERE IN "NEVER SAY DIE."

No booking announcement of the Grand carries more weight or will be more heartily received than does the coming of Mr. Nat C. Goodwin next Friday, Feb. 27, in his latest success, "Never Say Die," written by William H. Post, an American author, while he was touring in Europe with the natural intention of a production in this country when he returned home.

In the course of a meeting with Mr. Charles Hawtrey, England, leading comedian, "Never Say Die" was read to him and a deal was consumated, whereby he produced the play at the Apollo Theatre there and lo and behold it has run a year to tremendous success.

For the American theatre Mr. Nat Goodwin, long recognised as our leading comedian, has been induced to star in this happy comedy of "Never Say Die" and that he will accomplish an equal, if not greater success before he is through, than his English contemporary, is generally conceded by all.

Nat Goodwin, always an actor possessing that fine strain of unctious comedy protrayed with a "high piano finish" that audiences so appreciate, long ago became the greatest comedian on the American stage.

"Never Say Die" tells a story in three rollicking acts, of Dionysious Woodbury, millionaire bachelor, ordained by the most eminent doctors to die in a brief space of time; he forthwith inveigles himself into a series of complications all contingent on his approaching death to work out right. And to say the audience enjoy the unwinding of the tangle is putting it mildly.

Margaret Moreland, who has now taken her place among the beauties of the stage, is the leading lady and the other important roles are in the hands of Gladys Wilson, Charlotte Lambert, Clifford Robertson, Dennis Clough, Isador Marcil, Dan Moyles, Walter Cluxton and Master Bidgood.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make it thick, glossy, wavy, luxuriant and remove dandruff—Real surprise for you.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine Hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

Sanol BLOOD SALT

No Indigestion can exist if this remedy is taken according to instructions—and there is no known remedy to take its place.

This Blood Salt is a mixture compounded so as to resemble in essence and effect, the salty parts of the human blood. It is well known that our vitality is normally kept up by means of the natural blood salts.

Hence a lack of the latter will always superinduce a loss of the former. It is also a fact that with each quart of urine we lose about 18 grams of blood salts. Accordingly we must gradually become weak and sick, unless we provide a substitute for these salts in the blood.

This salt is an excellent and absolutely harmless remedy for any disturbances of digestion such as Dyspepsia, Gastric Catarrh, Sour Stomach, Heart Burn, Loss of Appetite, Constipation, etc., and as an aid to digestion, in wasting and nervous disease.

WESTERN INDIAN BEST.

The Plains Indians Always Superior to the Forest Men.

In the early days of the C. P. R. surveys, through forests, across plains and over mountains, the Aborigine was always a factor to be reckoned with and sometimes a serious one.

The harmless eastern brand of Indians had been reduced to a tribe of mendicants. When not too lazy to breathe, an occasional muskrat or mink skin furnished a precarious existence. And when the white man came along, the crumbs that fell from his table were not despised by his red brothers, and they would often camp alongside of him and laboriously move along.

With their well-known instinct of true gallantry they would kindly permit the squaws and a small retinue of dogs, never absent, to pack heavy loads of their belongings, while the haughty chieftain strode along in the lead with nothing heavier to carry than an old musket.

Of course, this class of Aborigine, principally of the Cree persuasion, "cut no ice." He was simply regarded as an indolent, improvident, dirty, unreliable lying son of the forest. All Cooper's fairy tales fade away when you encounter the real child of nature, so different from the tall, lordly savage portrayed by the novelist, marching along, arrayed in a bunch of feathers and a coat of red paint, with his lovely consort by his side, whose simple toilet, inexpensive, but effective, consists of a string of beads; a coiffure made up with the aid of bacon grease, buckskin leggins and embroidered moccasins.

Alas! how all is changed. The wretched old ragged, sick marked, unsanitary, insect repository who follows along your trail now with his wrinkled old sore-eyed squaw and numerous offspring, picking up the white man's leavings, tells a pitiable tale, and shows only too plainly the decadence of the redskin.

On the Western plains, of course, different tribes are encountered. Horse Indians are invariably superior to those other decaying specimens.

Many a fine, tall, straight, upstanding, unreliable savage might one have encountered a few years ago, clothed simply in his right mind, mounted upon the self-supporting little wall-eyed cayuse.

The different tribes were seldom, if ever, friendly, and in the old days any plain Indian would kill a Cree on sight.

The "Stonies" inhabited the Rock Mountain ranges and seldom if ever came east of Swift Current Creek, then there were "Sarcees," "Blackfeet," "Bloods," "Pagans" and many other hard varieties.

Archives at Regina.

Lisle, M.P.P., in the Saskatchewan Legislature, brought an interesting matter before his fellow-members of the Provincial House the other day. He wants his Government to start an [illegible]. He is right. What country has ever been great without some history to sentimentalize over? Saskatchewan has history—the story of missionaries who went sky-piloting among the redskins, explorers who lived to tell the world of its great heritage, fur-traders who proved what the explorers had to say. Until very recently Saskatchewan had no respectable temple to enshrine her sacred records. No excuse now. As Lisle, M.P.P., pointed out, the palatial House of Parliament in Regina stands waiting in splendid magnificence. There is much room in that building for the precious written records of the early days of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, the Hudson Bay Co., the missionaries, explorers and fur-traders. It is satisfactory to note that Mr. Haultain and the leading members of the Legislature, both Government and Opposition, are favorable to the archives project.—Courier.

Sir Wilfrid's Jokes

No one enjoys a joke more than Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Premier's sense of humor is keenly developed, and when anything happens in the House which tickles his fancy, he throws back his head, gives a musical chuckle, and allows the famous sunny smile to shine out. When the joke is a very good one, in addition to the above-mentioned performance, Sir Wilfrid pokes his desk-mate Hon William Paterson, vigorously in the ribs, and out of courtesy the veteran Minister of Customs always laughs heartily, whether he sees anything funny in it or not.

After Mr Foster's characteristic attack on the reciprocity agreement in which the man from North Toronto spilled the vials of his sarcasm over the Fielding-Taft pact, turned it inside out, jumped on it, set it up again, and immediately dealt it a swift upper cut, Sir Wilfrid met the Tory orator in the lobby, at the door of the chamber. The Premier tapped him genially on the shoulder and said smilingly:

"Why, George, you don't seem to think much of reciprocity!"—The Mace in Saturday Night.

Would Serve Useful Purpose.

On the opening of the New Brunswick Legislature in 1907 the speech from the throne referred to the expected development of salt wells in the County of Kings, and the mover and seconder of the address spoke of the matter in glowing terms.

Dr. A. A. Stockton, the then leader of the Opposition, congratulated the Government on the anticipated development of this important industry, "because," he gravely announced, "the statements of honorable members opposite generally have to be taken with a good many grains of salt."

Two New Expressions.

Of the making of many new expressions there is no end. A man who considers that "going to see a man about a dog" is out of date, recently explained his leaving a little gathering by saying: "I'm going to give a music lesson to a Chinaman."

Another new one shows that our navy is beginning to affect our speech. A man who swore off indulgence in strong wet stuff declined a drink, with the remark, "I'm in dry-dock now."

Partners In Debt.

"My tooth is just killing me," she complained.

"Why don't you go to the dentist about it?" asked he.

"Because," said she, "I owe him money."

"You and I seem to be in hard luck," said he. "Now, look at me. Every time I go out in my automobile it breaks down right in front of some store where I owe a lot of money."

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment

"SUFFERERS FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U. S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The Young Idea.

In a certain school a schoolboy of tender years is said to have produced the following essay on the camel: "The cannimal is a sheep of the desert. It is called a backteria because it has a hump on its back. The cannimal is very patient and will lie down and die without a groan, but when it is angry it gets its back up, which is called the hump. The shepherds of cannimals is called Arabs. When they live in towns they are called street Arabs. When the cannimal goes on a journey it drinks as much as it can to last for many days. Such animals are called acquiducks. Those that cannot carry enough are called inebriates."

Beer Slang In Germany.

Even the serious Germans, it appears, have a rich and racy slang. Here are some examples that a writer for the Baltimore Sun lately clawed out of a German dictionary: Bierfisch (beer fish), the little bits of cork that sometimes float in beer; bierrede (beer harangue), a speech made at a banquet; bierbass (beer bass), a heavy, unmelodious masculine voice; bierbruder (beer brother), a barroom acquaintance; biereifer (beer zeal), extraordinary and absurd enthusiasm.

Old Salts.

Another couple was about to be launched on the sea of matrimony.

"They don't seem a bit afraid," some one back in the crowd observed.

"And why should they?" asked the gentleman next. "They've both been across several times."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

No Swearing.

"Jim isn't drinking now."

"Honest? Did he swear off?"

"No; he really quit this time."—Toledo Blade.

The Storm Nose at Sea.

The picturesque name of storm nose (Gewitternase) is given in Germany to the wave of high barometric pressure which often precedes a storm or a heavy squall. The barometer rises suddenly and then falls more gradually. It is believed that this phenomenon is responsible for sudden changes in the level of the sea. Observations on the seas surrounding Denmark have led to the conclusion that the change of level thus produced sometimes amounts to no less than three feet.

The Devil's Knell.

Among the famous bells of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, is one known as "Black Tom of Soothill," which was presented to the church in expiation of a murder. "Black Tom" is always rung on Christmas eve. Its solemn tolling as it strikes the first tap at exactly midnight is known all over Yorkshire as the "devil's knell," it being the notion that when Christ was born the devil died.—London Standard.

MURDER INDICTMENTS.

A Sample of the Idiotic Style in Which They Are Written.

Murder has been written of as a fine art, but it remained for the United States to treat it as a sport. In many of the states an indictment for murder contains nearly enough words to fill a column and sounds like the conversation of an idiot. Here is a sample:

"That the said J. F. G., a certain pistol then and there charged with gunpowder and leaden bullets, which said pistol he, the said J. F. G., then and there in his right hand had and held, then and there unlawfully, purposely and of deliberate and premeditated malice, did discharge and shoot off to, against and upon the said F. M., with the intent aforesaid, and that the said J. F. G., with the leaden bullets aforesaid, out of the pistol aforesaid, by the force of the gunpowder aforesaid, by the said J. F. G., then and there discharged and shot off as aforesaid, him, the said F. M., in and upon the upper right side of the back of him, the said F. M., then and there"—

This isn't as idiotic as it looks, however. It is part of our sporting theory of justice, which makes a murder trial a game of skill and finesse between opposing counsel. By the slightest deviation from statutory form one side may lose the game. Convictions for the most abhorrent crimes have repeatedly been set aside because of trivial verbal omissions in the indictment.

Had the murder referred to in the above quotation occurred in Canada the indictment would have read simply: "The jurors of our lord the king present that J. F. G. on the 6th day of August, one thousand nine hundred and eight, at the city of Winnipeg, in the province of Manitoba, murdered F. M." Canadian procedure concerns itself with the murder. Ours in many jurisdictions concerns itself with the legal sport, whether the murderer is punished or not being a secondary consideration.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Whole Period.

"There is a period in a woman's life when she thinks of nothing but dress."

"What period is that?"

"From the cradle to the grave."—Puck.

Neither despise nor oppose what thou dost not understand.—William Penn.

To Meet an Emergency.

"Madam, have you any old clothes to give away?"

"I have a suit belonging to my husband, but I fear it is too big for you."

"Oh, that will be all right. You just set me out a square meal and watch me eat enough so that I can fill it."—Washington Times.

A Protection.

"Any man looks stupid when he wears a monocle," said the critical girl.

"That's why so many of us fellows wear 'em," replied the candid youth. "If we happen to look stupid we blame the monocle."—Washington Star.

No Wedding Day Bargain.

The Husband (during the quarrel)—You're always making bargains. Was there ever a time when you didn't? The Wife—Yes, sir; on my wedding day.—Variety Life.

The Cynic.

"Married yet, old man?"

"No, but I'm engaged, and that's as good as married."

"It's better, if you only knew it."

Suffering is part of the divine idea.—Beecher.

A STUDY IN FIGURES.

Calculations Necessary to Produce the Nautical Almanac.

It may safely be said that no one outside the publishing office has read the entire Nautical Almanac from beginning to end, but each figure of the printed almanac is in the office examined twice and read three times.

The total number of figures exceeds a million; but, great as that number is, it is trifling compared with the number of figures employed in the calculations, as the almanac figures represent "bare" results only. The moon, for instance, requires for its calculation more than a million and a half of figures, and similarly with other branches of the work, such as the sun, the planets, etc. Contrary to the general opinion, practically every figure in the book is fresh from year to year.

The tables from which nearly all the work is calculated have been originally constructed from the labors of the astronomical observer and to a large extent from the observations of the sun, moon and planets made at the Royal observatory, Greenwich. Telescopes and other astronomical appliances are conspicuously absent, as the work of the staff is purely mathematical and not observational.—London Telegraph.

A Hospital Nurse's Hands.

As an example of trademarks have you ever noticed the hands of the hospital nurse? The soft white hand which in fiction is occupied in cooling fevered brows does not exist and could not. It is a skilled hand, but its work makes it rough and chapped. Try bathing your hands in disinfectants twenty times a day and you will find that, look after them as you may, they will soon be seamed with cracks, which an east wind often turns to bleeding cuts. And as they are worked hard for some twelve or thirteen hours a day the nurse takes a somewhat larger size in gloves than most women. If you ever see the photograph of a hospital nurse you may observe that she prefers to keep those hands behind her back.—London Chronicle.

Longest Family Tree.

The biggest family tree in the world is believed to be the one which traces the genealogy of Queen Elizabeth back to King David and thence to Adam or at least as near to Adam as one could get. The coat of arms is given in almost every case, with full particulars of the dates of births and deaths. The labor of providing coats of arms is abandoned before Methuselah's time, but the chart measures forty five feet and certainly does take one through a maze of nobility.

SKATES GROUND AND SET BY ELECTRIC MACHINE

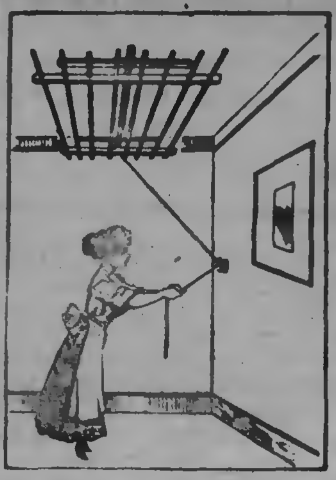
It will surprise many persons to learn that there are two chapters in the Bible which are practically identical, these being the 19th chapter of the Second Book of Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah. There are 929 chapters with 592,493 words in the Old Testament, and 260 chapters and 181,253 words in the New Testament. Asked off-hand, one would probably say there were more words in the Bible than in Shakespeare's works, but, as a matter of fact, the balance is in favor of the Bard, who has the respectable total of 814,780, or 41,317 more than the Bible. Altogether his plays have no fewer than 1,277 characters, one of whom (Hamlet) has 11,610 words to deliver.

"Hamlet," indeed, is the longest play, containing as it does 3,930 lines, while the "Comedy of Errors," is the shortest, with 1,777 lines. The longest word is "honorificabilitudinatibus," which is certainly a tongue-twister. The curious can find all the letters of the alphabet in the 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra, while reference to the 117th Psalm will show that it is not only the shortest chapter in the Bible, but also the middle chapter of the book.

CLOTHES DRYING RACK

Attached to Ceiling and Can be Lowered or Raised Again

One of the best of all devices for drying clothes indoors is the rack shown in the illustration. It is 6 feet long and 3 feet wide and can be attached to any kitchen or laundry ceiling. It is lowered and raised by means of pulleys. When the garments are to be hung on the rack it is lowered to a convenient height and then raised when filled. This carries the clothes to the top of the room, where they are not only out of the way, but where the air is warmer and drier and where they dry more rapidly and more thoroughly. This rack is also useful to air clothes on after they have been ironed, as many laundresses like to do rather than fold them up while still smelling of the iron. Even when in use it is not an incumbrance and at other times is scarcely noticeable.



CLOTHES NOT IN THE WAY.

FISHWORMS IN WEST

Not Known For Years But Not Now a Rarity

An old-timer passing along a Regina street noticed an earthworm on the pavement. Proceeding a short distance, it all suddenly dawned on him that it was something out of the ordinary and seized with the happy thought that it might be one of a few of the only survivors of the species in the West he returned and transferred it to a nearby lawn. Passing up the street a little further, however, he noticed several earthworms, and their presence in the district struck him as a very remarkable thing.

This gentleman had been a resident of Saskatchewan for fifteen years or more. During a large part of that time he had been engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in all that time he did not remember having seen such a worm in any part of the Province.

Several other residents reported having seen a few fishworms lately, something which they never saw before.

Earthworms inhabit nearly all parts of the earth except the frozen regions of high latitudes and altitudes, dry sandy soils, and portions of the North American prairies. It is recognized by old-timers that up to the present they have been a scarcity in Saskatchewan, and why they should be getting common is not known. One reason given is that the climate is becoming milder.

WHERE DO PINS GO?

Like Everything Else They End in Dust

For many years the world has been baffled by the problem of where the pins go that are turned out in millions of millions by the pin factories.

But the problem seems to have been solved at last. A Paris scientist, Dr Xavier, has been experimenting on pins, hairpins, and needles by the simple process of watching a few. He states that they practically disappear into thin air, by changing into ferrous oxide, a brownish rust that soon blows away in dust.

An ordinary hairpin took only 154 days to blow away. A steel nib lasted just under fifteen months. A common pin took eighteen months to vanish. A polished steel needle defied the ravages of the atmosphere longest, taking two and a half years to disappear.

So the reason why the world is not a foot deep in the pins it buys is, it seems, exactly the same which makes an iron surface scale off when exposed for a long time to the atmosphere without the protection of paint.

Education in Canada

Ontario leads among the provinces as having the greatest percentage of persons five years of age and over capable of reading and writing. Of the Eastern provinces Quebec has made the greatest proportionate increase in the past ten years in the number who can read and write. That the educational standard of the British immigrant has improved in recent years is evidenced by the fact that their proportion of illiterates is smaller in those provinces which have received the greatest number of them within recent years. The per cent proportion of illiterates among the foreign-born immigrants is much higher and is fairly level for all the provinces, being highest for both sexes in Manitoba.

Grown in Enormous Quantities in Deep Caverns Near Paris

One of the most important industries carried on in the suburbs of Paris is that of mushroom-growing. In the various districts surrounding the French capital there are numerous old quarries, and in these subterranean caverns mushrooms are planted and grown to maturity. Scattered all around one may see quadrangular wooden towers, which are the shafts used for ventilation of the quarries. Some of these were the source of the stone and plaster used by mediæval builders in erecting great public edifices in Paris.

In general they consist of a labyrinth of low and narrow chambers. In them are found conditions of temperature and humidity favorable to the culture of the mushroom. Provision for ventilation is essential, and wells are dug for supplying the large amount of water necessary in this form of "farming." There are 250 mushroom "installations" in the vicinity of Paris, and 1,000 workmen are employed.

The value of the product, which is much sought by the gourmets of Paris, is about $3,750,000 annually.

A MAN OF IRON

Australian Nonagenarian Still Able to Work in Foundry

Australia is rightly regarded as a young country, but it also evidently has its quota of veterans. William Jones, of Maryborough, Victoria, furnishes an illustration. Though ninety years of age, he is still working in a foundry. Familiarly known and highly respected as "Old Bill," Jones was born in England on May 2nd, 1823, but has enjoyed 67 summers under the Southern Cross. He began work at the Maryborough foundry when it was established, over 50 years ago. Though a nonagenarian, Mr. Jones still enjoys good health, and labors for eight hours daily; often, when business is exceptionally brisk, he works for a longer spell. He never misses a day, and when the whistle blows is always at his post.

Daughter of Famous Fenian

A venerable figure at the Banagher Convent Jubilee celebrations was that of Mme. Adina, who was the third Irish nun to join the Banagher foundation after its establishment. She is the daughter of Stephen Joseph Meeney, the well known Fenian leader, who was arrested and imprisoned not only during the '67 period, but also in '48. She was absent from Ireland for forty years and returned to the Bower Convent, Athlone. She noticed many changes for the better in the condition of the people.

Footballer Sent to Prison

At Newcastle John Armstrong, a well known Grimsby professional footballer, was sent to prison for eighteen months for housebreaking. Counsel asked the judge to deal leniently, as Armstrong's career as a footballer would be ended anyway. The judge said it was absurd to suggest that such an offence should be overlooked because the man was a professional footballer.

Tar Eats Into Iron

Tar as a covering for iron work must be used with great care, inasmuch as the crude material contains sulphuric acid and ammonia. This may cause serious pitting and rusting. Furthermore, it does not adhere well to bare metal and should never be applied except as a covering for other pigments. The refined product offers the advantage of great resistance to foul atmospheres and corrosive gases. On account of its dark color the presence of rust cannot be easily detected.

Heavy Cost of Big Battles

It is a little curious that some of the most far-famed battles—Titanic struggles we are accustomed to call them—have really been less destructive than less well-known battles. We look upon Sedan as a battle of giants, but it was less costly in life and limb than Plevna, and both of them were much less murderous than Blenheim or Waterloo, which in their turn are surpassed in the gruesome list by the little-advertised battle of Assaye, when thirty-one per cent. of the British troops were placed hors de combat.

Telephone in the Clouds

A telephone-exchange three miles in the air! This station, said to be the highest in the world, is in the meteorological observatory on the top of Mount Rosa, in the Pennine Alps, 15,450 feet above sea-level. At this elevation snow is always found, and advantage is taken of the high insulation given by dry snow, the wires in the last section, at the peak, being simply laid on the snow-covered ground.

What Kamloops Means

Kamloops, B. C., situated at the junction of the North and South Thompson Rivers, derives its name from an Indian word meaning "the meeting of the waters."

Solidly Built Houses

Austrian laws, which are rigidly enforced, require dwellings and business houses to be built of solid material from interior to exterior.

Bomb Fire Signal

The contents of a can explode when a fuse becomes overheated and give an audible fire alarm in a recently patented device along that line.

Kills Weed Roots

Spring tongs, terminating in pointed blades, have been patented by a Connecticut inventor for removing weeds, roots and all, from the ground.

Makes Sure of Unconsciousness

Apparatus for pumping an anesthetic into a person's lungs and insuring the administration of a definite dose has been invented by a Paris doctor.

Fine Clothes and Food Not Necessary—But Hard to Abandon

It isn't things which we need that cost so dearly as to keep most of us poor, but the things that we don't need and would be better without. In other words, it's the luxuries which at once impoverish and enslave us.

For instance, take the much discussed matter of eating. It is literally true that a person in good health can keep the human machine going at full efficiency on the merest fraction of what the average Canadian thinks he must spend for food. A glass of milk, a handful of uncooked and uncracked wheat—wheat just as nature meant it should be eaten—and, for desert, a prune or a pinch of raisins make a meal rich in all the essentials of nutrition at a cost which is negligible.

The same rule of simplicity is true of other daily necessities. Clothing, to cover nakedness and serve as bodily protection, can be had for the merest fraction of the sums usually expended upon it. In proof, see how little you spend on your camp clothing and how serviceable and comfortable it is. While for bedding a pile of pine twigs and a blanket make a couch as restful as the downiest contraption that ever graced a king's palace. It has been demonstrated that people can be fed with palatable and sufficient food at an actual cost, right in this era of high prices of six cents a day.

They can be, but they won't.

AMBASSADORS' PAY

European Countries Give Big Money to Their Diplomats

In contrast with the position of the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who has to rent his own house, on a salary of $17,500 a year, is the situation of foreign diplomats in Washington. All of the important embassies in Washington are either owned outright or are rented by the countries represented, ample funds are provided for upkeep, and salaries range from $30,000 to $50,000. England pays her ambassador at Paris, $45,000; at Berlin, $40,000; at St. Petersburg $39,000; at Rome, $25,000, and at Vienna, $40,000. Germany pays her ambassador at Paris, $30,000; at London, $27,500; at St. Petersburg, $37,500; at Rome, $25,000; and at Vienna, $30,000.

The French ambassador at Berlin receives $28,000, at London, $40,000; at Rome $24,000; at St. Petersburg, $40,000; and at Vienna, $36,000. Russia pays her ambassadors at Berlin, London, Paris, and Vienna, $40,000 each.

The highest salary paid to any United States ambassador is $17,500 a year.

WHAT ONE MAN DID

Ban Johnson Did Much to Make Baseball What It is

Organised baseball owes much to Ban Johnson. He broke in as a rebel chief but once firmly established in power became the big czar. Johnson, through his American League, instituted a number of long-needed reforms. He made of the much-abused umpire a national figure instead of a "scapegoat," and by forcing respect for him from the players eventually commanded also the veneration of fandom. It was Johnson who was largely instrumental in stamping out all forms of rowdyism upon the field. And when he had forced recognition to equality from the National League, he was one of the leading spirits for peace and good will toward one happy, concerted union for the common good.

The Johnson regime marked a new era in professional baseball. He was at first looked upon with suspicion. It was not believed at the time he expanded to major league distinction that there was room for two big circuits. He not only proved that there was but added such an impetus toward universal patronage that the great pastime has gone booming on more and more steadily with each succeeding season.

A BATTERED BATTLER

Nelson Has Lots of Money But He is Entitled to it

It is doubtful if a more thoroughly "beaten up" individual than Oscar Matthew Battling Nelson ever appeared before the public.

Nelson took everything that came his way for years, including large purses, [illegible] and theatrical contracts. He is worth perhaps a quarter of a million, all of which he has earned with his pair of broken hands and broken-up countenance. Look at his nose, broken so often that he has lost count of the breaks. Look at his cauliflower ear, caused by stopping punches with the side of his head. Look at his hands, knocked out of all resemblance to human hands by landing unscientifically, but effectively upon the heads of opponents, and then ask yourself if you would look like the Battler for all of his money?

Battling Nelson's disfigured countenance and battered hands.

This Editor Knows Golf

A western editor evidently knew whereof he spoke when he made the following comment on his editorial page: "Golf is something like the newspaper industry. Anyone who has never tried it can publish a paper better than the average editor. Anyone who has never attempted to club a small ball over a quarter section of land knows in his heart that he can do the thing far easier than the pitiful wretches he observes going through the motions. Some people who have never played simply [illegible] it is as easy as rolling off a log."

RETURNED HER HAT.

She Didn't, but He Did, and He Must Have Been a Brave Man.

The bravest man in New York made his appearance in a Broadway store one day last week. He carried an enormous bandbox, which contained an enormous hat, on which the man wanted what he considered an enormous amount of money refunded. The man was pretty mad, and while looking for some one who had the authority to negotiate the transaction he talked loud enough for everybody to hear.

"My wife bought this hat," he said. "She doesn't need it. She has already bought three hats this season. She paid $25 for this one. She has never worn it. It just came home last night. I can't afford to throw all that money away, and I want you to take the hat back. She wouldn't bring it down, so I undertook the job myself."

"By the side of that man Napoleon was a cringing coward," said the young woman who had made the sale. "Imagine him flouncing into a Parisian millinery shop with a hat that he didn't want Josephine to buy. He couldn't have done it. Very few men can. Once in a long while some poor New Yorker with the courage of desperation in his heart returns merchandise which he cannot afford to buy for his wife, and his audacity upsets the whole store for a month."—New York Sun.

Asking Too Much

"See here, young man," said the irate father, "your college principal says he doesn't know of anything that you would be likely to make a success of. Now, sir, I'd like to know what you intend to make of yourself."

"Give it up, father," replied the young man. "How do you expect me to answer a question that even a college professor can't answer?"—Chicago News.

Inertia of the Nerves.

The researches and experiments of a French scientist have led him to the conclusion that the cerebral nervous system is incapable of perceiving more than an average of ten separate impressions per second. After each excitation of the nerves a period of inertia follows, lasting about one-tenth of a second, and during this period a new impression cannot be made. According to the investigations of this scientist a person cannot make more than ten or at the most a dozen separate voluntary movements of any kind in a second, although the muscles independently of the will, are capable of making as many as thirty or forty Punishment After Death.

A negro, already under sentence of life imprisonment, was convicted of two charges of assault to murder. With great gravity the jury sentenced him to five years on each charge and ordered the prison officers to keep his corpse for ten years after he dies. Perhaps a little theology entered the decision, the jury feeling as did the man found hammering away at a snake after he had killed it and who explained by saying he believed in punishment after death.—Judge.

Jerusalem.

"On all sides we see the evidences of skepticism, which often reaches the level of ridicule, for things which we and those who have gone before regarded as sacred," says a Palestine letter in a German paper, "but here in Jerusalem the shocks to our reverence are less frequent and less severe. Come hither quickly, then, all ye who would see it before the march of modernity sweeps over the sacred city and before its atmosphere suffers still greater changes. To the tramway and other things modern electric light, power and heating are soon to be added by a French company. The waters of the river Jordan, which fall more than 600 feet near the Lake of Galilee, will furnish the power. Think of a great electrical plant furnishing power for many miles doing business under the name of 'the Galilee Electric company!' Can you fancy it complacently?"

Against Capital Letters.

The Society of Danish Pedagogues and the Danish Literary association in joint session recently discussed the "excessive use of capital letters" and passed a resolution urging the minister of education to issue orders to teachers in public schools through the kingdom "to restrict the use of capital letters to the beginning of sentences and proper names." In explanation it was urged that "in writing our native language the average person halts and is uncertain as to the big letters, and only good could result from using them only as we have indicated."

Setting Her Right.

The pretty and petulant wife of a congressman stood for a moment before the window of the receiving teller in a Washington bank, then tapped the window with her parasol, exclaiming:

"Why don't you pay attention to me?"

"We pay nothing here, madam," was the reply. "Please go to the next window."—Denver Republican.

These Useless Questions.

"How did you get the bruised face?"

"It was caused by the batrack last night."

"Accidentally?"

"No; I think it attacked me purposely."—Kansas City Journal.

That Yankee Dodge.

The description of the first operation under ether in Europe as given by Dr. F. William Cook in the University College Hospital Magazine is reproduced in the London Lancet, and the scene is referred to as the "most dramatic ever enacted in which medical men grouped the stage." The operation was performed by Robert Liston on Dec. 21, 1846. "At 2:15 Liston enters, that magnificent figure of a man six feet two inches in height, and says, 'We are going to try a Yankee dodge today, gentlemen, for making men insensible,' so Liston introduced ether to a London hospital." The subject was a man, thirty-six years old, whose thigh was amputated. The operation was successful, and Liston uttered the epilogue, "This Yankee dodge, gentlemen, beats mesmerism hollow."

What He Found Out.

An Italian journalist, Signor Tommaso Giloni, has just had some disagreeable experiences. Desirous of knowing something of the lunatic asylums from within, with the object of ameliorating the lot of the insane, he presented himself at the gates of the Cimarosa asylum and asked for an audience of the king of Italy. The attendants showed him the door, and then he ran foul of the police and in the end found himself interned in the asylum. The doctors examined him and finding him far from tractable, administered an emetic. Then they gave him a shower bath and next vaccinated the enterprising journalist. After that they held a consultation in the presence of the "lunatic," whose bona fides they evidently suspected, and brutally but unanimously agreed that the only treatment in such a case was trepanning for a cancer on the brain. By this time Signor Tommaso Giloni thought the best he could do was to confess. This he did and found himself at the police station. The magistrate, however, released him, observing that he thought the doctors had administered sufficient punishment.

Palmed the Jewels.

Mary Andre was a palmist in Trieste, Austria. When she examined the hands of well to do women she generally predicted some impending misfortune and explained this was very likely due to their possessing some unlucky jewel. A number of her clients intrusted the palmist with their jewelry in order that she might discover which was the offending stone. Frau Andre must have had a large clientele, for she suddenly disappeared from Trieste with $25,000 worth of this jewelry and has not been heard of since.

A Legend of Mount Omi.

Mount Omi, on the border between western China and Tibet, has the longest staircase in the world. On top of the mountain there stands a Buddhist temple, around which gather some of the holiest traditions of that religion and which is made a Mecca to the Chinese. To facilitate the ascent of its slippery sides some 20,000 steps have been cut in the mountain, forming a single flight, up which the pilgrim toils. Because of its inaccessibility few Europeans have ever visited the spot, but a number of travelers have ascended the stairway and are positive that it is no legendary myth. There is a legend that in earlier times the pilgrim was forced to ascend the mountain without artificial aids until the monks conceived the plan of requiring every pilgrim who would gain especial benefit of his journey to cut a single step.

A SMART FROCK OF SERGE SHOULD HAVE A PLACE IN EVERY WARDROBE

There is nothing more satisfactory, especially at this time of the year and a little later, than a plain dress of serge, ratine or other dark durable material. By way of trimming, a bit of contrasting material, a few colored buttons or a frill of net or chiffon is all that is needed.

In No. 7628 a dull blue hard finish serge is smartly relieved by trimming bands of dark green cotton duvetyn. This cotton duvetyn is a velvety looking fabric, somewhat higher priced than most cottons but rich appearing, and one gets the impression that it will wear very well.

To copy this dress in size 36 it requires 5¾ yards of 36 inch serge or other fabric. Serge may be purchased in good quality from 75 cents to $1.50 a yard.

In 7658 silk poplin makes up very effectively, charmingly relieved by a high Medici collar of white organdy. The color is an olive green bordering on the yellow. A feature of this frock is the collar; the wired Medici effect in back extends into a broad, softly draped fichu in front, which is graceful and becoming.

This design may be copied in size 36 with 4½ yards of 36 inch material. Silk poplin may be purchased from 75 cents up.

A DRAPED COLLAR AND AN EFFECTIVE RUSSIAN BLOUSE

The draped collar standing out a trifle from the neck in back is one of the novel features that mark the new frocks. In some instances it gives a slight suggestion of the fichu, but ordinarily it is strictly Japanese. A most attractive costume of Ratine is illustrated in No. 8190. This material shows a silk corduroy stripe on a foundation of voile. Here the color is dull green combined with plain black satin. This costume shows a novel skirt and an attractive blouse with a draped collar.

In size 36 this dress may be copied with 4 yards of 42 inch material.

In 8192-8193 we have another Japanese collar which is highly attractive. The blouse itself is kimono in effect, has a chemisette of net and a small in-set vest. A band at the bottom of the peplum gives a new and pleasing effect.

To copy this design in size 36 it requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the blouse (8192) and 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the skirt (8193).

Did the Mercury Go Down?

An esteemed evening contemporary last night describes the departure of a well known young local lady for the west, and, in the next line, under the same heading, says, "And still the mercury goes down below zero." It is to be realized that the mercury in Peterborough might have gone down to zero because the lady has left, but why say so?

Valuable Game Cock Dead.

Mr. James Arnott, of 313 Louis street, on Monday night lost one of the most valuable bantam black red game cocks in this part of the country. A Local Boat Glider.

A reader of The Times who lives in Berlin, Germany, a few months ago, saw a story in this paper regarding a swift gasoline launch owned by Mr. Thomas Palmer of this city. Our German reader has written Mr. Palmer regarding a 12 horse power engine he put in one of his launches. He has sent drawings and diagrams of a flat bottomed boat, designed to not go through but slide over the surface of a river or lake and asking prices for the accomplishment of such an object. Mr. Palmer has replied to his correspondent.

A Feline Infelicity.

Some weeks ago it was suggested that if a woman cop were employed by this city, said lady in blue skirt and brass buttons might do something to improve the morals of local Tom cats. On Tuesday night a resident of Ashburnham, going home, after a hard day's work was kept awake for several hours. This East Ward citizen is the unhappy owner (it is really his wife who owns them) of two tabby cats of the female persuasion. Our hero, after losing several hours sleep on account of "Scat! Won't you come out, Mariar?" looked out of his window. Back of his shed was, in the dim moonlight, a procession of Thomas cats, numbering about 14. The citizen first "shooed" the cats; then he threw his shoes, his wife's stays, his wife's pet alarm clock and finally his reputation for clean speaking. As these took no effect, he slung a piece of hardwood from below the kitchen stove and slew two of the feline would-be Mormons. He then returned and slept.

Spring Assizes Open

Yesterday afternoon the Spring Assizes opened at the Court House with Mr. Justice Kelly presiding. There were no criminal charges on the docket but a large number of civil actions are being disposed of. Among the more interesting cases is that of John Robertson of Havelock, who sues the village for $5000 damages for the death of his three children killed by the caving in of a gravel pit; another is a suit for the Lakefield Building & Canoe Mfg. Co. on a writ issued by G. N. Gordon against Sir Henry Pellatt and others for $4,337.54.

A Modern Aboriginal Indian.

Yesterday afternoon a true type of the Indian that used, in bygone days, trap and hunt at Ungava and Hudson Bay, slowly meandered up George street dragging a sleigh on which reclined a bag of furs. This Indian is a thoroughbred. No trace of contamination of the effete white man is visible in his color or features. He had a fur cap on as large in circumference as a politician's hope for pickings. That hat ran up to a point which ended about a foot above his straight black hair. The sleigh was home made. It was held together, not by modern nails, but by deer sinews, such as were used when George Washington used to civilize the aborigine by giving him bottles of "trade gin." This Indian comes from Chemong Indian Village.

That Terrible Fatigue Can Be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Enerby, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't Care

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Meyer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realize I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose and indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CHAS. FROHMAN SENDING MISS EVA MOORE AND MR. H. V. ESMOND TO THE GRAND

Charles Frohman will present those distinguished English players, Miss Eva Moore and Mr. H. V. Esmond, at The Grand, next Saturday, Feb. 28, matinee and night. Miss Moore, whose name is a household word with English playgoers, will always be remembered for her delightful performances in association with Sir George Alexander at the St. James' Theatre, where she created the leading roles in "Old Heidelberg" and H. V. Esmonds play, and then in his great success at the Criterion Theatre, "Billie's Little Love Affair." She was also associated with Sir Herbert Tree at His Majesty's Theatre and with Sir Charles Hawtrey at the Comedy Theatre in that famous comedy, "One Summer's Day."

Mr. Esmond has had a most successful and interesting career upon the English stage, where he has as an actor, achieved a distinction that places him in the first rank of English-speaking players. In this country he is best known as a writer of plays, he having no less than sixteen to his credit, all of which have achieved a great measure of success. Some are well known here, as all theatre-goers will remember with pleasure "When We Were Twenty-One," "My Lady Virtue," "Grierson's Way," "The Wilderness" and "One Summer's Day."

Mr. Esmond brought over with him the identical company that supported him and Miss Moore during their long season in London. Miss Moore and Mr. Esmond will be seen here in Mr. Esmond's latest play, "The Dear Fool," a remarkable comedy of English life.

Anybody who has ever seen "One Summer's Day," or "When We Were Twenty-One" will find in his latest comedy the same idyllic representation of life, and at the same time an even more vivid view of the actualities of life; in fact, the piece itself turns on a dramatic episode quite fresh to the English-speaking stage.

It is probably the strongest and most human play Mr. Esmond has yet written, not only does it reach the heart but it carries with it a note of frailleasness that lifts it quite out of the rank of society drama as it is served to us to-day.

The play tells an interesting and fascinating story. There is a literary quality in the writing and a neatness in the construction which are interesting and there is a mellowness in the story of its lovers which has a real appeal. Over it all is the unmistakable atmosphere of English life. All of these qualities and the fact that it is extremely well acted count strongly in its favor.

Miss Moore has a most suitable role which she enacts with variety and charm, with touches of genuine feeling, contrasted with moments of vivacity and sparkle. Mr. Esmond is seen to splendid advantage in a most delightful role.

The entire company are well fitted in natural and congenial roles; among them being Estelle Dunne, Marion Courtney, Leslie Banks, Reginald Grasdorff, Howard Stuart, Constance Grove, Lemmmine Newcomb, Fred Groove and Harry Ashford.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large one being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys pin worms. IMMEDIATE SUSPENSION OF ALL SALE OF LIQUOR AT M'CONKEY CAFE IS MAGISTRATE'S ORDER

Proprietor Closes the Bar Forthwith and Instructs Waiters ---Must Not Re-Open For Sixty Days

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The liquor license of McConkey's restaurant was suspended by Magistrate Denison for sixty days at 12.30 this afternoon, after several more witnesses had been heard in regard to the disorderly New Year's Eve celebration. His worship remarked that he was convinced that the whole thing had been a drunken revel and what might be called an orgie, and that thirty or forty women had been taken out drunk.

"I think the whole thing was a most disreputable affair," said Col. Denison after he had expressed the opinion that it was pre-arranged.

"There is evidence to show that there was not only drunkenness, but men kissing their own wives and other people's, just exactly the sort of thing that you could not call anything but disorderly," said the Magistrate.

Not Bad Characters.

"You could not hold that these men and women who were there were bad characters," said Mr. Ludwig for the defence.

"No, no, not for a moment," replied the Magistrate, "but it is a case as to whether they were disorderly and they were."

Sharp at one o'clock, half an hour after the Magistrate suspended the license, the doors of the McConkey buffet, in the rear of the hotel, were closed to all. Mr. McConkey went to the hotel straight from the Police Court and conveyed the edict to the head waiter, telling the latter to ask all those in the buffet to leave and not to allow anybody else to enter. About a score of gentlemen were in the room when Mr. McConkey returned and his announcement caused general surprise. They all left, many forgetting even to empty their glasses.

Special waiters were stationed at the doors and nobody except employes of the hotel were given admittance.

IS CHURCH LOSING

The Roman Catholic directory recently published the figures for the Roman Catholic population in the United States, and it places them at 15,154,158, which is an increase over last year of 138,000. But during the year at least half a million Roman Catholic immigrants came into the United States. Where are they? The probability is that there are in the United States to-day some millions of people who were once Roman Catholics, and who possibly may still call themselves such, but between them and their Church there is an ever-widening chasm.

QUEBEC TO MONCTON ROAD WAS CRIMINAL WASTE OF GOOD CASH

Hon. George E. Foster Says Findings of Report Justify Criticism---Attempt to Serve Party Interests

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Hon. George E. Foster, who will address the Borden Club this evening, is staying at the King Edward Hotel. Asked for his opinion on the revelations regarding the construction of the National Transcontinental, Mr. Foster said, he had not been able yet to give much careful consideration to the report, as he had been absent from Ottawa for several days.

"The outstanding facts," he said, "would seem to be that a great national undertaking, involving an expenditure of $200,000,000, was entrusted to the hands of a railway commission, and appears to have been given wholly into their charge for constructing without any effective Government supervision. This would not have been so bad if the commission had been so constituted as to give assurance that the special knowledge and business experience of the members of the commission fitted them to undertake the stupendous work. Although all the members of the commission may have been very estimable personally, I think that the doubt which prevailed at the time and judgment after results unmistakably show a weakness in its composition which has been fatal to the proper carrying out of the undertaking.

The Initial Fault.

"Apart altogether, therefore, from any question of malpractice, the inherent weakness of the commission was the initial fault. Criticisms of method of letting contracts and classification of materials and lax supervision of construction seem, from the report to have been well founded and the opinions which largely prevailed before disclosures came have been abundantly sustained by the findings of the commission. If it had been designed to adopt a scheme by which large amounts of the primary appropriations should be diverted from the object and distributed for the benefit and enrichment of private interests, no better one could have been devised. As a result the country finds itself saddled with an enormous liability over and above the physical valuecessary to have provided the desired line of transportation."

Mothers Often at Wit's End

—trying to find a safe, nourishing food that will agree with the baby that has just been weaned.

This is an important epoch, and on securing proper food depends the future growth and health of the child.

Grape-Nuts prepared as follows has often solved the perplexing problem.

Place one or two teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts in a cup of hot water; stir for five minutes, at intervals; pour off the liquid portion and add a little sugar. Feed this "liquid Grape-Nuts" to the child.

Milk and cream, and more of the softened Grape-Nuts, may be added later on.

This food is convenient, economical, and safe. It is worthy a trial, especially where other "Infant Foods" do not make good.

Oshawa Seven Trim Belleville in Overtime Play Score 5 to 4

Brock street rink was well filled last night to see Belleville and Oshawa fight for the honor of meeting Orillia in the next round.

Referee Lawson Whitehead started the players off at 8.35. Belleville cinched the first goal in a few seconds play. The game throughout was lightning fast, both teams showing excellent speed. The ice was in good condition, but very little combination was shown by Belleville.

The half-time score was 2—1 for Belleville. Full time 4—4. Oshawa notched the winning goal in the first five minutes play.

SPRING ASSIZES WERE CONTINUED YESTERDAY

Yesterday afternoon the Spring Assizes were continued with Mr. Justice Kelly presiding. Mr. R. N. Ruddy acted for the Crown.

Perhaps the most interesting case is that of John Robinson against the Corporation of Havelock, in which the former sues the latter for $5,000 for the loss of his three children who were killed when a gravel pit, owned by the Corporation, caved in.

The counsels are O'Connell & Corkery, and Lynch for the plaintiff; and Peck, Kerr and McElderry for defendants.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair with rising temperature.

LIVELY SCENES ARE LIKELY AT OTTAWA

First of May Will Probably See End of the Session.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—To-day was the first Parliamentary holiday since the House opened, and this morning, Ash Wednesday, found the corridors practically deserted. There will be no sitting to-day and the various Departments are closed. The remainder of this week will be taken up with routine business.

Coming weeks are likely to be marked by more lively scenes. The Opposition held a caucus yesterday and decided, it is said, to kick up a whole lot of dust in connection with the Transcontinental report in an effort to blind the public to its real significance, and came down to the House in the afternoon in a better fighting mood than they have displayed thus far this session. Wednesday night sittings will be started shortly, and already there is a feeling in the air that May 1st will likely see the close of the session.

AN IMMENSE LOCK

Trent Canal to Have Biggest Lock of its Kind in World

CREATES A LIFT OF 47 FEET

Brief Description of the Latest Marvel of Engineering Skill—Lock to be Built at Once.

Adverting to an item in the Times of Tuesday, regarding the early completion of the Trent Canal, it might be noted that yesterday a Times' representative saw the big blue prints of the last uncompleted link of this important waterway. This covers some 35 miles from Lake Couchichin to Georgian Bay. This is officially known as the "Severn River" Division. The Severn River flowing westward, drains Lake Simcoe and Couchiching.

The portion of this remaining part of the Canal to be first built is a section running eastward from Georgian Bay. The uncompleted section includes a lock at Swift Rapids, just west of Sparrow Lake. This will be probably the largest lock of its kind in the world, with an elevating capacity approximately that of the Peterborough and Kirkfield lift locks. It will have a raise of 47 feet and will result in drowning out Ragid Rapids.

This new lock is the first of its kind. A concrete arch spans the lock 47 feet above the lower level. The lower gate instead of opening on hinges, as usual, raises bodily between towers.

Work is being pushed on construction as fast as the Engineering staff is able.

Owing to the efforts of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., tenders are now being asked for section No. 2

A Daniel Come to Judgment.

"But, Judge," protested Dingley, "I don't see how you can fine me $10 on the testimony. This constable says I was exceeding the speed limit, and I say I wasn't. He hasn't brought any witnesses to substantiate his claim."

"They's suthin' in that," said the Judge, "and I reckon we'll have to compromise. You pay the $10 now, and some time, when you're passin' this way again, just let your old car out for all she's worth, and we'll call it square."

SLASHING ATTACK BY MR. RHODES

The following taken from Hansard is a part of the reply made by the member for Cumberland, N.S., to the Opposition critics:

Mr. Rhodes: I hear 'Oh, oh' on the other side of the House, and the oft repeated tu quoque argument. I do not wish for a moment to justify actions of this Administrations with what has been done by the previous Administration, but I want to refer to what they did as an evidence of the insincerity of the objections tonight. Taking one case alone in the county of Cumberland, some eight custom officials were dismissed, some of whom had been in the service for many years, and in no instance was there an investigation or a shadow of an investigation. I have moved for a return in respect to the dismissals in Cumberland, and let me refer to it merely so far as it relates to dismissals in the Department of Customs.

The first dismissal was Alexander Wilson, sub-collector of customs at Pugwash. He entered the customs service on the 16th of January, 1892. Roughly speaking, he was in the service for a period of four years. Under date of June 18, 1897, he was dismissed for active political partisanship. There were no expenses, as no investigation was held. There is nothing in the official record to show by whom the charges were made. I remember in the House last night or the night before that very serious objection was taken because the minister could not disclose upon whose recommendation an appointment had been made; but there is absolutely nothing on the record to show why certain dismissals took place, as the one to which I have just referred. The second was that of Chas. E. Kerr, sub-collector of Customs at Wallace, N.S. He entered the customs service December 2, 1884. Under date October 26, 1897, he was dismissed for active political partisanship on charges made by Mr. J. H. Logan, M.P. There were no expenses as no investigation was held. The third case was that of Robert B. Murray, sub-collector of customs, Springhill, N.S. He entered the customs service on July 1, 1893, which means he was in the service for about four years. Under date September 24, 1897, he was dismissed for political partisanship. There were no expenses as there was no investigation held, and there is nothing on the official file to show by whom the charges were preferred. The fourth was T. R. Lowe, sub-collector of customs, Tignish, N.S., who entered the customs service on January 14, 1888. Under date September 13, 1897, he was dismissed for active political partisanship. There were no expenses as no investigation was held, and there is nothing on the official file to show by whom the charges were preferred. The fifth was I. T. Forsest, preventive officer of customs, Amherst Point, N. S. He entered the customs service on October 23, 1886. I do not know what caused our hon. friends opposite to show some delicacy in this dismissal. They did not merely swing the axe and behead this officer, but declared there was no necessity for an officer at this point and so his services were dispensed with on January 7, 1898. The sixth case was John Moffat, sub-collector of customs, Joggins, N.S.; entered the customs service on May 11, 1864. This mean that he had been thirty-three years in the public service, and I can say truthfully, from knowledge of the family of the man and from having made inquiries in the district, that no finer type of public servant could be found in the Dominion; a man of an exceedingly high character, a man who bore a splendid reputation in the district in which he lived, revered and honoured by all who knew him. He was dismissed, after thirty-three years service, by Order in Council, for active politi-

ASK FRANCHISE FOR MARRIED WOMEN

Large Deputation Wait Upon Provincial Cabinet With Request.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—A deputation from the Toronto Suffragette Association was introduced to Hon. J. J. Foy, acting Prime Minister, and other members of the Ontario Cabinet to-day by Mayor Hocken and Controllers Simpson and McCarthy. Hon. Mr. Foy in greeting the delegation, said that he had been advised to give the ladies what they wanted at once, but he thought perhaps it was better that the Government should hear their arguments.

The delegation is asking the municipal franchise for married women holding property.

The Mayor referred to the big majority given in Toronto. Controllers Simpson and McCarthy both pleaded the cause of the women.

Dr. Margaret Gordon, Mrs. Flora McD. Denison, Mrs. A. M. Guestis, Mr. R. J. Stevenson and Father Minehan also spoke.

Hon. J. J. Foy promised consideration.

ASIATIC LABOUR PROBLEM GROWS MORE ACUTE

In view of the widespread determination of Canadians and Americans alike to check the grave danger of an influx of cheap Asiatic labour measures are being taken to further restrict immigration. Goods manufactured and natural products raised in Asia are rapidly coming into the world's markets and being the product of cheap labour in Asia are just as dangerous to Canadian labour as cheap Asiatic labour in Canada. Such goods if let into Canada free or with a low duty must immediately depress the rate of wages paid in Canada. To offset this Mr. Burnham, M.P., has introduced the following resolution at Ottawa, with the approval of the Minister of Labour, Hon. T. W. Crothers:

"That in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that manufactured goods and natural products coming into Canada from any other Country where the rates of wages of those employed in the making or raising of the same is below that prevailing in Canada, be subjected to a tariff duty sufficient to preserve the standard or rate of wages of those in Canada employed in making or producing like goods and products."

CANADIAN NORTHERN BATTLE IN COMMONS FEATURE OF SESSION

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—The issue raised by Mr. R. B. Bennett and Mr. W. F. Nickle in the railway commission yesterday as to control of capitalisation of railway companies, promise to-day to be one of the big questions of the session. The amendment which they succeeded in having inserted in a Canadian Northern Bill was that the company could not increase its capitalization beyond the present figure of $77,000,000 without authorisation of Parliament. When the bill reaches the House there promises to be a big fight on the question and a regular field-day. The chief objection is to the principle that such a clause should be inserted in one particular bill and aimed at one particular railway. They claim that all three railroads should be placed on the same basis and that there should be general provision made in the railway act for control of all capitalization of railways.

CITY BOARD OF WORKS MET IN ITS REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION

Street Railway Company's Scheme for Giving a Ten Minutes Service Approved of---Decision on Estimates Not Yet Reached---The Mayor Suggests a Paring of $5000

The City's Board of Works met in regular weekly session last night. Chairman Ald. Duncan presiding. There were also in attendance His Worship Mayor Buller, Aldermen Duffus, Anderson, Stratton, McIntyre Johnston, Saunders, Green and City Engineer Parsons.

The Street Railway Company's plans for improving their system to give a 10 minutes' service by building a turn-out track on George street north and south of Charlotte for a total distance of about 475 feet, were practically approved of. The turn-out north of Charlotte street will not be more than 160 feet in length, thus not interfering with the pavement at present laid on George. Other improvements to the track are to be made and freight cars brought into requisition. The 475 feet turn-out or double track on George street will be found of great convenience to the public in transferring at Charlotte and George streets, as cars going both north and south will always be found waiting the C.G.E. and Jackson Park cars; in fact passengers on a Jackson Park car will be able to step directly onto a car going north without alighting on the ground.

The Board will to-day visit one portion of the system where an extension of a turn-out and change of curve is proposed before presenting a recommendation to Council.

The Bell Telephone Co's request for permission to erect new poles was on the Engineer's recommendation granted.

More Salary Wanted.

Street Commissioner H. Evans asked for a substantial increase in salary. This matter will be taken up to-morrow night.

The Estimates.

The estimates were gone into a second time with the result that they were left over until revised estimates and demands from all quarters in concrete shape, so that it can be seen if it is at all possible to keep the rate at 25 mills. His worship had suggested that the following Board of Works estimates be pared: $1500 off $4500 estimated for gravel; $1500 off $4500 for stone; $2000 off $3500 for surface drainage.

Ald. Stratton suggested that the Board's estimates be left over until known if the reduction of $5000 above mentioned would allow of keeping the rate to 25 mills. If not then the total estimate of $33,735 for this year's Board of Work's appropriation might as well stand. The appropriation last year was $28,500. This met with the Board's approval.

The increased income this year on the assessment has already been absorbed by increased demands from the Police Commissioners and the School Board, together with increased interest and sinking fund for debentures.

Gravel Property.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Saunders, the City Trust will be asked to purchase six acres of gravel land in Douro, near Nassau for road purposes.

SHOT WOMAN HE LOVED, BRIDE OF WEEK; AND SELF

Followed Successful Rival and Former Sweetheart to San Francisco to Do Shooting.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 25.—Disappointed in love, Abraham Pepper, of Tacoma, Wash., called Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, his former sweetheart and bride of a week, to the door of a room in the hotel here, where she was spending her honeymoon, shot her dead and then shot himself. With a bullet in the head, Pepper was rushed to a hospital, where his chance of recovery is said to be slight.

F. L. Johnson, manager of the Tacoma Music store, supplanted Pepper in the affections of Miss Dorothy Danhauser, to whom Pepper had paid attention for five years. A week ago Johnson and his bride came here on their honeymoon trip. Pepper followed and yesterday he called at Johnson's room. When Mrs. Johnson opened the door in response to his knock, Pepper fired. As the woman crumpled to the floor, and while her husband was rushing toward her assailant, Pepper shot himself.

MOSCOW CATHEDRAL.

Fantastic Looking Edifice Erected by Ivan the Terrible.

One of the most extraordinary and fantastic Christian places of worship in the world is the Cathedral of Moscow, known as Vasili Blajenni, strange not only in outline and conception, but even stranger in its history. No one knows the architect's name, but the story goes that the czar ordered his eyes to be put out directly the church was completed, so that he should never be able to surpass his work. The idea of the building was inspired by the wickedest and maddest monarch who ever sat on a throne—Ivan the Terrible, czar of Muscovy.

The architecture is in every respect extravagant and barbaric, and the coloring is garish in the extreme. It has nine chapels, roofed by nine cupolas, each different and each stranger than the other. One resembles a pineapple, another a melon, a third is said to ape a hedgehog in its appearance, and the rest are more or less grotesque. Some are gilt; others are painted in brilliant hues. Indeed, the only description is that it is a nightmare of a church, the fitting legacy of a ruler who grilled his counselors in frying pans and clothed his subjects in bearskins in order that trained dogs might worry and tear them to pieces.—Strand Magazine.

A King's Hobby

The late king of Siam had an extraordinary hobby—that of collecting empty matchboxes of all nations. In this connection an interesting story is related. During one of his visits to England the king while passing down Bond street one afternoon, accompanied by two members of his suit, espied an empty matchbox which had been discarded by its owner and thrown away into the middle of the thoroughfare. Without a moment's thought the monarch dashed into the middle of the crowded traffic, grasped the much coveted treasure and was nearly run over by a passing cab. The fact, however, that he was able to add a new specimen to his collection gathered under such circumstances more than compensated him for the risk which he had run.—London News.

Ivan—I saw Captain Deepeeres today. Beers—Well, what if you did? Ivan—What if I did? Didn't you tell me that he was with his vessel when she went down last week with all on board? Beers—Yes, but I didn't tell you his vessel was a submarine.—Chicago News.

A Sea Change.

Paddy—So Bix has given up his floorwalking job and become a purser on a steamer?

Duddy—Yes; from seeing the sales he's turned to sailing about the seas.—Boston Transcript.

LIBERTY BELL.

Its Connection With the Declaration of Independence.

The famous Liberty bell was cast in London in 1752, brought to America and subsequently recast in Philadelphia. It bears the inscription, "Proclaim Liberty Throughout the World and to All the Inhabitants Thereof." It was cracked while being tolled after the death of Chief Justice John Marshall in 1835. It is kept on exhibition in Independence hall, Philadelphia. It has had a fictitious importance owing to the popular belief that its ringing proclaimed the adoption of the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. Concerning this belief, however, Friedenwald in his "Declaration of Independence" (1904) says:

"There is no shadow of authority even for associating the ringing of the bell with the announcement of the agreement upon independence. The mythical legend of the blue eyed boy waiting outside the door to give the signal to the man in the bell tower is the product of the fertile imagination of one of Philadelphia's early romancers, George Lippard, who first gave currency to it in his appropriately called 'Legends of the Revolution.' This book was published in 1847."—New York American.

An Ancient Astronomer.

About 500 B. C. Anaxagoras of Ionia was born. When he "grew up in wisdom" he was the first to teach the source and cause of both solar and lunar eclipses and to give his followers rules whereby they could distinguish planets from fixed stars. He was punished for declaring that the sun was not a god.

Another Way.

Student—I want some information about the bronzes. I suppose I had better write to the keeper? Attendant—Yes, miss, or you might see him verbally!—London Punch.

The Degrees.

"What are the degrees of a stingy man's married life?"

"I suppose they are matrimony, parsimony, testimony and alimony."—Baltimore American.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

STORY OF A MUD HEN.

And the Man Who Tried to Shoot or Drown the Bird.

"It is a mighty hard thing to down a mud hen," said a Portland official. "Every one knows this homely bird, so clever that it can dodge the flash of a gun, making it very hard to hit if any one ever wanted to kill one.

"A friend of mine who was a great hunter, but not acquainted with the mud hen, was out hunting on the Columbia sloughs some years ago when he saw what he thought was some kind of duck floating on the water. He aimed his shotgun and fired, but the bird dived as the gun was discharged, and the shot struck the water where the bird had been a moment before. As the smoke cleared away the hunter saw the bird come to the surface, and he gave it the other barrel, with the same result.

"His obstinacy was now aroused, and he determined to kill that bird before he left the place. He shot away every round of ammunition he had, but the bird dodged every one and still floated in the same spot. In great disgust my friend sat down on the bank and lit his pipe. At the first puff of smoke the bird dived again, and this gave him his inspiration.

"To make a short story, he smoked up all his tobacco in an effort to drown the mud hen, but when darkness fell and he started for home the bird was still floating in the same old spot."—Portland Oregonian.

HOLLAND'S RAILROADS.

They Are Operated at a Loss to Aid the Canal Traffic.

In contrast with the history of Belgium, Germany, France and Austria, Holland alone of all European countries presents a situation where the railroads require protection from the competition of the canals.

Holland thus reverses the general rules which apply in all other countries. Railroad development was remarkably slow in Holland. The first Dutch railroads were short local lines, while the waterway system was extensive and strongly intrenched.

At length convinced that she could not keep pace with other European countries by her waterway system alone, the Dutch government constructed an ambitious line of railroads connecting with the international lines of Europe.

The railroads were built not with any expectation that they would be profitable as investments, but because they were considered absolutely necessary to save the country from industrial decadence. Holland is the only country in the world in which the state has provided both rail and water highways substantially free of capital charge. The railroads are now operated at a loss to supplement the waterways which carry 80 per cent of the traffic of Holland.—American Review of Reviews.

Rivulets and the Rivers.

All are to be men of genius in their degree—rivulets or rivers, it does not matter, so that the souls be clear and pure, not dead walls, encompassing dead heaps of things known and numbered, but running waters in the sweet wilderness of things unnumbered and unknown, conscious only of the living banks, on which they partly refresh and partly reflect the flowers, and so pass on.—Ruskin's "The Stones of Venice."

SNOBBERY BELOW STAIRS.

The Way English Servants Ape Their Master's Airs and Graces.

Writing on snobs in the New York Tribune, Frederick Townsend Martin, the society millionaire says:

We are all familiar with the ludicrous snobbery among English servants that existed in the time of Mr. Pickwick. Not so many of us, however, appreciate what snobbery exists today in the realms of the servants' hall. I was once visiting Baron Ferdinand Rothschild, when my valet came to me and asked if he could go to London by the morning train and get back in the afternoon.

I said to him, "Why do you want to go?"

He replied: "Oh, sir, as we are only stopping here a few days, I did not put in my evening suit, and last night, you being a foreigner, I found myself ranked above all the others and had to take precedence of those who were traveling with dukes, earls and viscounts. I outranked them all and took in the housekeeper to dinner. And my mortification was great when I noticed that every one of the men around the table was in evening clothes, and I alone was in my ordinary black suit. By the way, sir," he continued, "perhaps you, being an American, don't know that in the servants' hall the valets and maids are always called after their masters' and mistresses' names. They don't call them Lady So-and-so, but simply by the last name. Thus, Earl Cork's servant would be called 'Cork.' And in the servants' hall they are seated at the housekeeper's table in exactly the same grade and rank as that observed by their masters and mistresses upstairs."

Straining For a Throne.

Each department of France has its royalist, nominated by the Duc d'Orleans, who is in close touch with the chief of his party's headquarters in Paris, the Comte de Larègle. The latter has under his orders a press bureau, known as the correspondence nationale, from which all the French royalist papers take their cue. Yet another division of the royalist bureau politique in Paris is the so-called Librairie Nationale, which furthers the monarchial cause by circulating hundreds of thousands of pictures, fly leaves and popular pamphlets. Finally there is a service of special messengers, answering to the king's messengers of the English Foreign Office. To these men is intrusted the duty of conveying the commands and instructions of the pretender from his home at Wood Norton to the royalist leaders in France. Owing to the activity of the cabinet noir of the French postoffice, a detective service which makes no secret of examining all royalist correspondence, it is impossible to confide any letters of importance to the mail.

London's Crystal Palace.

The Crystal palace was a great producer of superlatives in its early days, says the London Chronicle. When Queen Victoria wrote of May day, 1851, as "the greatest day in our history, the most beautiful and imposing and touching spectacle ever seen," she was referring to the whole idea and effect of the exhibition, but "the beauty of the building and the vastness of it all" were important factors in the marvel which she relied upon to astound her uncle Leopold. When the palace moved to the new site Herbert Spencer wrote: "I have been once at Sydenham. It surpasses even my expectations, though I had seen it in progress. It is a fairyland and a wonder surpassing all others." Ruskin said that Mr. Dickens has said that there was nothing like it in fairyland and added bitterly that Mr. Dickens was right.

RIGHTS IN PUBLIC NEWS

An interesting decision affecting the prerogtives of a newspaper was recently handed down by an American judge.

County officials understood to hold executive meetings from which newspaper reporters were barred. The newspapers were unable to convince the officials that as representatives of the people they had the right to be present, and the8 went to court. The litigation lasted three years. The issued raised was discussed from every angle and decisions from courts in most of the States were cited one side or the other.

The court finally rendered a decision which was a complete victory for the newspapers. The injunctions restraining the officials from shutting the doors to newspapermen was perpetuated.

"A newspaper has property rights in news relating to the actionsof public decisions," said the Judge as the crux of his decision.

The decision is in conformity with common sense. Public officials are merely servants and agents of the people. They have no right, therefore, to refuse to take the people into their confidence in the performance of their public acts.

The newspaper is a representative of the people. The people themselves cannot, of course, all be present when public business is transacted, and their reliance must therefore be more or less on the newspapers. If the newspaper is excluded from meetings of public officials, it necessarily follows that the people are denied a knowledge of public affairs to which they are entitled

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt as if I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

DIKES IN GERMANY

They Are Built With Great Care and Exactness

When a dike is to be built—and they are still in places making dikes—it is first mapped out by the neatly sharpened stakes, a long straight causeway leading out from shore and widening into a rounded head which abuts on the red line of the channel. Then a ground sill or foundation mattress of willows is woven and sunk at this head and pinned down and held in place by the sharpened pegs. Then wattles are woven and sand filled in, and in places rock, and then, rounding up neatly out of the water and forming a tight covering to the whole, the hand squared blocks of stone are laid, as closely as a city pavement, all over the head and back along the neck to the old shore. It is as permanent and stable as the Harvard stadium, the dike so built, and the river, abandoning the space back of the tip to slack water or to be filled in with sand, flows on with entire grace in the restricted channel beyond the tip.

The care and exactness with which these dikes are made would be laughable if it were not so successful. In a land where hand labor is very cheap days are devoted to doing what in America would be roughly cast by machinery in a couple of hours. But the result is so admirable that one remembers regretfully the ugly pile dikes, the horrid fringes of the improved "off channel" banks of the Mississippi.

Where the dikes have accomplished their purpose and generally on the banks opposite to them the river is revetted above middle water. This, too, is done with the hand squared stones, and as a result the Elbe where completely finished resembles a broad canal between stone lined banks, the stone rising a few feet above the water, and above it the green slope of the fields or a fringe of willows. It is all peaceful, complete and generally beautiful, with at least the beauty of utility where it lacks that of ruggedness and wildness.

Mercury Troubles.

Frost-bitten men are dropping into Edmonton these days. The trails are cold, the nights are long, the snow is deep—all of which may tend to confirm certain phases of western conditions, sketched by a certain literary lady, who recently got into a brawl with Trade. According to despatches in Edmonton papers, the extreme rigor of northern temperature this year has kept many a mother's mail from its destination in the frontier places. When snowshoes have to break trail for the dogs, "it's very charming weather."

ROSES AND THORNS

An Old Eastern Legend and its Application to Human Life.

This world we're living in
Is mighty hard to beat.
You get a thorn with every rose...
But ain't the roses sweet?

There is an eastern legend that when the beneficent Creator prepared the earth for man, causing it to bring forth herbs and trees pleasant to the eye and good for food, each bearing its seed within itself for propagating its kind, the roses had no thorns and the lilies, violets and other blossoming plants were free from thistles, brambles and noxious weeds.

But the sons and daughters of men in their greedy eagerness to gather the flowers, each one selfishly striving to secure a larger share than his fellow seemed likely to despoil the earth of its beauty and leave not even enough blossoms to perfect their seed and perpetuate their species. So the kindly All Father provided the roses with thorns for self protection and sent a host of defenders of the more tender blossoms by causing thistles and briers to spring up around them like wardens of a castle or the bodyguard of a queen. And this is the reason for the thorns and briers nature's protection against human greed.

The legend has a wider application. The roses typify the pleasures of life and the thorns its pains. A life of ease and pleasure was not only useless, but satiating. It would demoralise him who indulged in it. Satiety despoils the rose of its beauty and the violet of its fragrance; hence kind nature makes true pleasure the reward of virtuous effort and punishes over indulgence with penalising suffering to the end that greed may be restrained and self control developed with its attendant virtues of temperance, kindliness, industry and thrift. John M. Stoll in South Bend Times.

Settled.

Old Gentleman (at his daughter's wedding)—My dear, I don't see how I am to get along without you. Bride—Oh, that's all right, pa. Since the ceremony was performed my husband has confessed that he hasn't enough saved to start housekeeping, so you won't lose me after all.

PUNCH ON GOLDWIN SMITH

London Paper Amuses Itself With Canadian's Book

Goldwin Smith, whose "Reminiscences" have been skilfully edited by Mr. Arthur Haultain, was a Superior Person, even to a fuller extent than Horsman reached, or a more modern instance has attained. Looking around him, commenting on men and matters, he found little that was good. His memory of the Duke of Wellington is limited to the veteran's appearance in connection with the Oxford Commission appointed by Lord John Russell, when "he seemed to proclaim his inauguration by making false quantities in reading his Latin speech and wearing his Academical cap wrong side before." Lowell he dismisses in a word. Of Emerson he writes: "I heard him read his own poetry aloud, but it remained as obscure to me as before." I note these characteristics without prejudice, rather in despite of grateful acknowledgment of rare personal compliment. Goldwin Smith quotes with approval two little japes, long since passed into currency, which, in the exuberance of youth, I fastened, one upon Disraeli, the other upon Robert Lowe. With many other authorities he accepts as a matter-of-fact a parentage of which those eminent persons were innocent. He is at his best in his early reminiscences, where the intellectual austerity of the man is mellowed by the memories of boyhood. Other interesting passages are found in the chapter devoted to the American Civil War. Outside academic circles, Goldwin Smith is perhaps best known as "the Oxford Professor" introduced by Disraeli into "Lothair" as "a social parasite." This gratuitous attack deeply wounded Goldwin Smith. "Your expressions," he wrote to Disraeli, "can touch no man's honor. They are the stingless insults of a coward." All the same the sting remained to the end. In his "Reminiscences" he finds it as difficult to keep out reference to his old enemy as did "Mr. Dick" to avoid illusion to the head of King Charles the First when drafting his memorial. In spite of, perhaps because of, certain foibles on the part of the diarist the book is full of interest.

A Congregation of One.

In his younger days the Rev. Sir Cameron Lees, D. D., was a highland minister in a scattered territory and passing rich on £40 a year. On one occasion on the Sabbath day the windows of heaven opened and there was a deluge on a small scale. The young minister of course was at his post, but only one member of the congregation had the courage to turn up, an old farmer. Cameron Lees suggested that in view of the terrible weather they should adjourn to his study and hold their devotions there.

"No, no," said the old highlander. "It is written, 'Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I also.' You are one and I'm one, so there's the two, and we'll have the service as usual." And there was a service for a congregation of one.—London Globe.

Worrying Happiness.

The bishop of Manchester, speaking at a meeting at Church House, Westminster, said the secret of happiness was to have a sufficient multitude of worries.

The man who had only one worry, a blind that would not be pulled up straight by the servant or a coal scuttle the bottom of which was always coming out, found his way to the lunatic asylum, but the man who had no time to dwell upon his worries because he had to go from one to another and back again and round and round like a squirrel in a cage could be a perfectly happy man.—London Mail.

A JACK OF ALL TRADES

Monotony Will Never Kill England's Postmaster General

The British postmaster general is what Londoners call a universal provider, a regular department store of public functions.

He will insure your life, give you a little bank to hoard your pennies in, take care of your savings, sell you an annuity, a postal order or a foreign draft, invest your spare capital in a nice little government bond and pay a weekly pension to your aged mother or aunt.

He carries letters and other mail matter, transmits telegrams, cablegrams and wireless messages, maintains an enormous staff of messenger boys and conducts an express company business for every sort of parcel, from a halfpenny packet up to shipments of eggs, dressed poultry and fresh fish.

He collects all the worn copper coins for the British treasury. He has factories for making his supplies and an electric central station of his own in London for lighting his offices, sending the current through his cable ducts. He will sell you a license for a dog, a carriage, a motorcar or a family coat of arms, or he will put in your telephone and take care of your hellos.

At a dinner the other night the postmaster general confessed that he sometimes doubted whether he had any human personality at all. When he thought of his own functions, he said, he was appalled by them. In his official capacity he is responsible for more property than anybody else in the United Kingdom, employs far more people than any individual or corporation, prosecutes more malefactors every day than the public prosecutor and sends out every week more apologies for himself and explanations of his actions than all the rest of the British population combined.—Telephone Review.

LITTLE SORREL.

The Favorite Battle Charger of Stonewall Jackson.

Among the many battle steeds ridden during the war between the states by the celebrated Confederate Corps Commander Stonewall Jackson of Lee's army his favorite was a charger affectionately named Little Sorrel by the Second corps of the Army of Virginia. He was about fifteen hands and, as General Longstreet said to the writer, strongly resembled, except in color, President Zachary Taylor's Old Whitey of the Mexican war. Jackson rode him at Bull Run, Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Manassas, Antietam, Harpers Ferry, Fredericksburg and on many other battlefields. He mounted Little Sorrel for the last time at Chancellorsville May 2, 1863, and in the battle was mortally wounded by his own men and died a week later.

General Bradley T. Johnson of Maryland in a letter to the present writer remarks: "Jackson was an ungainly horseman, and when he rode by the troops Little Sorrel would strike off on a run. The general would pull off his cap and ride bareheaded at full speed past miles of shouting Confederates. The saying was when you heard that yell before or behind you on the march, 'There goes old Jack on a rabbit.' When the soldiers started a rabbit they'd scare him to death with yelling."

Little Sorrel died at the Soldiers' home near Richmond at the age of thirty-six years and is now to be seen, like Sheridan's Winchester, carefully preserved in a glass case after being prepared by a skillful taxidermist at Lexington, Va.—James Grant Wilson in S. P. C. A. Bulletin.

Sensitive Meredith.

The house at 17 Red Lion square, W. C., London, was once occupied by William Morris, Burne-Jones and Dante Gabriel Rossetti. George Meredith in the days of his extremest penury joined with those other three young men in their bachelor establishment. The state of his boots, we are told by one of the biographers, at length aroused the solicitude of his fellow tenants, who one night stealthily replaced them by a new pair. But Meredith was so much piqued by what was meant in all kindness that he withdrew from the fellowship the next day.—London News.

A Political Placard.

John B. Thompson of Kentucky, who served in both houses of congress, was a master of the art of ridicule. Here is his characterization of the contempt in which party platforms are held after elections:

"The two or three last platform presidents we have had when they got in the car of state and safely seated all around everywhere you could see, 'Do not stand on the platform when the cars are in motion.'"—McClure's Magazine.

COLONEL FITZGIBBON ANCESTOR OF FARMERS BANK ACCOUNTANT

Those who have followed the downfall of the Farmers' Bank will remember that the beginning of the end was certain litigation before the High Court sitting at Lindsay, Ont., in which three former employes of the bank were prosecuted for conspiracy, but who were honorably acquitted.

In those proceedings, and in the later one, a principal witness was the chief accountant of the bank, named Fitzgibbon. The presiding judge complimented him upon the transparent candor and unquestionable honesty of his testimony. The witness, said the judge, ought to be an honest man from the fact that his forebear was the hero of Beaver Dam, who, with Laura Secord, ought to be held in the highest honor. That generous reference by Mr. Justice Harding recalls two remarkable and very important events in Canadian history, and one of the most interesting characters of which that history contains an account.

The victory at Beaver Dam that made Colonel Fitzgibbon famous, is too well-known to need recital here, and the memory of that remarkable affair has been renewed by sketches of Laura Secord published during the past few months. It will be remembered that, in the early summer of 1813, the Americans were in possession of Fort George, situated at the mouth of the Niagara River on the Canadian side. An advance was made towards Hamilton, but it was checked by the night attack at Stoney Creek in which 1,400 Americans were defeated by 800 British-Canadian troops, who captured two generals, four cannon, and 120 men. The American advance party then fell back towards the Niagara River.

Shortly after that victory a British outpost on this frontier was a stone house at Beaver Dam, about 17 miles west of Fort George, held by Fitzgibbon and forty-seven men reinforced by a number of Indians, the entire force of regulars, militiamen and Indians making all told 310. Laura Secord, whose maiden name was Ingersoll, and whose husband was then lying wounded in his home at Queenston, hearing that the Americans intended to surprise Fitzgibbon, tramped at night alone through the forest to warn Fitzgibbon of the impending attack. The warning was turned to good account. The Americans were surrounded, and so confused did they become in the wilderness that they surrendered to a force very much smaller than their own. The heroine of Beaver Dam was Laura Secord, but great credit is due Fitzgibbon for the manner in which he made use of the information carried to him by the brave woman, for the resourcefulness displayed in meeting the crisis, and for the courage and dash with which he carried out his plan, and whose successful issue made Beaver Dam one of the most brilliant events of the war.

FOES TO SUCCESS

Don't Be a Victim of Timidity, Shyness or Self Consciousness.

Timidity, shyness and self consciousness belong to the same family. We usually find all where we find any one, and they are all enemies of peace of mind, happiness and achievement. No one has ever done a great thing while his mind was centered upon himself. We must lose ourselves before we can find ourselves. Self analysis is valuable only to learn our strength; it is fatal if it makes us dwell upon our weaknesses.

Timid, shy people are morbidly self conscious. They think too much about themselves. Their thoughts are turned inward; they are always analysing, dissecting themselves, wondering how they appear and what people think of them. If these people could only forget themselves and think of others they would be surprised to see what freedom, ease and grace they would gain, what success in life they would achieve.

Thousands of young people are held back from undertaking what they long to do and are kept from trying to make real their great life dreams because they are afraid to jostle with the world. They shrink from exposing their sore spots and sensitive points which smart from the lightest touch. Their supersensitiveness makes cowards of them.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

Fixing the Line.

The fourth report of the Alaska Boundary Commission, which is signed on behalf of Canada by W. F. King, and on behalf of the United States by O. H. Tittman, states that boundary work has been completed between Natazhat Ridge and the Yukon River. A line was traced from a point 40 miles north of the Yukon River, the terminus of last year's work to a point about ten miles north of the crossing of the Porcupine River, 157 miles of line projecting was done. The distance monumented was 146 miles, and the number of monuments placed 40.

SURE OF HIS PLANKS

The late Sir John A. Macdonald, as all the world knows, rejoiced in a ready wit, and the following anecdote, which has not yet found its way into print, is typical.

In the old "N.P." days a hot campaign was being waged in Prince Edward County, and Sir John had been brought up to speak at a gathering in one of the western townships where the Grit candidate seemed to be getting too influential. Crowds were out to hear the Old Chieftain, and the extemporised platform groaned beneath the weight of more or less influential specimens of rural humanity.

As the speech went on some of those in the audience nearest the platform noticed that the section of it, whereon Sir John stood, was getting shaky and motioned anxiously to him to come down. With a gay laugh, however, Sir John stepped nimbly to one end, calling out: "It's all right, gentlemen. Everything's solid where I stand."

It is needless to say that the quick fearlessness and the delicate hint of the solidity of the planks in his political platform, won him many votes.

Taking an Advantage.

"Your family seem to enjoy going to Europe."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Mother and the girls have observed that I am weak on getting the value of foreign money. Things are ordered and paid for before I have time to make any intelligent inquiries as to the expense."

Truthful.

"I hadn't been talking with him three minutes before he called me an ass. What sort of a person is he?"

"Well, I never knew him to tell a lie."

Sanol BLOOD SALT

No Indigestion can exist if this remedy is taken according to instructions—and there is no known remedy to take its place.

This Blood Salt is a mixture compounded so as to resemble in essence and effect, the salty parts of the human blood. It is well known that our vitality is normally kept up by means of the natural blood salts.

Hence a lack of the latter will always superinduce a loss of the former. It is also a fact that with each quart of urine we lose about 18 grams of blood salts. Accordingly we must gradually become weak and sick, unless we provide a substitute for these salts in the blood.

This salt is an excellent and absolutely harmless remedy for any disturbances of digestion such as Dyspepsia, Gastric Catarrh, Sour Stomach, Heart Burn, Loss of Appetite, Constipation, etc., and as an aid to digestion, in wasting and nervous disease.

Along the Trail of a "Woman with a Soul"

By WINIFRED BLACK

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.

Winifred Black

THE woman said that her soul was dying, and so she tried to fall in love and bring her soul to life again

"I have been prosperous, contented, smug too long," said the woman. "I have had friends, a sweet family, a beautiful home, everything I wanted, and my soul is dying."

So she went out and pretended to herself that she was desperately in love with another woman's husband

And the other woman found out about it, and her heart broke, and she died, and her two little children were left motherless

The woman who had been trying to revive her soul didn't do a thing for the motherless little children.

She couldn't; she was too busy worrying about her soul.

After his wife was dead and there was no one in particular for him to hurt by it, the man was no longer in love with the woman whose soul was dying.

And so she wept and beat her breast and had a glorious time being miserable—until she met another man.

Younger than herself a good deal, the other man was a musician, and he composed songs and dedicated them to the woman with the dying soul, and she sat and played the songs in the dusk of the evening when the fire began to glow on the hearth She wore one white rose in her hair and was really exceedingly picturesque.

The Man Saw the Light

So the nice girl, who was engaged to the young musician, cried a good deal—and broke her engagement and went away somewhere else to live Then the woman with the soul felt symptoms of another impending death and she sent the young musician about his business, which really wasn't very important business after all.

And then the woman with the soul found a great man—other people looked upon him as simply a successful politician—but she thought of him as a statesman, and she made up her mind she would be his Guiding Star

Oh, to be sure, the statesman had a wife at home, a perfectly good, sensible, practical, loving, devoted little wife—but she wasn't a Guiding Star at all

Oh, not in the least. She was just a plain, cheerful, friendly warming, comforting fire on the hearth—that's all.

So the woman with the soul became the Guiding Star of the great statesman

And when she went to political meetings and sat in the stage box and smiled entrancingly upon the great statesman when he rose to make his speech, she felt very much like Sappho, and Aspasia—oh, very historical and interesting

And when she noticed people nudging each other and whispering, she was not at all annoyed.

"It is the penalty one pays for greatness," she thought; and all the time the people were not calling her a Guiding Star at all. They were calling her something quite, quite different.

And they said so much about it among themselves that the great statesman was defeated for the office he wanted, and he was ill with disappointment and chagrin, and his plain little common wife came and took care of him. The day she arrived the great statesman turned upon his pillow and held out his hands to her.

"Mary," he said, "I thought you were never coming For heaven's sake, throw out those confounded flowers; they make me sick with their heavy perfume."

And out of the window went the sheaf of lilies the Guiding Star had sent.

The next time I saw the Guiding Star she was at a parlor meeting for a Mahatma.

New Conquests—New Failures

He was tall and dark and mysterious, was the Mahatma, and he wore a robe of deepest yellow, and his eyes were like flames of dancing fire.

The woman with the soul was giving a parlor meeting I thought she looked a little fidgety when the Mahatma lingered a little in his farewells to a plump and pleasing young person of rather oriental type

She isn't as young as she was, the woman whose soul was dying. She takes physical culture and massage and new thought. But after all they are leaving traces—the years, those swift messengers who never pass in any road without leaving their footprints, plain, behind them She's a trifle too thin and her eyes are not as clear as they were.

Her two children are nearly grown now—oh, yes, she had children, that was before she found out about her soul. I never saw much of the children; they're always visiting somewhere, or going to vacation camps, or something

Her husband—why, of course, she had a husband—poor man, he studies bugs for a pastime—beetles and things. They say he's quite a sharp at it. I notice that his wife seems to bore him a bit; and the other day I heard that he was going abroad for a couple of years at a German university.

I wonder if the woman with the soul will go along—and meet some of the students. She's just about the right age for an undergraduate.

I forgot to ask her about her soul, the other day at the parlor meeting

How careless we do get in this rushing world of ours!

I do hope it isn't dying again—that precious, precious soul.

CURLY LOCKS FOR THE ENVIOUS

Marguerite Clark's Charming Hair

Use "Water Wave," Says Marguerite Clark

By MADGE MARVEL

DON'T envy curly heads. Use orris root and be one."

That is the advice which dainty Marguerite Clark gives to all the matinee girls who envy her lovely, wavy locks.

"Spend just half the time you waste in sighing for the curl that is not there in brushing it in with orris root. The envy will be directed to you, for straight heads will always long for waves. You think it sounds easy? Well, to tell you the truth it is almost as easy as it sounds."

Miss Clark shook her curls about her laughing face like a roguish child.

"All it needs is care and persistence. The wave you admire in my hair is all my own. I put it there. It is the result of the same wish every straight-haired girl has, combined with the will to make the wish come true.

"Wishing alone will never make your hair curl. It will never banish curling irons from your dressing table. But brushing will. To begin with, keep your hair free from dust and dirt That means a weekly shampoo with some simple cleansing agent suited to its needs and pinning the waves in place while the hair is damp

"Hair needs to be trained If you let it stay straight and straggly you need never expect it to be beautiful. Hair will grow the way it is trained if it is given the right care The curling irons are forgotten by all women who are really determined to have good hair and plenty of it The water wave has taken its place. Brushing and the orris root shampoo will make the water wave the natural one.

"When your hair is dampened, coax it in the waves you wish, then pin them carefully in place with long hair pins or fasten them with side combs.

"It is well to tie a bit of lace or a veil over the damp wave until it is dry, and then comb it carefully. Then, before you go to bed, dust the hair full of orris root. You can get the right kind at any drug store Rub it well to the roots of the hair and then brush it out. Use a brush with long bristle and considerable firmness And brush with long, strong, regular strokes.

"Brush it for an hour. The longer the better. Your head will repay you in comfort for all the effort, and you will feel rested and soothed It is important that all the powder be removed. If your hair is very dry use the powder only once a week If it is oily use it every other day

"Be patient Be persistent. Don't look for a curl in a day But you should see results after a month of regular care. Thirty days of care is not much to pay for anything you have wished for so many times 30 times, is it?"

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest

Discussing Clothes

XXXIII.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

SEE that woman, Peter; isn't her skirt cut prettily?" asked Mary idly.

I stared critically at a woman passing the window, and admitted that the general effect was artistic.

Another woman passed. Mary spoke of the cut of her coat and the style of her fur. Similar desultory conversation had filled the afternoon.

It was Sunday, and at that time we are usually blessed by a line of stragglers who wander out of town bent upon an afternoon walk.

Now, Mary likes me to sit at the window with her in the role of fashion arbiter, and I confess it bores me considerably. I've noticed a singular thing about Mary. She's either just finishing a reference to clothes or just beginning one.

While I was thinking somewhat in this vein the telephone rang

"Yes," I heard Mary say, "yes, yes, indeed, Martha. That would be pretty, awfully pretty. I saw a woman just the other day, and she was wearing a draped skirt—satin—most stunning!—and a brocade coat. The effect was really wonderful, just as you suggest. So many brocaded things in the stores, too, but, dear me, aren't they expensive! I saw some metal brocade yesterday—$11.50 a yard—just imagine."

Inspiriting conversation for a Sunday afternoon, wasn't it? I idly speculated on what the result would be if I should call up Jack Hunter for want of something else to do and discuss with him the new ridiculous kimono sleeves that men are wearing in their overcoats this season He'd doubtless dispatch a keeper to look me up, with excellent reason.

I can't for the life of me see why women don't buy their clothes, settle the portentous problem of their making, and wear them without all this perpetual fevered discussion and dress dialogue.

"Mary," I said, in considerable amusement, when she returned from the telephone, "tell me why it is that dress seems to lie so close to the surface of a woman's mind. Introduce a conversational oar into the stream of her thoughts and up you drag laces and silks and ribbons—Mrs. Thingumaderry's gown perhaps—or some gown you're planning to wear yourself. As far as I can make out the high light in a church parade, a wedding, a play, or an audience of any description is clothes, with a capital C. I'll wager that 80 per cent. of the idle conversation of some women pivots about the eternal perquisite—clothes!"

Now, though I was perhaps unjust to some women in that statement, I was really very lenient with Mary. For, to be perfectly honest, 90 per cent. of Mary's conversation touches upon the eternal problem of feminine hearts—clothes.

Mary talks clothes with me; she talks clothes with all her friends; she's usually consulting a fashion book or looking over laces and materials. If she sees a pretty gown she calls up her mother and describes it. Taking all in all it's rather gotten upon my nerves.

I said so, unwisely.

"Don't I always have to look nice?" demanded Mary, truculently. "Would you have me any other way?"

"Certainly not," I admitted "But why, dear, waste such a terrible amount of energy over looking your best. It's easy enough, dear knows. Some of the simplest and quickest costumes you make you look nicest in. And certainly it doesn't help any to have me sit here every Sunday afternoon and pass inane remarks on the cut of a skirt or coat. It's things like that I mean, Mary, the useless and eternal discussion of a necessary evil. If you buy a gown, talk it over with the dressmaker and have it made—that's a very sensible sort of discussion—but for heaven's sake let it go at that. It's when you make it a vehicle of small talk that you consume a vast amount of energy and idea tissue."

"Peter," said Mary with dignity, "if you don't want to sit there you don't have to, you know. Men are stupid."

I wonder if women are more interested in clothes than any other subject in the universe? Is the fashion book a Bible and a dressmaker a monarch of the woman's world?

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

WELCOME, pleasant stranger, welcome to our midst.

A man is among us, girls, a real live man, and he wants to know whether it's really important what you do with your fork, and if you go upstairs in front of a lady or behind her, or whether people don't make a good deal too much fuss about all the little rules of society.

Of course they do, brother; of course they do make too much fuss; but, after all, there's a reason

Every little silly must and mustn't has somewhere in it a grain of good sense.

You mustn't eat with your knife. You might cut yourself, and what a bore that would be both to you and the person opposite you.

You must not drink out of your saucer. Saucers are spilly things, and coffee stains are hard to manage.

You must open the door for the lady. Her hands are pretty full as a rule these days, and if you don't open the door for her she's liable to drop things all over the place, and then see how busy you'll be.

Why shouldn't you be like other people, Brother Jonathan? Honestly, now, when you come to think of it, why shouldn't you?

It's just as easy, and most of the time a good deal easier. That's why it's done, as they say in England.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Sterilize Your Beard or Brave Bacilli Menace

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

DR. HIRSHBERG

LET Hercules do what he may, the cat will mew, the dog will have his day. This is the disgusted view of Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. Such disheartening thoughts have come to him because his soldiers have cut off their beards and grown, as he thinks, Americanized.

A smooth-chinned man appeared on Friedrichstrasse—the Broadway of Berlin—recently. German court circles always sneeringly considered such fellows actors, Americans or Englishmen.

But no more. Since the American tangos, one-steps, talking machines, electric inventions and democrats have flooded Europe, even the stolid Teutons are "doing it." Hence the imperial tears.

Ever since Samson sat down upon the Philistines, beards have been the boast of the brave and the fascination of the fair. Even Socrates, the great philosopher, was called by Persius in the year [illegible] B. C., "The Bearded Master."

Christ, Himself, wore a beard which ennobles His face to a most beatific appearance. It was the ambition of the Crusaders to raise similar ones.

Geoffrey, whose expression, "a crown of thorns on a cross of gold," was used by William Jennings Bryan half a generation ago, was called "The Bearded" because of his hirsute chin apron.

Germs Rejoice in Beards.

Master George Killingworth of the court of Ivan the Terrible of Russia, had a yellowish, thick beard five feet two inches long. Since this time and the days of Svengali beards have grown less and less famous and less delectable.

Alas, poor chin, many a wart is richer in hair than certain hopeful whiskers like Hudibras:

His tawny beard was th' equal grace
Both of his wisdom and his face;
In cut and die so like a tile,
A sudden view it would beguile:
The upper part thereof was whey,
The nether, orange mixed with grey.

Whiskers, while beautiful to behold and most beloved by their wearers, are, after all, an abomination. They adorn, they add to stature, they tun with their Galway lances, but they are the pet abiding places of microbes and moles.

True it is that a few bewhiskered creatures, such as I, sterilize or disinfect their chins three times a day before meals and at night But it must be plain that wearers of the bedecked chins do not understand the necessity of whisker antisepsis, hence they fail to find it a feasible thing to do

Some Sample Dangers.

Recently one of my assistants was given the task to ascertain the number and distinguish the types of germs and fungi which lurk in the unusually lean beards of a general, an admiral, a grand opera impresario, a bearded lady in a side show, a Boston Symphony star, a surgeon and in my own beard

Naturally, since "mine own chin grass" was subjected frequently to antiseptic oils and anguents it was freer of bacteria than the others Not so the great surgeon and the other bearded lions.

Among the bacilli, moles and parasites found in the other beards were:

Ring worm.
Barber's itch.
Erysipelas germ.
Boil bacteria.
Blood poisoning microbes.
Diphtheria bacilli.
Lockjaw virus.

And a host of other mischievous and malignant microbes, such even as the tuberculosis bacillus

The Kaiser and his generals are thus shown to be unprogressive, reactionary and far behind the hygienic habits of the privates. Indeed, the alleged bravery of the ancient Goths and Huns was possibly far below what it should have been had they never known what a Van Simpson, a Dundreary or a Van [illegible] was The Japanese and Americans are the greatest among nations, because chin spinach is anathema—except in the writer's case

Wasting Time in Study

By Mme. Margarete Matzenauer

Prima Donna Metropolitan Opera Company

MME. MATZENAUER

I HAVE often wondered why they have so much dead timber in the curriculum of a college. So far as I can discover, year after year colleges teach the same old stuff with never a variation toward the everyday needs of this 20th century

Why so much Latin, and why so much Greek? When I was in school all of the girls in my class thoroughly hated Latin. We had a bit of doggerel which ran:

All the people dead who wrote it
All the people dead who spoke it
All the people die who learn it
Happy death, they surely earn it.

Of course, a grand opera singer does not have the last word in educational matters, and, in any event, my opinion is only the idea of a singer but it does seem to me that the college or university that would set out to modernize its plan of teaching so that everything taught would be applicable to everyday needs—that is my idea of the kind of college that is wanted

Owing to the rapid progress in ideals, fact, figures and functions, I believe college students should learn live [illegible] under the guidance of live profe[illegible]

I think it is high time for institutions of learning to stop carrying all sorts of useless baggage belonging to the [illegible] 15th or 17th century. Marked progress has been made in every other line. [illegible] not start a like progressward among college curriculums?

Raising Willow Plumes

By Tom Jackson

THE OSTRICH is a silly bird who likes the desert land, who, when he's scared conceals his head down in the yielding sand. 'Tis then that wild men come along, while he is standing pat, and yank the feathers from his tail to ornament a hat. Of course the ostrich is surprised, of something feels the lack, but then the ostrich cannot help what's done behind his back, and so he wanders sadly off, surrounded deep with glooms, and straightway starts upon the job to raise more willow plumes. And when he has another bunch a-waving o'er the plain, the wild men sneak up on his nobs and yank them out again

You'd think the ostrich would grow sore and try and make a kick, but every year the wild men come and do their little trick. The ostrich never will learn sense; he's boob to beat the band, and so he always hides from view his wrong end in the sand. Perhaps there is a reason though, why ostrich isn't wise. He's bigger than a ton of coal, with head of peanut size. To do much thinking with a head like this the ostrich can't; it isn't large enough by far to run his [illegible] plant.

The ostrich has an appetite most wonderful and great. It gets away [illegible] ev'rything from tacks to armor plate. Scrap iron tid bits he adores, and [illegible] ware does him good. You see he doesn't stop to chew, but always bolts [illegible] When captured and put in a zoo he does not sigh or wail, he knows [illegible] way to keep feathers in his tail

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance." "She whipped him upon her return." "He kissed her back." "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation." "She seated herself upon his entering." "We thought she sat down upon her being asked." "She fainted upon his departure."

KING'S ATTENDANTS NOT OVER-WORKED

Royal Palace Run Like a Big Business Institution With Lots of Help

The changes that have taken place in the Royal household of Great Britain during the past twenty-five years are numerous, though in some ways the general management of the Royal establishment approximates now more closely to what it was twenty-five years ago than it did in King Edward's reign.

A quarter of a century ago the headquarters of the Royal household was at Windsor Castle, and Queen Victoria went only occasionally into residence at Buckingham Palace. In those days there were fewer Court officials. But the officials of the Royal household twenty-five years ago were worked far harder than most of them are now, and were practically always in attendance. Nowadays there are several officials of the household who are not required to be in attendance more often perhaps than once a month.

In Queen Victoria's reign most of the chief officials of the household resided at Windsor Castle, but when the headquarters of the Court were changed, after King Edward's accession, to Buckingham Palace, the "resident" officials became far fewer, for most of the ladies and gentlemen of the household have houses of their own in London, and only go to Buckingham Palace when required. Nowadays, not more than four officials of the household are in residence.

Maids of Honor

The Maids of Honor are never now in residence, and the Mistress of the Robes very rarely. Twenty-five years ago, when the headquarters of the Court was at Windsor Castle, the Mistress of the Robes was nearly always in residence at the Castle. The Mistress of the Robes nowadays is only in attendance on the Queen on state occasions. A quarter of a century ago she was not only in constant attendance on the Sovereign but supervised the whole management of the royal wardrobe, checked all her Majesty's dress bills, and it was she who (under her Sovereign's directions), regulated the hours of attendance of the other Ladies-in-Waiting.

Mr. Gladstone, during his ministry, came to Windsor Castle four times in one week. Nowadays the Prime Minister has an audience with the King not oftener than once or twice a month, unless he has some special reason for desiring to see the King, or the King wishes to see him.

The letter which the Prime Minister used to write every night during the sitting of Parliament to the Sovereign has become a thing of the past. King George relieved Mr. Asquith of performing this entirely formal duty almost directly after his accession.

Servants for Servants

Nowadays the general management of the Royal household is conducted on far more businesslike lines than it was twenty-five years ago. If there were then fewer officers of the household than there are now, there was a much bigger staff of servants, most of whom had little or nothing to do. The attendance in the state and private apartments was performed mainly by the Indian servants, who themselves were waited on almost hand and foot by another set of servants.

The Indian servants were, however, pensioned off after King Edward's accession and the whole management of the household was put on a different footing.

During the reign of King Edward the court was very rarely at Windsor Castle, but King George and Queen Mary both like Windsor, and are constantly in residence there; so that though Buckingham Palace remains, of course, the headquarters of the court, many of the servants and some few of the officers of the Royal household are permanently at Windsor.

It is but a little over a quarter of a century ago that Buckingham Palace was provided with a telephone, at the suggestion of the late King. Now there is a big private exchange at the palace, with an operator on duty day and night.

Officer's Wine Bill

Lieut. J. F. V. Guise, of the battleship Thunderer, was charged before a court martial at Weymouth with disobeying the commands of Captain Oliver in exceeding the limits laid down for his wine and spirit bill, and also with committing an act to the prejudice of good order and ship's discipline in ordering a ship's steward to enter liquor consumed by him against the names of other officers in the wine book.

He pleaded guilty to all the charges, and was ordered to forfeit three months' seniority, dismissed from his ship, and severely reprimanded.

Cities Need Good Design

London, in a design made by Sir Christopher Wren after the fire of 1666, was tendered a great plan for rebuilding the city, which the people failed to have executed, and thereby lost a great asset. Now the people of London are spending hundreds of millions to carry out some of the suggestions of Wren, knowing that it will be a paying investment for the city.

Paris spent two hundred and sixty millions in the revision of the city plan made under Napoleon III., and has found it such a paying asset that it is going to spend two hundred and fifty millions more in similar improvements.

AEROPLANE'S USE LIMITED TO WAR

Too Expensive and Too Dangerous to Become a Popular or Practical Means of Travel

Although the possibilities of the aeroplane as an asset of very great value indeed in the warfare of the future have been generally recognized by aviation experts for some years past, there would still seem to remain considerable doubt in the minds of those who have made a study of the conquest of the air as to whether the aeroplane is ever likely to prove of assistance in ordinary everyday business life. The Birmingham Post secured a number of interesting expressions of opinion on the subject from leading students of the science of aviation.

"I have made a profound study of aeroplanes for many years and, as yet, I have not found any use for them except for military purposes," said Sir Hiram Maxim. "Quite true, they may be very popular, and considerable numbers of them sold for sporting purposes, but sport does not increase the wealth of nations.

"Passengers wish to start from some definite point at a given time, to travel in safety and comfort in all kinds of weathers, and to be delivered at the place of destination promptly on time, and they ask all this at a very low price. It is impossible for the aeroplane to fill all of these conditions, and as far as freight is concerned, the cost of carrying a pound by aeroplane over a given distance would be quite as much as it would cost to carry a ton by rail or boat; therefore it is very difficult to see how the aeroplane can be of any commercial value."

M. Victor Menard, official aviator at Reims, had this to say: "I must confess at once that, as far as everyday business life is concerned, I do not consider it probable that the aeroplane will ever play a particularly useful or important part. Although the science of aviation is, to a very great extent, merely in its infancy, it is my firm conviction that for commercial purposes, except in times of war, it will never prove of real value to mankind, that is to say in the same way as does the motor car.

"I should like to add, however, that in the colonies and 'new' countries where railways are regarded as luxuries and not necessities, the aeroplane will probably play a very important part for postal purposes, and also for medical purposes. In far away homesteads in Canada, for example, in times of illness, the doctor of to-morrow is likely to make great use of the aeroplane."

Count Henry de la Vaulx, one of the many French aeronauts who have made their mark in the science of aviation believed that sportsmen would take kindly to the aeroplane for the sake of adventure, but, "I must confess that I cannot see that it is ever likely to prove of much value in everyday life, for the sole and simple reason that, comparatively speaking, flying must be an undertaking always fraught with a certain amount of danger."

Another English authority, Mr. H. Barber, said that in his opinion the aeroplane is never likely to prove of much assistance in everyday life. He based his conclusion on the fact that the expense of flying, while it will probably become less than it is at present, must always be considerably greater than any other means of securing sport or transportation, and for that reason it could only be indulged in by persons with well-lined purses at their disposal.

Remarkable Baronetcy

It is not many baronetcies that can show such a record as that held by the Rev. Sir John Caesar Hawkins, of Oxford. The title was created by George the Third in 1778, and in 1786 it passed to a grandson. The second baronet died in July, 1793, and was succeeded by his mother, who held the title for the remarkable period of sixty-eight years and four months. Her successor was the present baronet. Thus between 1793, and the present—over 120 years—there was but one change in the holder of the title. The baronetcy has never yet passed directly from father to son, and the present heir is a cousin of Sir John. Members of the family were medical advisers to George II., George III., and Queen Victoria.

Hero of the Footplate

When an express train from Hull to Wakefield was passing under a footbridge at Hull some boys threw a volley of stones at the engine. The front window was broken and a piece of glass cut deeply into the eye of the fireman named Mellor.

In spite of the terrible pain he was enduring, Mellor gallantly stuck to his post rather than delay the train, but on reaching Wakefield he collapsed.

Boy Scouts and Cigarettes

Sir Robert Baden-Powell, speaking at Birmingham, said that he personally had only caught two scouts smoking cigarettes, the sole instances of misbehavior, which was a good testimony to the general good training of the scouts.

LIGHT ON THE HITTITES

A Great Palace Discovered in Central Mesopotamia

An account is published of fresh remarkable finds made by Baron von Oppenheim at Tell Halaf, the Hittite fortress town in Central Mesopotamia, where the Oppenheim expedition has been at work sinc 1911.

Among the new discoveries are the ruins of one of the largest Royal palaces ever unearthed in West Asia. The inner court is over a hundred yards square, and it is enclosed by several rows of rooms. Among the smaller finds are elaborately carved stone door-angles and threshold stones, and very large water vessels.

Near the south door of Tell Halaf citadel was discovered a well-preserved female figure in basalt, and a second statue of an elderly woman holding a vessel. In the town proper was excavated a Hittite "cult chamber," the only one known, with two colossal statues, one male, the other representing a man and woman sitting together, and also a large number of statuettes and other small objects.

TO AVENGE HER SON

Would-be Murderess Disguises Herself as Nun and Attacks Judge

As Judge Balestrieri was leaving his residence in Naples he was waylaid by a woman disguised as a nun, who attacked him furiously with a butcher's knife, hacking him seriously about the head, neck, and shoulders. She was knocked over as she was about to plunge the weapon into the judge's heart.

The wounded man gasped out, "Why are you killing me? Who are you? What harm have I done you?" Whereupon the woman retorted, "You are the murderer of my son."

It appears that about a year ago the woman's son, a youth of eighteen, committed suicide by shooting himself, and the distracted mother got it into her head that he was murdered by a couple of cousins. She denounced them to the police, and Judge Balestrieri tried the case, the accused being acquitted.

A Crushed Name

There are many stories told of the pronunciation of certain English names, that of Cholmondeley, pronounced Chumley, generally finding a place in the list. A story, told of Lord Cholmondeley, gives a possible reason for irregularity in pronunciations.

Lord Cholmondeley was one day leaving his house, when he encountered a man, who, not knowing his lordship by sight, asked him if Lord Chol-mon-de-lay, pronouncing each syllable distinctly, was at home.

"No," replied the Peer, without any hesitation, "nor any of his pe-o-ple."

Palmist's Defence

Jane M'Connell, or Marshall, known professionally as Mme. Nita, was convicted at Glasgow of professing to tell fortunes by palmistry. She said she believed that by means of the hand she could tell certain things with regard to the future. She practised no deceit, really believing in what she told the people. She was fined $25

Protecting St. Winefride's Well

The famous St. Winefride's Well, which has obtained renown for its "cures," is not to be endangered by the drainage scheme for the Halkyn lead mines in Flintshire. It was arranged that the new tunnel shall not drain water away from the well.

DISLIKES INNOVATIONS.

Hence the Rhino Blindly Attacks Anything New to Him.

Sir Frederick Treves, the distinguished British surgeon, in his book "Uganda For a Holiday" has a word or two to say about the rhinoceros.

"The rhinoceros is the embodiment of blind conservatism," he writes. "Its hide is impenetrable, its vision is weak, while its intellect is weaker. It has, however, two marked qualities—combativeness and a sense of smell. It is aroused to its maximum energy by the presence of anything that is new. This object need not be a thing that is aggressive or inconvenient. Its offensiveness depends upon the fact that it is unfamiliar, and the more unfamiliar the object is the worse the rhinoceros acts.

"When a rhinoceros smells a man he will charge him with maniacal violence, although the man may be merely sitting on a stool reading Milton. The massive beast will dash at him like a torpedo or a runaway locomotive simply because the smell of him is novel. Actuated by this insane hate of whatever savors of an innovation, the rhinoceros has charged an iron water tank on the outskirts of a camp and has crumpled it up as a blacksmith would an empty meat tin.

"A conservative rhinoceros with a senile dislike of anything new once charged a train on the Uganda railway, but with no more serious results than the tearing away of the footboard of a carriage. As regards the rhinoceros in this case, it appeared surprised that a thing composed, as it had imagined, of flesh and blood could be so hard. It went off with an additional grievance and an increased swelling of the head."

A CURIOUS DREAM.

Warning That Came to a Granddaughter of Sir Walter Scott.

An instance in which a dream was useful in preventing an impending catastrophe is recorded of a daughter of Mrs. Rutherford at Edgerton, the granddaughter of Sir Walter Scott. This lady dreamed more than once that her mother had been murdered by a black servant. She was so much upset by this that she returned home, and, to her great astonishment and not a little to her dismay, she met on entering the house the very black servant she had met in her dream. He had been engaged in her absence. She prevailed upon a gentleman to watch in an adjoining room during the following night.

About 3 o'clock in the morning the gentleman heard footsteps on the stairs, came out and met the servant carrying some coals. Being questioned as to where he was going, he answered confusedly that he was going to mend the mistress' fire, which at 3 o'clock in the morning in the middle of summer was evidently impossible. On further investigation a strong knife was found hidden in the coals. The lady escaped, but the man was subsequently hanged for murder, and before his execution he confessed that he intended to assassinate Mrs. Rutherford.—London Standard.

Telephoning With Light.

Phototelephony has reached a commercial basis in Germany. Ernst Rhumer of Berlin has contrived an apparatus by which intelligible speech can be transmitted over a distance of nine miles with the aid of a beam of light. The principle of the machine is based upon the sensitiveness of an arc light to sound, combined with the property of selenium, of varying its electrical resistance with the slightest variations in the intensity of a ray of light falling upon it. A searchlight projector at the transmitting end and a selenium cell in a telephonic circuit at the receiving end are the essential features of the apparatus. For use in misty weather, when speech would be inaudible, the inventor has contrived a method of transmitting Morse sound signals by periodic pulsations of the light.—St. Louis Republic.

GRAND CANYON.

An Ideal Place In Which to Realize the Insignificance of Man.

There is one place in this country where a man can step back not by hundreds but by thousands of years, back to the time when the continent was in the making. This place is the Grand Canyon of Arizona. There the visitor sees a panorama in a million colors as the mists gather about the rugged peaks and the sunlight glistens on the metallic deposits of the cliffs. A whole chaotic world discloses itself. Rock forms of uncanny beauty stand out on these unrivaled cliffs, and far down runs the river channel.

Stand on some ledge and realize the insignificance of man when compared with the handicraft of nature, watch a party of travelers threading their way down some winding trail that clings to the great wall and see them grow smaller and smaller until they become mere specks in the great rift, then some idea is gained of this wonderful place. Yet the canyon is so symmetrical and so unlike anything else that it is with difficulty that one can acquire any notion of its immensity. Niagara poured in would hardly have the dignity of a mountain stream.—New York Sun.

A Beautiful Alloy.

Dr. Roberts-Austen of England has succeeded in making out of gold and aluminium a compound metal or alloy which is said to be the most brilliant known. Its general hue is a splendid purple, but as it is turned in the light it reflects bright tints of ruby color. A little more than three-quarters—more accurately, 78 per cent—of the alloy is gold, the remainder being aluminium. Certain of the expectations with respect to the possibility of substituting aluminium for steel and iron are not likely to be realized, but that metal is proving of great use in combination with others, and the discovery of Dr. Roberts-Austen is expected to lead to the production of very beautiful effects in jewelry.—Harper's Weekly.

Equal to the Occasion.

"Does your husband ever compare your ways with his family?" asked the mischief-making friend.

"Oh, yes," said the little bride, dimpling, "but I never get angry."

"That's sweet of you," warmly exclaimed the friend. "But what does the brute say?"

"He says," replied the bride, "that there is nothing in our home like the rampus his mother used to make."

England's Uncrowned King.

Of the long line of kings which have ruled England since the days of William the Conqueror, nearly 900 years ago, there has been only one uncrowned king. King Edward V., the boy king, who met an untoward fate in the Tower of London in 1483, is the only monarch who reigned without receiving the church's blessing or the formal homage of his subjects. Some people include Lady Jane Grey among England's monarchs. If this doubtful claim is allowed England's only uncrowned queen ranks with Edward V. and deprives him of one distinction.—London Tit-Bits.

A Triumph of Imagination.

Tallandier told me that a great archbishop of his acquaintance in Paris had set himself to make an exact design of the imaginary abbey of Theleme, minutely described by Rabelais, and told him that if such an edifice were to be erected it would be the most perfect building every known.—Conway's Autobiography.

AFTERNOON GOWNS OF VELVET OR CHIFFON SUITABLE FOR CONCERT OR LUNCHEON

It is promised for some time to come that the loose, un-fitted lines which mark many of the frocks and suits of the moment will continue modish. In soft materials they are becoming to nearly every one, as they fall and drape the figure rather than add to its size, as so many people think.

In 8077 is illustrated a gown of chiffon over a supple satin. The color is bronze, and the draped sash is of coral velvet.

This frock may be copied in size 36 with 4⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

The circular trimming bands on the skirt and the smart collar make 8110 attractive. It is developed in charmeuse in a rich old red with the guimpe and gathered tucker of shadow lace.

This model may be made in size 16 with 4⅛ yards of 42 inch material and 1⅜ yards of allover lace.

No. 8077—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 8110—sizes 14 to 18.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

THE VOGUE OF PLAID FOR ONE-PIECE FROCKS STILL PREVALENT

Plaids and serges in dull dark colors take the lead for the semi-tailored one-piece frock which is still so popular for general wear and for out-of-door sports. Corduroys and velvets are extremely modish for the more dressy costumes. The plaids are combinations of dark green and red, yellow and black, blue and gold and the more subdued of the Scotch plaids.

Among the new velvets and plushes are "Nacrya", a diagonal wool plush, several fancy cut velveteens, printed epingle velours, and printed plush showing tiny colored figures.

Styles are so varied that the only details we can depend upon are the tunic and the sash. Most of the modish frocks show one or both of these. Often the tunic is merely a shaped band of the material applied to give the effect and often it is ruffle about the hips.

In 7843-7835 the tunic is a shaped bias band of the material applied to the skirt a trifle below hip length. The blouse shows a set-in sleeve, an effective collar and a pointed tucker of lace. A very smart plaid in which emerald green is the predominating color is the material.

This frock may be copied in size 36 with 2⅜ yards of 36-inch material for the blouse and 3¼ yards of 36-inch material for the skirt.

A delicate beige corduroy is used in 7974 trimmed with dyed fox fur and effectively relieved by a broad Roman sash.

To copy this costume in size 36, it requires 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

Number 7843—sizes 32 to 42.
Number 7835—sizes 22 to 30.
Number 7974—sizes 34 to 42.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wasson, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrhozone set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Mediums size 50c; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Lindsay Warder: The wanderings and ponderings of Chief of Police J. T. B. Chilton, Special Constable Geo. Foster and Dominion Detectives Parkinson and Greer around the vicinity of Pumpkin Hollow and farther south in the ward yesterday afternoon, aroused the curiousity of the entire lower end of the ward. Many rumors were put into circulation, but, but no one dreamed for one instant that Lindsay was again the rousting place of a bunch of counterfeiters, men engaged in the manufacture of $10 Bank of Montreal notes. MOTHER! IS CHILD'S STOMACH SOUR, SICK?

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mother can rest easy after giving it because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

INCREASE IN FLEET HELD BY REICHSTAG AID TO FRIENDSHIP

Greatest Pacifist Journal in England, Manchester Guardian Says So

London, Feb. 25.—The Berlin correspondent of the leading English pacifist journal, The Manchester Guardian, says the two-day naval debate in the Reichstag proves that German politicians are unwilling to consiher any proposal to limit armaments. Every speaker in the Reichstag debate welcomed the improvement in Anglo-German relations, but attributed the improvement to one thing only namely the increase in Germany's naval strength.

The Guardian correspondent says this comparatively new theory, that a large navy is a guarntee of good relations with England, has already gained great hold in the Reichstag. The general expectation is that High Admiral von Tripitz means to use the popular naval ferver to increase the number of large cruisers for foreign service. Von Tripitz said it was clear that Germany was under-represented abroad; there was not enough ships to send to south seas, while in Hayti order had recently been restored by cadets from a training ship. A similar reference to Hayti was a perlude to the unexpected increase under the naval bill of 1900.

A Berlin message to The Daily Express is headed, "Top dog of world. More speeding up in Germany's naval yards. Navy is ready,"

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MAKING A REPUTATION IN THE WEST

Saskatchewan Man Tells How They Cured Him, After Four Months Suffering From Backache and Other Forms of Kidney Disease.

St. Phillips, Sask., Feb. 25.—(Special.)—In a new country where changes of climate and impure water are among the difficulties to be surmounted kidney trouble is prevalent. It is the kidneys, the organs that strain the impurities out of the blood, that first feel any undue strain on the body. Consequently Dodd's Kidney Pills have been well tried and tested in this neighborhood.

They have stood the test. Many settlers tell of backache, rheumatism and urinary troubles cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Otto Olshewski is one of these. In speaking of his cure he says:

"I suffered from kidney disease for four months. My back ached. I had heart flutterings, and was always tired and nervous. My skin had a harsh dry feeling; my limbs were heavy; and I had a dragging sensation across the loins.

"I consulted a doctor, but as I did not appear to improve, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes, and now I am all right."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always stand the test. Ask your neighbors.

al partisanship. There were no expenses as no investigation was held, and there is nothing on the official files to show by whom the charges were preferred. The seventh case was James Kerr, sub-collector of customs, Port Greville, Nova Scotia, who entered the customs service on 1st Sept., 1886, which means that he had served for about eleven years. Under date September 10, 1897, he was dismissed for active political partisanship on charges preferred by Mr. H. J. Logan, M.P. There were no expenses as no investigation was held. The eighth case was Mark Phinney, preventive officer of customs, West Bay Nova Scotia: They took a long time to dismiss him, because they found great difficulty in discovering any ground whatever on which to dismiss him, but finally they took his head off. So they dismissed in Cumberland alone, after the elections of 1896, eight sub-collectors of customs—cleaned out the whole box-and-dice of them except a few left for strategic political purposes. There was no investigation and no redress. The correspondence is pitiable in some cases—letters from some of these men who had been in the public service for many years and who were suddenly cut off from that they had properly regarded as a life stipend, and without any redress whatever. There is nothing on the record to show that the Liberal-Conservatives, in spite of this treatment, tried night after night, to prevent the passage of the Estimates in this House. I say in all sincerity, and I am sure hon. gentlemen opposite who have been supporters of an administration will agree with me, that it is hard for a public man to make dismissals. Any dismissals for which I have been responsible, I have made with great regret, and only under extreme pressure; and I do not know but that I have incurred more the displeasure of my friends for dismissals I have refused to make than I have incurred the displeasure of my opponents for those that I have made. Dismissals have taken place under this Administration as they have taken place before and will continue to take place so long as men are human and officials take part in politics. Why do not hon. gentlemen opposite take their medicine? They were defeated on September 21, 1911. Partisanship undoubtedly marked the conduct of a good many of these officials, and they were dismissed. Hon. gentlemen opposite have made their protest, and what more can be said? In view of the record of the Liberal party in Nova Scotia in the dismissal of officials, I confess, I am surprised at the—shall I say?—audacity of hon. gentlemen opposite in coming back night after night to this question of dismissals under Administration. I have read here the particulars of eight dismissals in the Customs service alone. I think I could give the names of a hundred in the various departments of the Government in my own constituency. They were dismissed by the dozens, and not a shadow of investigation in any department of the Government from one end of that constituency to the other. Let me give particularly the case of Alexander Fawley, who was car inspector at Springhill junction. He was a Scotchman, a man of infinite experience, an intelligent man who had the knowledge necessary to make him a proper and efficient car inspector. Upon his experience, skill and care depended the lives of thousands of passengers who passed through that place, and thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of property. He was dismissed without investigation, though he was not a partisan, with the result that he found his grave in 9 months through worry and practical starvation—and the correspondence will show, that in a large degree. And who was appointed to take the place of this efficient officer? Why, a shoemaker, a man who knows no more about cars or car appliances than I know about astronomy—and that is not much. Hon. gentlemen opposite may take a certain pleasure in charging department after department under this Government with ruthless dismissals in Nova Scotia, but if they want to pursue that subject, we shall only have to meet them in kind, and the evidence we can bring forward will not be very pleasant for them. I do not say this in any bitter partisan sense. I do not say it in any bitter sense, though I have been speaking earnestly.

There will be dismissals made without proper investigation improperly made—let us admit that for the sake of the argument, and it is to be expected where so many take place. But let hon. gentlemen opposite remember what took place when they came into power in 1896. Let them play the game fairly, realising that we are now in much the same position that they were in then. But we are proceeding along other lines. Men are getting an opportunity to be heard, and that never took place in 1896. I do not propose to discuss this subject further, except to say that, if hon. gentlemen opposite wish to assume the same attitude with respect to other departments of the Government, as they have assumed with respect to this, I shall deem it necessary to read their record in those other departments as I have done in the case of the Department of Customs.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large one being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to craw out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

BENTON CREMATED? VILLA IS OBSTINATE U.S. ADMITS FAILURE

Washington Unable "Though Straining Every Effort" to Get Authentic News--Future Mexican Policy to Turn on Outcome of Benton Inquiry

Washington, Feb. 26.—The United States Government to-day was exerting every influence at its disposal to obtain from Gen. Villa the surrender of the body of William S. Benton, the British subject, recently executed at Juarez. No reply had been received to the instructions sent to Consul Letcher yesterday to find Benton's grave and Secretary Bryan was surprised by news despatches quoting Villa as saying Benton was buried in Chihuahua City. There have been persistent reports here, too, that the body was cremated. Official denial come from the White House of one published report that Rear Admiral Fletcher had recommended the landing of marines at Vera Cruz. Interest was chiefly centred on the Benton investigation and the high officials conceded that future developments of the American policy toward Mexico hinged largely on the outcome of the inquiry. The Benton incident promises to develop into a test of Caranza authority and influence as chief of the constitutional movement.

Fourteen Americans in Jail.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 26.—Investigation of the story told last night by A. Michaelis that Gustav Bauch and thirteen other Americans were locked up in a jail in Juarez, was set afoot to-day. Despite Michaelis' assertion that his father is a Brooklyn, N.Y., baker his statement was received skeptically for United States. Consul Edwards at Juarez has been assured that with the execution of Wm. S. Benton and the removal of Bauch no foreigners remained behind the bars. Michaelis, who said he left his home at 236 Vernon street, Brooklyn, after a quarrel with his family and was arrested at Juarez, because of a fist fight over a game of cards, declined to leave Juarez when newspapermen offered him asylum on the American side. He said he had telegraphed his father for money and would leave this section as soon as funds arrived. He said his jailers took his clothes from him and left him only rags in which he was turned into the street.

Charles Percival, British Consul at Galveston, Tex., is expected here to-night to co-operate with the American investigation of the death of Benton.

Examination; Not Removal.

Chihuahua, Feb. 26.—General Villa to-day reiterated that he would permit the examination, but not the removal of the body of William S. Benton, which he asserts is buried here. He said that representatives of the British and American Governments and of the widow alone would be permitted to view the body.

Engineer Villally of Cornwall Canal, Placed in Charge of Local Offices

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—As a result of the investigation which has been quietly going on for some months in connection with the Superintendent's office of the Trent Canal, and the local Engineer's Department, the following officials have been suspended indefinitely: Messrs. J. H. McClellan, S. Clegg, George H. Giroux, Hadcock and Government Auditor Mothersill.

Engineer Villally, of Cornwall Canal, has been placed in charge of the Peterborough offices pending reconstruction of the staffs.

It is understood that a number of others are also to be retired at once.

THE PEERS REFUSE TO ACT IN BIG MARCONI INQUIRY

Premier Asquith's Statement on Home Rule Expected in March

London, Feb. 26.—A cable yesterday that the Opposition in the House of Lords would find the utmost difficulty in securing peers willing to serve on the Marconi committee, is strikingly confirmed by the Daily News, which states that over twenty opposition or cross bench peers have refused, including men of the highest distinction, held in the esteem of both parties. It is now reported that even Lord Halsbury will refuse. Several suggestions are already being freely made that the committee should be abandoned.

It is anticipated that if the Opposition will facilitate the necessary financial business, the Asquith Home Rule statement may come the third week in March.

Bonar Law's speech on Tuesday in the Home Rule debate is severely criticised on account of its irreconcilable tone, and scarcely veiled incitement to immediate rioting in Ulster. The Manchester Guardian declares he is a great obstacle to the settlement of the Home Rule question by consent. "Bonar Law is less concerned for the maintenance of union, or for fears of Ulster, than for his own position, which now entirely depends on his being violent enough to satisfy the most violent elements in the party behind him."

"You'll have to pay for that little boy," said the conductor on a George street car the other day.

"I guess not," said the lady firmly.

"Have you never had to buy a ticket for him?"

"No, I have not, and I will not begin now."

"You will have to pay his fare this time."

No. I shall not pay his fare. That s settled, Mr. Conductor."

"If you don't pay his fare I cannot let him occupy a seat. I will stop the car and put him off."

"Stop the car and put him off if you like. He's not my little boy. I never saw him before."

SIR JAMES EXERCISES ON OUTDOOR BALCONY

May Move Home Soon—Sir George Ross Showed Improvement.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—Sir James Whitney is now taking constitutionals out of doors. This morning he spent more than an hour on the long balconies of the General Hospital, walking back and forth. He seems to be almost restored to his old vigor, and is getting back a little color. He has not yet actually set foot on the ground, but the extensive verandahs of the hospital, nearly a quarter of a mile from end to end, give him plenty of space for such outdoor exercise as he is permitted to take at present. It has not been thought advisable as yet to let him ride his bicycle.

He will not return to his home for a day or two yet. His physicians believe that he ought to take plenty of time to recover his strength before he undertakes any exertion. They would not set any time for the move. They do not wish to draw a crowd of curious onlookers by announcing the hour and date.

Sir George Ross was slightly better to-day. For some days past he has experienced a period of depression, but to-day improvement was noted. Dr. Goldie, the physician in charge, said that the change was chiefly noticeable by contrast. Sir George's advanced age and feeble health make his illness a long drawn out affair with little alteration from day to day.

"PEG O' MY HEART"

Fine Attraction to be Presented at Grand Opera House on Monday Night.

Oliver Morosco will present at the Grand Opera House on Monday, Mar. 2nd, his production of J. Hartley Manners' overwhelmingly successful comedy "Peg o' My Heart," which has broken all the dramatic records of a decade in New York City, with Laurette Taylor's creation of Peg which is at present in its second uninterrupted season at the Cort Theatre, New York City.

"Peg O' My Heart" opened the new Cort Theatre, the most beautiful playhouse in America, last season, and instantly the little white marble palace became the point of attention for the entire city. "Peg O' My Heart" rapidly crept up in public favor, until it was neck to neck with that supreme success, "Within-the-Law," and at last, in early summer, actually passed that piece in point of monetary figures, a lead which it afterward steadily maintained, and finally outlived that attraction.

The extraordinary success of "Peg O' My Heart" is unquestionably accounted for by its humanity and wholesomeness—two elements which in these days of bizarre mechanical plots and tawdy sexuality are put so far in the background as to be almost mythological.

Peg, the little Irish-American girl, is as witty as a character from Thackeray's pen; she is as philosophical as a Balzac jeune fille who has the quaint pathos of a Dicken's person—a being from a world of hard facts, certain sorrows and evanescent joys, with a touch of melancholy sobering the brightness of her laughter, and with smiles that tremble for the small irresponsible tears behind them.

"Peg O' My Heart" proved conclusively that New York can still laugh heartily and sincerely at humor which is not coarse, and that a simple story, directly and simply told, is more potent than any plot, fantastic, complex or merely outre.

The following well-known players are in the cast: Marion Dentler, Florence Roberts, Violet Moore, Crosby Little, Cecil Owen, Harold Hendee, L. G. Carroll, Albert Gran and John F. Travor.

EVANTUREL NOT RECOGNIZED BY LIBERAL PARTY

Admitted That He Had Written the Letter as Read

Toronto, Feb. 26.—Mr. Gustave Evanturel, Liberal member for Prescott, is not making any attempt to deny the authorship of the sensational letter read before the Legislature yesterday afternoon by Mr. G. H. Ferguson. Further than that, when seen to-day, he admitted that the document was written by himself. Next, he declares that he has absolutely no thought of resigning his seat in the House. He also recognizes the fact that though a Liberal caucus was held to-day he was no longer taken into the confidence of his leader.

Will Run Again.

Mr. Evanturel declares that he is still a Liberal member, that he is a supporter of the principles of the Liberal party, and of the platform of Mr. N. W. Rowell, with the one exception of temperance. Further than that, Mr. Evanturel declares that when the next general elections come about he will be a candidate, and will ask his old constituents for their endorsation of his conduct. That was what he told the press to-day in his usual offhand manner, which did not attempt to minimize the situation or to elaborate upon it.

Always Opposed Prohibition.

In addition to that Mr. Evanturel repeated briefly the message which he wished to convey to the House late last night, and which he was prevented doing by the Speaker ruling him out of order. It was to the effect that his leader had always known that he was opposed to temperance legislation, his constituents had always known it. He had never been in favor of prohibition, but had always supported the license system in force in Ontario. He did not believe he had done anything wrong in writing his letter to the Hotelkeepers' Association. He had always been their friends, and they were aware of the fact. That is the message, which, with some elaboration, Mr. Evanturel will give to the members of the Legislature when the House opens today.

Mr. Ferguson states on behalf of the Conservative party that there will be absolutely no attempt on their part to press the matter further.

BALLOTING AT WELLAND GIVE WET MAJORITY

Welland, Feb. 26.—The counting of the ballots in the Canada Temperance Act election scrutiny was concluded last night, giving a wet majority in the county of 31. The wets made a gain of eight in poll No. 3, Thorold Township.

W. E. Raney, for the temperance people, challenced the honesty of these returns.

A start will be made at hearing argument on the many irregularities found. It is expected that this will occupy two days at least. The temperance people have supoeaned John Layle and Albert G. Hye, of Fort Erie, and Alex. Higgins, of Stamford the Deputy returning officers at the polls where large wet gains were made.

The surprise of the day came in the examination of the ballot box for No. 3, Thorold Township for which A. Merithew was the Deputy returning Officer. The statement of Mr. Merithew gave 47 for the Act and 50 against yesterdays court showed 43 for and 54 against.

The total vote was the same in each four being deducted from the dry and added to the wet. This made a wet gain of eight as compared with the official count.

"Its a funny thing these gains are all for the wet side," commented the Judge.

"It is queer, it looks as if blunders were made just for the sake of appearances," replied Mr. Haverson.

Mr. Raney claimed that on one ballot the cross had been erased and changed from dry to wet. Only 124 out of 125 ballot papers supplied the Returning Officer were accounted for. The ballots were all loose in the box.

"What is your theory regarding this box? asked Mr. Haverson.

"We have ascertained the facts and will call evidence," Mr. Raney replied.

"On the face of it it seems to be a coincidence all in your favor."

"I may tell you now we do impeach the honesty of these returns," Mr. Raney continued, after consulting with several members of the temperance side.

BRITISH NAVY CALLED UPON IN THE NEW ZEALAND RIOTS

Objection by Labor Member in British Parliament to the Use of Sailors

London, Feb. 26.—The position of the navy in cases of industrial disputes was raised by Arthur Henderson, a Labor M.P., in the House of Commons yesterday. Mr. Henderson wanted to know if during the recent trade dispute in New Zealand the men of the cruiser Psyche and Pyramus were called into requisition and were paraded in the streets with fixed bayonets, and whether the interference was done with the knowledge and sanction of the Admiralty.

Mr. Churchill in reply said: "I have no exact information of the measures taken. They were adopted at the express request of the responsible Government of New Zealand. The following telegram was sent from the Admiralty to the senior naval officers of the New Zealand division of the fleet: "Common law obliges you, if actually on the scene of the riot, to assist the civil authorities on receiving a formal demand. The Admiralty policy is to avoid all interferences in labor disputes. You should endeavor to avoid being in a position where you are likely to be called upon to intervene unless you are personally satisfied that your presence is necessary to prevent bloodshed. The Admiralty have some difficulty in believing that such a condition of things exist in the present case, but you must use your own judgment. It has long been the policy of the Admiralty to disentangle the navy, as far as possible, from disputes of this kind."

Joynson Hicks—"But if the colony desires help from one of his Majesty's ships, in such a case is it at once to sail away?"

Mr. Churchill—"All these questions are matters of tact and discretion."

STRAW VOTE STRONGLY AGAINST HOME RULE

London, Feb 26.—The local Unionist party in Camberwell, which includes a big working class of the division of London represented by Dr. Macnamara, have just attempted to hold a referendum on Home Rule. The result showed nearly completely opposed to the bill. A large number of electors did not vote.

This weeks Truth, which may always be relied upon for accurate news of the Royal family, says the report that Sir John Anderson, of the Colonial Office, has been instructed to draw plans for the Prince of Wales visit to the colonies next year, is pure fiction. Truth confirms the C. A. P. previous message that no plans for the Prince's movements next year have yt yet been considered, nor is the subject likely to arise for several months.

The death is announced of John S. Allen, a prominent Liverpool underwriter, who made many business visits to Canada.

MAY RE-ORGANIZE THE CITY'S ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

And Save $462 a Year--This is Ald Duncan's Resolution --Engineer, Mayor and He to Report Back to Board of Works--Ald Gordon Takes a Hand in the Coal Question

The City Fathers met in Committee of the Whole last night, Mayor Wm. Buller presiding. There were also present Aldermen Stratton, Duffus, Anderson, McIntyre, Johnston, Green, Saunders, Duncan, City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, and City Engineer Parsons.

A letter was read from the Nicholls Hospital Board, stating that under legislation they have authority to collect from the city any deficit for hospital maintenance remaining after their revenues from endowment and all other sources are exhausted. Then the city is liable for maintenance of all indigent patients for which there is at present a big bill against the city from both hospitals. It is proposed that in future the city shall pay a lump sum per year for the maintenance of indigent patients to avoid the need of billing for individual patients from time to time. The Nicholls Hospital Board will meet Council on this subject at an early date.

Ald. Stratton urged that as a straight business proposition the offices of the City Clerk and City Treasurer be so rearranged as to provide fixed salaries for the treasurer and clerk themselves, the whole of each staff to be brought directly under the supervision of the City Council. Also that an assistant City Clerk be appointed. A similar arrangement also to be made in regard to the engineering department. This would mean that, while the clerk and treasurer employ and control their own help, the city pay the salaries and a direct personal salary to the clerk and treasurer. As it is at present the heads of the treasury and clerk's departments pay their own assistants, their salaries being, of course, proportionate to this arrangement.

Ald. Stratton was also anxious that Mr. Armstrong have a capable male assistant, to fill the gap in case of the clerk's absence from sickness or any other cause. Then Mr. Armstrong's hours are altogether too long, and he should have a capable lieutenant.

Ald. Green heartily concurred in the latter point taken by Ald. Stratton.

The Mayor offered that present arrangements are quite satisfactory and should not be disturbed. Then he suggested that Ald. Stratton's suggested change would increase expenditure.

Ald. Duncan could see no reason for a change and expressed high appreciation of the City Clerk's services.

The Mayor pointed out that with the assumption of Hydro-Electric supervision the Water Commissioners will change the system of conducting their business, relieving the Clerk and his staff of some of their present duties. In the meantime Ald. Stratton's suggested changes should be left in abeyance, until, in any event the reorganization of the Water Commissioners' Department is completed.

Finance Minister Anderson and Ald. Johnston concurred in this view.

The clerical work of the Water Commissioners department has always been done the City Clerk and his help.

Ald. Stratton thought this re-arrangement might be gone into now. The clerk to be paid a commensurate salary for his several duties, also his staff; any revenue from the Water Commissioners' department for clerical work to go to the city's credit.

Council, as a whole, agreed that Ald. Stratton's suggestion was a good business move, but thought it advisable to leave the matter stand until organization of the Public Utilities Commission.

Ald. Stratton agreed to this, and the question is left in abeyance a month or two

Mr. Armstrong replied to Council that were he given a young man assistant to acquaint himself with the duties of a clerk, year by year as his experience increased he would naturally expect more salary. This would mean that under present salary arrangements he (Mr. Armstrong) would have to apply to Council for an increase. Consequently, under such circumstances, Ald. Stratton's suggestion that Council pay salaries direct to each employee in his office would be preferable. He was open to accept willingly any change agreed on by Council

Reorganization of Engineering Department.

Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Works urged a re-organization of the Engineering Department, clerically. Mr. Quartermaine, he said, is getting $750 and a lady stenographer $312 a year. He proposed the hiring of a smart young man capable of doing stenography, and bookkeeping and acquainting himself with many rudimentary details of the engineering department, and releasing Mr. Quartermaine and the young lady. The salary for the new clerk was $600, which against present salaries of $1062 for clerical work, would furnish a saving of $462. $300 of this saving could be applied to the present salary paid for plumbing inspection—making $900 a year for this work. (Two applications for the office of plumbing inspector, at a salary of $900 a year, are at hand). The saving would also permit of an increase of $160 a year to Street Commissioner Evans who has saved his salary to the city by overseeing concrete sidewalk construction, and who is entitled to more than $1000 a year. This organization, Ald. Duncan contended, would give more satisfactory service in the Engineering department permit the engagement of a good plumbing inspector and provide for Mr. Evan's increase, without increasing actual expenditure.

Ald. Stratton said Mr. Quartermaine is a good office man, has been in the city's employ a long time—consequently must be conversant with the duties required—and he could not see why he should be replaced by a young man.

Ald. Gordon took the ground that the Mayor, Chairman of the Board of Works and the Engineer are best qualified to judge of the needs of the department in question. Consequently the matter should be left in their hands with power to act.

Ald. Gordon he moved that the question be left with the three aforementioned gentlemen, to make whatever changes they consider necessary.

The Mayor—"I understand that Mr. Quartermaine has taken up stenography. If he can do the work required without a young lady stenographer's help, why not keep him?"

Ald. Duncan—"There has got to be some change in this department, or I throw up my chairmanship. I simply won't stand for present expense for clerical help."

Ald. McIntyre—"I'll second Ald. Gordon's resolution if the matter is reported back to the Board of Works"

Ald. Gordon—"I would not care to do that. The gentlemen named are experts on the question, and quite capable of acting in their departments best interests."

Ald. Duffus—"The chairman of the Board of Works and City Engineer have gone into the question. They feel that something it not satisfactory and should be supported.

Ald. Johnston—"Don't you think the matter should come back to the Board of Works; it is a question affecting their department?"

Ald. Duncan—"I'm satisfied, we are not going to do anything to be ashamed of."

Ald. Gordon—"Very well; I'll change my resolution to read, 'report back' instead of 'with power to act,' as the chairman is agreeable."

This was done and Ald. McIntyre seconded the motion, which then carried.

Increase for Street Commissioner.

This question was next tabled.

The Mayor—"We have two Commissioners a right bower and a left bower; Mr. Evans and Mr. Fitzgerald."

Ald. Duncan moved that Street Commissioner Evans be given an increase of $150. Ald. Green seconded the motion.—Carried unanimously.

Ald. Duncan proposed to save this increase out of the suggested re-organization of the Engineering Department.

Ald. Anderson submitted that Mr. Evans had been overlooked last year in the matter of increases and is entitled to consideration now.

Increase for Sanitary Inspector Proposed.

Sanitary Inspector Spence's salary last year was $700 and $100 allowance for a horse.

Ald. Anderson and Stratton moved that his salary be $800, still allowing him $100 for a horse.—Lost.

Ald. Duffus and Saunders moved in amendment that this matter be left over until the Medical Health Officer question is taken up.—Carried.

The Weighing of Coal.

Ald. Gordon asked that the question of weighing coal on the public weigh scales be referred to the Legal Committee of which he is chairman. "People don't know if they are getting their weight or not." He did not think some coal is being weighed.

Ald. Stratton—"What does it matter anyway? Our coal is brought in, we look at the ticket, and are none the wiser. People have no means of judging of the accurancy of the weight ticketed."

RULES FOR WIVES.

To Which Is Added Some Feminine Advice to Husbands.

Some presumptuous Frenchmen published a list of commandments for wives, one of which ran: "Now and then acknowledged gracefully that thy husband knows more about some things than thou. After all, thou art not infallible." A second and still more daring rule for wives was, "Never be aggressive in thy arguments with thy husband, but always consider him as superior to thee." This was too much for French feminists, and no wonder. One lady answers the presumptuous man indignantly:

The weaker sex has not merely duties; it has also rights. Feminism is advancing, and nothing will stop it. The weaker sex is the equal of the sterner. Equality forever! Here are the commandments which women oppose to those of men.

The lady then gives her rules for husbands with more spirit than logic:

Woman has a right to have whims; it is a privilege of her sex. Never put her out. She might have hysterics, which would impair her health and cost the money in doctor's bills.

Another commandment runs:

Remember, good man, that thy wife is thy superior by her grace, her beauty and refinement. Therefore always worship at her feet.

Where, then good lady, does "equality forever" come in, if woman not only has privilege because she is a woman, but is decidedly superior to man? Surely, the strong minded suffragist would spurn privileges of sex. In another rule the lady seems to show some sly knowledge of her sisters.

If, good man, thou desirest mountain air ask thy wife to come to the seaside; she will immediately propose a holiday in Switzerland.

But this is a very mild gibe at her own sex compared with her final thrust at the other in her last rule for husbands:

Man was created before woman as a preliminary sketch for the masterpiece. Remember, then, O husband, that thou art but a rough draft.

This ought to shut any husband up finally.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

An Alien Gang.

London, Jan. 8.—According to the latest report, the burglar killed in the Houndsditch affray and the two men killed in the Stepney battle were members of a gang of at least 20 aliens of the same type and character, some of them being women.

Owing to the bewildering number of aliases they have adopted the police are finding an almost insuperable difficulty in tracing them. "Peter the Painter" is still at large, it having been established that the second victim of the Stepney siege was a Russian terrorist, who fled to England eleven months ago under the name of Jacob Fogel. He was 2[illegible] years of age, and a native of Kolvno, Lithuania.

TRAVELERS' TALES.

Some That Were Discredited and Vindicated Long Afterward.

Travelers' tales have often been accused of being mere flights of imagination, and in the past stay at home people have sometimes erred in treating travelers' tales with scorn. There was, for instance, the description by James Bruce in 1770 of the barbarous Abyssinian custom of eating raw meat cut from the living animal, which was ridiculed by everybody. Yet Bruce has even recently been proved right. When Paul Du Chaillu explored equatorial Africa in 1861 and described the wonderful gorillas and also the nation of dwarfs there he was discredited none too politely by the British Royal Geographical society. Yet subsequent explorers amply vindicated his veracity.

In the matter of discredited travelers' tales vindicated long afterward it will never be possible to beat the classic instance in Herodotus. He tells how King Neco of Egypt commissioned certain Phoenician mariners to circumnavigate Africa if they could. They did it, starting from the Red sea and returning by the straits of Gibraltar after very many months. And they reported, says Herodotus, that in rounding the southern end of Africa they had the sun on their right hand. "I, for my part," he says, "do not believe this, but perhaps others may."

In modern times that detail is precisely what proves that the Phoenicians did achieve the wonderful voyage. Such an "improbable" fact could never have been invented in an age which was not familiar with the equator.—Chicago News.

The Use of Esquire.

The recovery of a letter which had been sent to a little town in Germany and never delivered to the person addressed cured the writer of the custom of adding "esquire" to a name on the superscription of mail matter. The letter in question would probably have been promptly delivered had the address read simply "Mr. John Brown." But the sender had addressed it "John Brown Esquire," and the communication rested comfortably in the "E" compartment of the poste restante department, waiting to be called for by "Mr. Esquire." One of the popular guide books warns against the use of "Esq.," saying that it might be mistaken for a name.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage-capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,800 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

PROVED HIS WORDS.

Still, the Philosopher Didn't Like It When Death Called.

A certain philosopher was in the habit of saying whenever he heard that an old friend had passed away: "Ah, well, death comes to us all! It is no new thing. It is what we must expect. Pass me the butter, my dear. Yes, death comes to all, and my friend's time had come."

Now, Death overheard these philosophical remarks at different times, and one day he showed himself to the philosopher.

"I am Death," said he simply.

"Go away!" said the man in a panic. "I am not ready for you."

"Yes, but it is one of your favorite truisms that Death comes to all, and I am but proving your words."

"Go away! You are dreadful!"

"No more dreadful than I always am. But why have you changed so? You have never feared the death that has come to your friends. I never heard you sigh when I carried off your old companions. You have always said, 'It is the way of all flesh.' Shall I make an exception in favor of your flesh?"

"Yes, for I am not ready."

"But I am. Your time has come. Do not repine. Your friends will go on buttering their toast. They will take it as philosophically as you have taken every other death."

And the philosopher and Death departed on a long journey together.—Charles Battell Loomis.

Comparatively Modern.

Friction matches are a comparatively modern invention, having been made by John Walker in England in 1827. These were rather crude affairs, however, and he improved them somewhat in 1833 by using phosphorus.

Women will find more news of interest to them in The Times' magazine page every morning than in any other paper.

BORDER TOWNS.

Many That Are Partly In One State and Partly In Another.

A number of towns and villages in the United States are situated on state boundary lines. The names of some of these are formed on the model of what Lewis Carroll called "portmanteau" words. Delmar and Marydell, for example, are on the line between Maryland and Delaware. Pen Mar is on the Pennsylvania and Maryland line. Moark is named from Missouri (Mo.) and Arkansas (Ark.). Texarkana is partly in Texas and partly in Arkansas. Illiana is on or near the Indiana line. State Line, which is half in Connecticut and half in New York, with numerous instances of the sort in other states, is a self explanatory name.

Other border towns whose names do not indicate their position are Port Chester (New York and Connecticut), Blackstone (Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Westerly (Rhode Island and Connecticut), Kansas City (Missouri and Kansas), Guthrie and Fulton (each partly in Kentucky and partly in Tennessee), Harrison and Union City (in Indiana and Ohio), and Great Falls (New Hampshire and Maine). What is virtually one town on the border boundary of Tennessee and Virginia is legally known as Bristol on the Tennessee side and Goodson on the Virginia side. A number of smaller towns might be added to the list.—New York Tribune.

The Chicken Oath.

For the first time in the history of the Vancouver courts the chicken oath was administered recently to Mah Quang, a Chinaman, who was a witness in the case of seven men charged with rioting at Nanaimo. After the oath was administered a young white cock was procured, its head placed on a block of wood, and chopped off by the Chinaman. The ceremony was witnessed by a large crowd of persons.

FOR THE COMMON GOOD

It is the Aim of The Times:

To exploit and advance the best interests of the people of the fair and fertile land wherein it is published, and to which it steadily devotes its efforts;

To stand for liberty and law, equal rights and good government, the greatest boon to a free people;

To foster and encourage private and public enterprise, and hold up the hands of every honest toiler, either with brawn or brain, in every field of activity;

To stand independently for the true interests of the city, the Dominion and the Empire, and for those policies only which make for the common good;

It aims to be excellent and not cheap.

FOLLIES OF SCIENCE.

Seven Problems That Have So Far Baffled Man's Mighty Brain.

The history of science has seven problems that men in all ages more or less have tried to solve, but which have finally been given up by all. To-day they are called follies.

The usual list comprises the following: First, squaring the circle; second, duplication of the cube; third, trisection of an angle; fourth, perpetual motion; fifth, transmutation of metals; sixth, fixation of mercury; seventh, elixir of life. Some lists put the philosopher's stone for the last three and then add astrology and magic to make the seven.

To the unlearned it would seem possible to draw a square which shall be exactly equal in area to a given circle, which is the first problem in the list, but we are told by the highest authorities that it is impossible.

Since the discovery of radium it is claimed that the change of one metal into another has been accomplished, but it is yet too early to dogmatize about the matter.—Chicago Journal.

Learn to Think on Your Feet.

It does not matter whether one wants to be a public speaker or not, a person should have such complete control of himself, should be so self reliant and self poised, that he can get up in any audience, no matter how large or formidable, and express his thoughts clearly and distinctly. In all ages oratory has been regarded as the highest expression of human achievement. Young people, no matter what they intend to be, whether blacksmith or farmer, merchant or physician, should make it a study. Nothing else will call out what is in a man more quickly and more effectively than the constant effort to do his best in speaking before an audience. When one undertakes to think on one's feet and speak extemporaneously before the public the power and the skill of the entire man are put to the severest test.—Success Magazine.

At Sea on Land.

A clergyman who had neglected all knowledge of nautical affairs was asked to deliver an address before an audience of sailors. He was discoursing on the stormy passages of life. Thinking he could make his remarks more pertinent to his hearers by metaphorically using sea expressions, he said:

"Now, friends, you know that when you are at sea in a storm the thing you do is anchor."

A half concealed snicker spread over the room, and the clergyman knew that he had made a mistake.

After the services one of his listeners came to him and said, "Mr. ——, have you ever been at sea?"

The minister replied:

"No, unless it was while I was delivering that address."

Thoughtful.

"Well, he's a very thoughtful and good-hearted fellow anyway."

"I can't see it. I was at his house yesterday, and it never occurred to him to ask me to stay to dinner."

"That's just the point; his wife is taking cooking lessons."

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Our notion of an honest man is the one who on a rainy day resists temptation and buys his own umbrella.

◆

The editor admits that as he looks back over the years he feels ashamed of that hideously comic valentine he sent the school teacher.

◆

Worrying over the kind of baseball team Peterborough is to have this year may serve the good purpose of keeping the minds of some of our citizens off the new post office site.

◆

Young Wanamaker may succeed in flying across the Atlantic in a hydroaeroplane, but our opinion is that it will be a long time before such flights interfere seriously with the passenger business of the steamship lines.

HEADED THE OTHER WAY?

Even the most backward nations are feeling the strength of the present current which is carrying men forward at a rate hitherto unknown. Afghanistan, the last "hermit kingdom" of Asia, is now showing symptoms of intellectual and religious activity. The Ameer has established a university in Kabul, run a telephone line between the important cities, is building a good roads system, has a printing office and newspaper, and is operating factories for making soap, firearms, ammunition, shoes and cloth, while the fanaticism of the Moslem population shows signs of abating, and Christian missionary effort is being moee cordially received.

CIVILIZATION

The cost of living seems arrested in its long-continued upward climb, if, indeed, it is not actually declining. It may be only a temporary phenomenon; that is something for coming weeks and months to determine It may be due to any one of a variety of reasons, or to all combined; that is another matter, and a controversial one. But the fact remains that the cost of living, which seemed to be climbing to the sky itself, has paused of late. Articles of food, besides those, like eggs, which naturally drop from the early winter prices are lower. Cereals, butter and fruit are among them.

The New York Journal of Commerce emphasizes the change, though it points out that the reduction of prices at wholesale does not show its effect on retail prices so quickly as an increase of prices. It points out also that the "sales" in the stores are at lower prices than usually prevail at this season, that textiles and metals hgve had a substantial decline, and that even meats have declined some cities.

So the consumer can cheer up a bit while merry springtime approaches, assuming that business and industrial activity do not slump along with food prices. It is too much to expect that the decline will be large, or that it will show itself in all expenses as in food prices, just as it would be too much to expect a general return to the simple life of earlier years. 'But there comes a sense of relief with the knowledge that food prices can pause a bit and even start the other way on the scale

Strengthens the Throat, Assists Public Speakers

CATARRHOZONE IS THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE AGE FOR WEAK THROAT, HOARSENESS, Etc

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Ctarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throatweakness or catarrh.

$100 REWARD $100

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SHOULD INSULT NOBODY

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—In the Examiner a day or two ago our new postmaster takes offense at a few remarks I made in The Times, in reference to the title given to the lady who inspects the city schools. The postmaster says I insulted the lady who inspects the city schools, and also all the young lady teachers in the schools. Now, I can assure this gentleman that a fair understanding of all I said would insult nobody. My intention was to show that the word "nurse" should not be used in this connection, and as the genial postmaster was a teacher in days gone by, he must know that wherever the English language is spoken the word nurse has a special meaning to the popular mind, and it never could be made properly to express the duties of a school inspector.

But this is only a small literary question for a little friendly discussion, and it is a pity that the postmaster should have allowed himself to descend into bitter personalities. But this unfortunate step the postmaster shows his hand, and the public will not be slow to take the measure of the man There is an old adage that the public are fond of quoting, namely: "That no matter how much one rubs the gridiron it will smell of the herring"

THE POLICEWOMAN QUESTION.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—And so the women of this city can't have a policewoman It ain't good for them. I knew it. Men are not going to be caught playing Adam and Eve any more. Eve will stay quiet for the rest of her life. She was awful pretty, and so fetching, don't you know, and so awfully clevah, don't you know; but when she tried to put it over the old man, Adam once too often, it was back to the ten-pot for hers. And it was only one policewoman, too. It wasn't like having votes and trying to steal away the control of the world from their men folk when the men were away at the wars and the women raisin' the devil and dancin' the tango at home. No, it wasn't like that. It was merely asking for some one they could be confidential with when 'trying to clean and sweeten the city, following around some of them without knowin' it (or if they did know it they wouldn't believe it! on the trail or in the wake of their son's angels of light. 'They say women haven't brains enough to be just. They can only boolioo, and if you pretend you think they're the only pebbles on the beach, they'll never forget you. But that's not all true. There are lots of women who are not trying to run the town and to exert their great and wonderful influence for good. If those women want a policewoman let them have her. We don't owe them a snub anyway.

EXPRESSION OF GRATITUDE

Dear Sir, — Kindly allow me through the columns of your paper to express a few words of thanks to all those who were instrumental in bringing about and making such a success of the hockey game for my benefit. I know that words are inadequate to express my feelings, but I sincerely trust that these lines will in a small measure at least show that I am not ungrateful for what has been done for me.

Ever since I have been sick, I have been meeting with kindnesses from the most unexpected sources, but when I first heard that a hockey game was going to be staged for my benefit, it was the surprise of surprises. Both my father and I understand thoroughly the obstacles met with and overcome, and the personal sacrifices which have been made by many in order to make the game a success. Aside from the financial viewpoint, I feel deeply honored to know that the boys thought enough of me to do what they have done. Last Saturday night's game would be a fitting tribute to any athlete far worthier than I. Of course I was passionately fond of hockey and tried to give my best at all times, but that best is very little in comparison with the manner in which I have been repaid. The benefit game of Febuary 21, 1914, will be indelibly stamped upon my memory as a monument of the well wishes and thoughtfulness of the players and sporting fraternity of Peterborough.

In conclusion I wish to say that when my period of convalescence is over and I am again able to resume work, I hope that I shall be able to continue carrying your good wishes.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain,

Very sincerely,

Charlie Bay.

THE FIRST BALLOONS

The chemical philosophers have discovered a body (which I have forgotten, but will inquire) which dissolved by an acid emits a vapor lighter than the atmospherical air. This vapor is caught, among other means, by tying a bladder compressed upon the bottle in which the dissolution is performed. The vapor, rising, swells the bladder and fills it. The bladder is then tied and removed and another applied till as much of this light air is collected as is wanted. Then a large spherical case is made, and very large it must be, of the lightest matter that can be found, secured by some method like that of oiling silk against all passage of air. Into this are emptied all the bladders of light air, and if there is light air enough it mounts into the clouds upon the same principle as a bottle filled with water will sink in water, but a bottle filled with ether will float. It rises till it comes to air of equal tenuity with its own if wind or water does not spoil it on the way. Such, madam, is an air balloon.—From Dr. Johnson's Letter, Sept. 22, 1783, to Mrs. Thrale.

PRINTERS' MARKS

The interrogation mark or "point" (?) was originally a "q" and an "o," the latter placed under the former. They were simply the first and last letters of the Latin word "questio." So, too, with the sign of exclamation or interjection (!). In its original purity it was a combination of "I" and "o," the latter underneath, as in the question mark. The two stood for "Io," the Latin exclamation of joy. The paragraph mark is a Greek "p," the initial of the word paragraph. The early printers employed a dagger to show that a word or sentence was objectionable and should be cut out.

LONG WORDS

While our language does not contain such long words as are found in some other tongues not so many words of unusual length, still we have several that are awkwardly long for conversational purposes. We have "philoprogenitiveness," with twenty letters; "interconvertibilities," with twenty-one; "intercommunicabilities," with twenty-two; "disproportionableness," with twenty-three, and "transubstantiationalists" and "contradistinguishability," each containing twenty-four letters. An effective little word is "syncategorematic," as it manages to compress eight syllables into seventeen letters.

The longest monosyllables contain nine letters, and there are four examples: "splotched," "squelched," "strengths" and "stretched."—New York Tribune

Sanol BLOOD SALT

No Indigestion can exist if this remedy is taken according to instructions—and there is no known remedy to take its place.

This Blood Salt is a mixture compounded so as to resemble in essence and effect, the salty parts of the human blood. It is well known that our vitality is normally kept up by means of the natural blood salts.

Hence a lack of the latter will alway superinduce a loss of the former. It is also a fact that with each quart of urine we lose about 18 grams of blood salts. Accordingly we must gradually become weak and sick, unless we provide a substitute for these salts in the blood.

This salt is an excellent and absolutely harmless remedy for any disturbances of digestion, such as Dyspepsia, Gastric Catarrh, Sour Stomach, Heart Burn, Loss of Appetite, Constipation, etc., and as an aid to digestion, in wasting and nervous diseases.

Hints on Home Management

Piquant Sauces That Redeem Doubtful Dishes

By MADGE MARVEL

THE wise cook masters the art of sauce making, for a good sauce redeems many a doubtful dish. Also skill in concocting sauces plays an important part in reducing the expenses of housekeeping. Many a warmed-over dish owes its entire success to the sauce which so disguises the original source of supply that the dish becomes something as novel as delicious.

The first requisite of a sauce is that it should be smooth. The second is that is should have a reason for accompanying the dish. It should so blend with the food with which it is served that it becomes a part of it and gives the impression it is absolutely necessary. The flavoring of a sauce must partake of the nature of the dish to which it belongs.

Many cooks use potato flour for sauces, claiming it gives smoothness and richness.

White sauce is the most familiar of fundamental sauces, but the experienced cook knows there are white sauces of different kinds which cannot be used interchangeably with uniform results. The same sauce one would use for cream soups, or for toast, is not the same sauce she would use for meats. It is all in the proportion. But the difference is very apparent to the finicky palate.

The white sauce, which is the foundation for cream soups, is made as follows.

One tablespoonful of butter, the same quantity of flour, one cup of milk, one-fourth teaspoonful salt and half as much white pepper.

The sauce to be used for creamed meats, or vegetables, or fish, is made with twice the quantity of butter and flour and the same quantity of other ingredients.

In making a white sauce for souffle you would use three tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and the same amount of milk, salt and pepper as in the first sauce, and if you intended the sauce to pour over croquettes you would take four tablespoonfuls of butter and flour.

The process of making is the same for all. Melt the butter, stir in the flour and seasoning, and cook without browning till it begins to bubble. Then remove it from the very high heat and add the milk slowly, beating all the time till it thickens.

If you want to make a vegetable sauce, add celery, peas, or mushrooms, asparagus, or cauliflower to the second sauce, the one with two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour, using half a cup of vegetables.

Cheese sauce has the same foundation and half a cup of grated cheese is added. Paprika takes the place of the white pepper.

Drawn butter sauce is made by melting two tablespoonfuls of butter, adding two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt and pepper and cooking till the mixture is bubbling. Add one cup of water, beating till the sauce thickens. Then remove from the fire and slowly beat in two more tablespoonfuls of butter. If this is to be used for fish, it may be seasoned with chopped cucumber pickles.

Caper sauce is made by adding two tablespoonfuls of capers to drawn butter sauce.

Brown sauce is often needed and is the basis of all gravies. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add a slice of onion and let brown, then blend with it two tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook until it is darker, then add a cup of brown stock, if you have it, and the salt and pepper. If one has not the brown stock, let the sauce cook until it is a desirable brown without burning and use water with some beef extract, to give it a rich brown color. This brown sauce should be cooked for a minute or two and then strained.

Hollandaise sauce is delicious. Take half a cup of butter, six tablespoonfuls boiling water, yolks of four eggs, a tablespoonful of lemon juice, salt and cayenne pepper to taste. First cream the butter in a bowl and add the egg yolks and beat well. Add the lemon juice, water and seasoning and beat five minutes with an egg beater. Cook over hot water, stirring all the time, until it is thickened.

Pity the Poor Artist

By Tom Jackson

ONCE artists used to wear long hair and in an attic dwell; they'd turn out pictures by the yard, but very few they'd sell. They frequently had hunger pains; of bread had not a piece; they wore no creases in their pants, for there was naught to crease. The landlord used to chase them up—he had a stony heart. He wanted cash, and didn't care a tinker's rap for art. With landlord and the grocer man a-hunting artists' scalps, they had a hard time painting things—like "Sunset on the Alps." Although beset by care and debt, to do their best they tried; still never earned enough for food until they up and died. Their pictures then would quickly sell for prices most immense—for which the artist, when alive, could not get thirty cents.

The artists of today own cars, and live in houses fine. They've check book, too, steam heated dens and on good beefsteaks dine. They just draw pictures of fair maids in ev'ry sort of pose, and decorate them gayly in the latest style of clothes. They take them to the magazines, and say, "Five hundred, please," and then the man who is in charge says: "I'll take all of these; bring in another bunch of blondes and a brunette or so, and have 'em thin as barber poles; these are the kind that go."

Yes, art has changed from olden time, "Sunsets" and "Monks" are done. 'Tis tango girls with fluffy hair that bringeth in the mon.

Advice to Seekers After Beauty

By MAGGIE TEYTE

Prima Donna of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company.

MAGGIE TEYTE

ONE hears dreadful stories on all sides about lost health in an effort to lose weight. This woman dieted until she reduced her system to the point where she contracted rheumatism, or some other malady, and that one took some powerful drug and completely upset her digestive organs so she has to live on the simplest of foods and is but a wreck of her former self. One hears such stories each day!

When the remedy has done the work and has left no ill results the women are less willing to talk about it. I find they usually say, "Oh, I just dieted."

I talked the other day with one of the best known women in America who has recently lost 30 pounds, and she told me that before she ever lost an ounce she had tried everything which had been recommended to her for five years.

She went to a French physician last summer while she was in Paris and he told her it was mal-assimilation of her food and the treatment which he would give her would be slow but sure. In five months she had lost 30 pounds. She is still losing. She never felt as well. And she looks 10 years younger.

This is all an answer to the dozens of women who have written me pleading for "a harmless remedy for obesity." If I were too fat, I would see my family physician and be treated for it as if it were any other disease. That is, if I had tried a rational diet and careful and well planned exercises, and they had all failed.

It is not the work of a minute, this matter of getting thinner. It requires persistent and well directed effort.

And the attitude of mind, I firmly believe, has a lot to do with it. When one starts to diet and exercise with the idea of reducing, the thought to hold is not, "Dear me! How terribly fat I am," but "Well, I will grow thin and all I have to do is to keep at it."

Almost as many letters have come to me about the Paris fad for red hair, which is clipped short in quite boyish fashion about the forehead. It is bright red hair, too, not the Titian hue. "Do you think it will be worn here?" writes one young woman. "And what can I use to turn mine that color? I have gray eyes."

So, just because the newspapers tell tales of red wigs in Paris, there are women who feel, perhaps, they are called on to have red wigs in America. That seems to be the idea. It is a regular craze in Paris, they tell me. Well, what of it? We are not in Paris, and even if we were why should we feel called on to dye our hair some outrageous color?

They have worn purple and green and blue wigs in Paris. The latest and most favored combination, they tell me is red hair and bright green combs. If I had red hair, I should wear it. But I should never make it red, or blue, or purple, or any other color but the one nature gave it.

I have said this often. I mean it. If we all kept the hair we have in the best possible condition and accentuated all the lovely lights which lurk in the strands of all well cared for tresses, regardless of color, I think we would be so well pleased with the results that we would never think of changing the color.

As Lucile McVey, who is well known to theatregoers, says, "Any charm we may exercise will be palpably artificial if our hair is not what nature intended it to be."

Neglect is what makes us dissatisfied with the color of our hair. We are too busy keeping up with the merry-go-round of fashion to make our scalp glow and our hair bright with systematic and generous brushing. If women would only brush their own locks with half the energy they groom the coats of Fido and Fifi and all the other pet Poms, they would have beautifully glossy and burnished hair.

If your hair has red shades in it, it is quite permissible to bring them out with an occasional application of henna.

If there are threads of gold in dun locks, hot camomile tea will make them more evident without doing any harm. If your dark brown hair seems faded, there is nothing which will so surely revive it as brushing, but if you wish to hurry the work use sage tea.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Life's Span Will Grow as Diet Habits Improve

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

DR. HIRSHBERG

ALL that in this world is great or gay will vanish as a vapor and decay. Yet the hours have grown and grown in recent years. With each new laboratory and workshop discovery they become more elastic.

The Caesars themselves, with their great philosophers and healers, worried over the average span of life of the Romans. With all their wealth, cleanliness and aristocracy of learning, 30 years was the life of most of them.

Roman infants could never look forward to a rosy morn, any more than can babies of today who live in the large cities. Like the leaves on a tree, some fall and some grow. For the most part, infants reared on their mothers' breasts from human milk grow. Many of those who are given other food die.

The Egyptians passed round a skull at their feasts for the purpose of warning mothers against infant mortality and men against over eating and drinking.

Behind the Roman general in his triumphal chariot there always stood a slave whispering in his ear: "Respice post te hominem memento te," which in presentable language means: "Don't be stuck on yourself, for pride cometh before sickness," or "put pride behind you; remember you are but a vulnerable man."

Yet the commonplace span of life in civilized lands, where anti-typhoid vaccines, smallpox vaccination, sanitary plumbing, running water, filtered reservoirs, asphalt streets, anti-toxins, clean city campaigns, fly screens and mosquito nets are the fashion, has risen to nearly 50 years, as compared with the pre-Christian 30 of Antony and Cleopatra's day.

Man's life is like unto a winter's day—
Some break their fast and so depart away;
Others stay to dinner, then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed.
O, Reader, then behold and see!
As we are now, so must you be!

Up then, friends, and stave Old Mortality off from his most defenceless innocents, the babes and sucklings. Boil the baby's drinking water, give it mother's milk, eliminate the germ-breeding pacifiers.

The murder of Malicious Mortality can only be encompassed with the discovery of perpetual life, but this eternal pest may, like a lobster boiled, from black to red be made to turn, and all the babes destined to die next summer from diarrhoea may be snatched now from his slowly reaching grasp.

M. D.—Please give me a remedy for a weak tongue, split by my false teeth. Doctors and dentists have failed to help me.

Use glycerine as a mouth wash and apply this often and thoroughly over the open spots. You will thus gradually toughen the membrane of the tongue.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie: Yesterday my sweetheart and I went out for a walk. We wanted to find a certain place and we got lost and my friend simply would not ask the way. He kept me walking and walking and we had to go home disappointed. He wouldn't let me ask either. We quarrelled about it. I told him I thought he was stubborn and he said I was bossy and he went home mad. Do you think he was right, or was I? SPAT.

WHY, you funny, little foolish girl, you. If you are going to quarrel with your sweetheart because he won't let anybody tell him the way when he's out with you, you might as well quarrel with the whole race of men and be done with it.

I never saw a man in my life who wouldn't trudge miles and make any one who was with him trudge miles into the bargain rather than to admit that he didn't know everything on earth, everywhere, all the time. It's a masculine trait, just as masculine as a beard, and no man who is a man at all can help being that way.

You have your own silly little feminine foibles and you expect your sweetheart to overlook them, don't you? Well, the next time you're out with Beau and he won't ask his way, just smile to yourself and say nothing about it. It's cheaper in the end. You can talk till doomsday and he will never change. He can't understand why you want to powder your nose every few minutes and you can't understand why he is so stubborn about little things.

Don't try—just love him—and you'll both be happy.

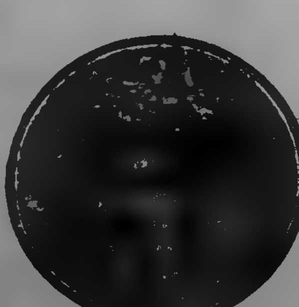
When Days Were Jewelled with Dreams

By WINIFRED BLACK



Winifred Black

AND so," said the one who read, "the prince mounted his jet black charger and rode away—for a year and a day."

"A year and a day," repeated the little girl who listened—"a year and a day." Her blue eyes grew very soft, and when she went out to play I heard her say to her doll, "Now, Isobel, you must be patient—for a year and a day."

They don't seem to read fairy tales much these days, the children I know.

They read stories about Billy Whiskers, the humorous goat, or about boy scouts, or girl campers on the Yukon, or something else equally everyday and unromantic.

I said something to a little boy the other day about a genie, and do you know he hadn't the faintest idea what I meant.

Witches, gnomes, goblins, brownies, kelphies, pixies, fairies—where have you all gone in this our day of commonplace?

I remember when I never passed a nice, fuzzy, low-growing bush without looking into it to see if the elder-tree mother, by any chance, was sitting under it telling stories to the elder-tree children. And every bit of red I glimpsed on any winding road always made my heart leap with the wild hope that at last I was going to meet a pixie face to face, and see whether his red cap was becoming to him or not.

Do you remember the big flat stone you found the day you and your cousin from the city went to the woods after hazel nuts? Your cousin from the city didn't seem to notice it at all—except to put her foot up on it and tie her shoe—but you, why, you fairly choked with excitement the minute you spied it.

It looked like a regular stone all right enough, but you knew perfectly well that if you could only say the right words and grab hold of the stone at the right instant you could lift it—and there would be a flight of mysterious steps leading right into the depths of the earth.

What was at the foot of those steps—ah, that was always in the next chapter.

I remember a flat stone that I found once. It was in a cornfield, not so very far from every-day houses and commonplace barns.

A field full of tall and rustling corn—we used to run in there and play, my little curly black dog and I, when it was too hot in the sun outside; and, oh, how green and cool and still it was in there—except for the whispering of the leaves of the tall corn. Sometimes if I sat very still and boxed the puppy's ears hard enough so that he sat still, too, I could almost hear what it was the leaves were whispering about.

And the earth was very brown and dry and cool to my little hot hand. We used to build wonderful castles out of it, the puppy and I; at least, I built, and the puppy looked on with great approval.

Sometimes he would help dig, but somehow he always dug in the wrong place.

We found the flat stone one day when nobody loved us and we couldn't have any more cookies, and they said we had tracked up the pantry floor going in after raisins. So we ran away, the puppy and I, into the wide, wide world—to make our fortunes and come home sometimes years and years afterward, riding on a snow-white palfrey and crowned with sparkling gems.

We started to the wide world through the corn field, and we went deeper into its green depths than we had ever ventured before.

I think I was crying a little, anyhow my eyes were blinded and I tripped and fell over a great flat stone right in the middle of one of the corn rows.

The Hour of Destiny

I knew that the hour of destiny had arrived. I told the puppy so and he listened with absorbed interest.

I shall never work harder in my life than I worked trying to lift that stone. I muttered every kind of incantation I had ever heard of, from "abracadabra" to "eeny-meeny-miny-mo," but not an inch could I budge that stone.

Finally I was cross and I kicked the stone as hard as I could. B-r-r-r, there was a sudden roll of thunder—flash, the forked lightning drew across the sky like a giant pencil—we forgot all about the things we were going to do in the wide, wide world, the puppy and I, and started for home as fast as we could run.

I was so excited and frightened that I ran the wrong way. The puppy tried to tell me about it, but I couldn't understand, and before we got home the rain was pelting and the sky was black with terrifying clouds.

How fine and friendly the old rooster looked standing on one leg under the wagon in our old barn yard as we rushed joyously past.

How broad and pleasant was the back porch stretching out before us from our old well known home. Mfh, again, somebody was baking something that smelled like gingerbread. And what kindly face was that looking anxiously from the doorway—not at all the same face as had belonged to the one who told us that we tracked the floor.

Safe, sheltered, loved, protected, at home, where there was no magic but the magic of a mother's loving heart.

But it was years before I could think of the stone and the sudden roar of thunder which came when I kicked it without a shudder of dread.

The Things We Think Afterward

What genie had I called from the clouds by my rash act?

Every one was talking at home about how suddenly the thunder came and with what amazing quickness the black clouds rolled up from the place where the sun always went down, right over beyond the Congregational church.

"Out of a clear sky," they said, "the thunder came and then the lightning."

The puppy and I looked at each other. We knew what brought that thunder; we knew perfectly well; but we never told a word, either of us.

But always after that when it thundered suddenly the puppy always turned and gave me a look of startled reproach as if to say, "Will you never learn to be more careful?"

What was at the foot of the steps that led down into the brown earth under that stone? I wondered and wondered about it.

Some beautiful princess and her suite, stricken dumb by the spell of some cruel magician! Some handsome prince turned to marble by a wicked wizard! I should never, never know.

But sometimes in the cool of the late summer afternoon I took the puppy and went as close to the neighborhood of the magic stone as I dared, and once I stamped upon the ground and bent and whispered words of comfort and cheer to whomsoever it was held so secretly in durance vile.

"For a year and a day," repeated the little girl who listened to the fairy tale, "a year and a day." All at once it came back to me, and I was little again and light of heart and trusting, and all the world and the days thereof were embroidered with gold and jewelled thick with springing hope and with sweet faith in all that was and all that would be; and I smelled again the dry, brown earth that was always so cool in my hot little hand; and I heard again the confused whispering of the leaves of the tall corn.

"She shall never be without a book of fairy tales," I said, and I looked at the little girl and loved her exceedingly well.

ST. PAUL'S DOME LEANING

Vast Weight of 32,000 Tons Held up Insufficient Supports

In writing of the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, Mr. J. M. W. Halley takes an interesting view when he says "perhaps no greater feat has ever been achieved by man than the building of St. Paul's dome."

Mr. Halley, who is a noted architect, goes on to say: "Sir Christopher Wren, through lack of knowledge of design, inadvertently left too small a margin of safety in his supports. For when he built his foundations he intended to put a dome of much less altitude, and consequently much less weight, upon them than he actually did."

The weight of the dome, says Mr. Halley, "down to the level of the top of the piers, is 32,000 tons, which exercises a pressure of eleven tons to the foot over their area.

"Even if the piers were built of solid Portland stone they would be burdened to their limit. But when it is considered that they are merely cased with Portland stone, and that the core is rubble, the anxiety of those responsible for the safety of the Cathedral can be easily understood.

"The whole building is so delicately poised that the slightest alteration of the status quo might cause disastrous results. The dome, for example, now leans over a few inches toward the south-west, a divergence from truth hardly worth consideration were it not from the fact that this deviation has increased in the last ten years, and that it brings increased pressure to bear on the already overweighted piers."

INSECT TOBACCO USERS

Growers Wage Continual Warfare Against Hornworms

Growers of dark tobacco in Kentucky and Tennessee have a serious problem in the ever-present hornworms which are great chewers of green tobacco. When labor was plentiful and cheap, "hand worming" was an economical and efficient way to combat the pest. For several years labor in these tobacco-growing districts has been scarce, so growers were forced to resort to insecticides. Naturally, Paris green was tried and found to be the safest and most efficient of any on the market, but there has always been complaint of frequent and serious burning of tobacco as a result of its use.

For five years employes of the Department of Agriculture at Washington conducted investigations looking for a safe and effective insecticide, and they determined that di-plumbic arsenate of lead meets all requirements.

Ten Popular Lies

2. "Not another drop of liquor for me while I live."
3. "My wife and I never exchange a cross word."
4. "We are just out of what you want, but have something just as good."
5. "I don't want to be rich, just comfortably fixed."
6. "Had I been in his place I would have showed 'em a few!"
7. "I don't care anything for the money, it's the principle of the thing."
8. "I caught every one of these fish with a hook and line."
9. "If you don't think it a good thing, don't invest. It's all the same to me."
10. "Never saw such weather before in my life."—Winnipeg Voice.

ARABS' QUEER WAYS

An Arab on entering a house removes his shoes, but not his hat. He mounts his horse upon the right side, while his wife milks the cow upon the left side. In writing a letter he puts nearly all the compliments on the outside. His head must be wrapped up warm, even in the summer, while his feet may well enough go naked in winter.

Every article of merchandise which is liquid he weighs, but he measures wheat, barley, and a few other articles. He reads and writes from right to left. He eats scarcely anything for breakfast, about as much for dinner, but after the work-day is done he sits down to a hot meal swimming in oil, or better yet, boiled butter.

His sons eat with him, but the females of his house wait till his lordship has done. He rides a donkey when travelling, his wife walking behind. He laughs at the idea of walking in the street, or even vacating his seat for a woman. If he be an artisan he does work sitting, perhaps using his feet to hold what his hands are engaged upon.

He drinks cold water with a spoon, but never bathes in it unless his home be on the seashore. He is rarely seen drunk, is deficient in affection for his kindred, has little curiosity and no imitation, no wish to improve his mind.

AUCTION DEAD-HEADS

Men Brought in to Act as Decoys for the Public

How Londoners are decoyed into salesrooms was described at Bow street during the hearing of a case against Ernest Collard, John Callaghan and Arthur Smythe who were charged with assaulting an auctioner named Dent.

Mr. Dent said his brother was selling goods by auction when Collard threw a biscuit barrel at him, but it just missed him. Saying that he was going to smash the shop up, Collard then struck Mr. Dent with a bronze horse and threw a figure at him. Callaghan struck him with a stick and he also received a punch from Smythe.

He had given Collard odd jobs as a "dead-head" but he was not employed in the shop when the row took place. Dent admitted that he employed men to stay in his auction room as an inducement for others to come in, and also that he had occasionally given them money with which to make purchases. He denied, however, that he supplied his "dead-heads" with counterfeit money so that they might get outsiders in a buying mood by seeing a brisk business going on. The young men were fined.

Welsh Stone for Halifax

Some time ago Mr. Lloyd George was asked to obtain a slab of Welsh stone to be built into a memorial to be erected at Halifax, Nova Scotia, to commemorate the opening of the first Parliament Assembly in British America. The Chancellor of the Exchequer laid the matter before Mr. Haydn Jones, M.P., who agreed to supply a slab from his quarry. The slab was completed and engraved with the red dragon of Wales.

GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

Chautauqua Seems to Have a Wide Variety of Meanings.

United States geological survey records present these notes on geographical names and their origin and meaning:

Brooklyn: part of New York city; a corruption of the Dutch name Breuckelen, from a village in the province of Utrecht, Holland. The name signifies "broken up land" or "marshy land."

Burleson; county and village in Johnson county, Tex., named for Edward Burleson, Indian fighter, and vice president of the republic of Texas under President Houston, 1841.

Chautauqua: county in Kansas; county, lake and town in same county in New York. An Indian word which has been the subject of much controversy. Webster says it is a corruption of a word which means "foggy place." Another derivation gives the meaning as "bag tied in the middle," referring to the shape of the lake. It is also said to mean "place where a child was washed away." Dr. Peter Wilson, an educated Seneca, says it is literally "where the fish was taken out." Other meanings given are "place of easy death" and "place where one was lost."

Chicago, city and river in Illinois. The Ojibwa Indian form, she-kag-ong, signifies "wild onion place," from a root form implying a "bad smell."

His Specialty.

"Ezry, you ought to git a good job in a firearms factory," growled the country storekeeper as the chief loafer reached into the barrel for another choice apple.

"What doin'?" lazily asked the pest between bites.

"Riflin' barrels!" snapped the long suffering storekeeper.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

A Gruesome Proposition.

"You don't go after that dentist very often?"

"No," answered the bill collector. "I'm afraid to. Every time I see him he offers to take the account out in trade."—Washington Star.

Speaking For Himself.

"What kind of a bar of soap does your mother want?" asked the grocer.

"The smallest," said Bobby, deciding with the aid of his own prejudice.—Buffalo Express.

Getting Wealthy.

"You could own a brick block if you'd save what you spend on booze."

"I can beat that. Three glasses of booze and I own the earth."—Cleveland Leader.

Superfluous Verbiage.

It was Sunday evening and likewise his first call. She was entertaining him at the piano, and he was not fond of music. Of course she couldn't be expected to know that, poor girl. She was not particularly accomplished, but she didn't know what else to do, and he hadn't suggested anything. So she played on and on, occasionally skipping a few bars that she didn't remember and trusting to luck. Finally from sheer weariness and to make conversation she turned to him and said:

"Papa thinks it is wicked for me to play the piano on Sunday."

"Papa is certainly right," he replied wearily. "But why does he—er—specify Sunday?"

It is perhaps needless to record that he was never again invited to that little flat.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Absinth

Dr. R. Hercod of Lausanne in a special contribution to the Alliance Temperance Almanac points out that the absinth liquor, which is now prohibited in three European countries—Belgium, Holland and Switzerland—owes its peculiar noxiousness to the fact that it is prepared with several essences, among them wormwood, which have marked toxic properties. Added to the action of the alcohol (a strong absinth contains 65 per cent) these essences have a most deleterious effect on the organisms, especially on the nervous system. Even small doses provoke a great irritability, which may easily lead heavy drinkers to crime. Epilepsy is more quickly developed among absinth drinkers than among the drinkers of the commoner kinds of alcoholic liquors.—Dundee Advertiser.

Real Leghorns.

Little Willie was taken out into the country on a bright spring day. As he played with his sister in the farmyard a group of Leghorn chickens approached, led by a Leghorn rooster.

"Willie," said the little girl, "why are those chickens called Leghorns?"

"Look at their ankles," Willie replied. "Don't you see the little horns on them?"

Very Much Alike.

The late Frank Work once defined humorously the difference between a curbstone broker and a legitimate broker with a seat on the stock exchange.

"It is much the same difference," he said, "as the one between an alligator and a crocodile."—Buffalo Express.

Traditional.

MAIL POUCHES.

They Cost From a Few Cents to Thousands of Dollars Each.

Uncle Sam has twenty-eight different kinds of mail bags in service, and they range in cost from 22 cents to $2,156 each. There are mail pouches for almost every conceivable use, and you can ship almost anything that comes within the postal regulations with a minimum of loss and breakage, says Harper's Weekly. Probably the most peculiar mail bag is the one arranged for carrying bees. Sending bees by mail was a difficult operation before the "bee bag" was adopted. Usually the bees arrived at their destination dead or so exhausted that they were of little use. Now these little honey makers can be shipped by mail several thousand miles in the "bee bag" without suffering and can obtain air and a good supply of food during their transit.

Mail bags are made of various materials. The cheapest are of cotton and the most costly of leather. Those used on fast expresses are re-enforced with metal so that they can be flung from fast moving trains without damage. Even then these bags, or "catcher pouches," do not last much more than a year and a half, while some of the cotton bags used for the work will remain in service upward of ten years.

In parts of the west, where the mail must be carried for many miles on horseback, special pouches are in use for slinging over the animal's flanks. In the far frozen north special bags are made for sled transportation, and in the cities a bag in use for pneumatic tube service is made of a composition called "leatheroid." The ordinary cotton mail bags are woven so closely that they are practically waterproof, and in the weave there are thirteen stripes of blue. Each country marks its own mail pouches in some individual way, so that if one gets lost in a far country its ownership can be readily detected.

Nearly 65,000,000 mail bags are used each year by the whole country, and as they are being worn out all the time the supply has to be kept up. There are mail bag hospitals, where tens of thousands of them go every week. One such mail bag hospital repairs upward of 5,000 a day. These crippled bags are in all sorts of dilapidated conditions. A railroad wreck may injure several hundreds or thousands, and these must all go to the hospital before entering active life again. Christmas is responsible for much damage to the mail bags, owing to the hard service they get, and immediately after the midwinter holiday season several hundred thousand bags go to the hospitals.

Mail bags are the most traveled of all articles in use today. They are constantly moving, and it would be impossible to estimate the number of miles a bag ten years old has traveled.

Why He Was Gallant.

A stout woman entered a crowded car and took hold of a strap directly in front of a man seated in the corner. As the car started she lunged against his newspaper and trod heavily on his toes. As soon as he could extricate himself he arose and offered her his seat.

"You are very kind, sir," she said, panting for breath.

"Not at all, madam," he replied. "It's not kindness; it's simply self defense."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A CLEVER BANDING OF COAT AND SKIRT MAKES FOR NOVELTY

Odd touches mark many of the new gowns and suits this season, such as an effective girdle or a smartly designed vest or a shaped trimming band on coat and skirt. In this instance both costumes show novel touches. On one there is a surplice vest with pointed ends extending below the girdle. The other suit shows a coat gathered into a shaped band at the bottom and a similar band at the bottom of the skirt.

8011 shows several other smart features, among them a peg-top skirt, a drop-shoulder and an effective collar.

Black velveteen is the material used, with the vest and trimming bands of Roman striped faille. The girdle is of black satin.

This design may be [illegible] in size 16 with 3⅝ yards of 4[illegible]

7810-7811 is deve[illegible] cover-ed ratine and trimmed [illegible] of color silk. A frill of tete de negre chiffon at throat and cuff offers effective relief.

For this costume in size 36 it requires for the coat (7810) 2¼ yards of 36 inch material and for the skirt (7811) 3⅝ yards of material for size 24.

No. 8011—sizes 14 to 18.
No. 7810—sizes 34 to 42.

THE COLLAR A MOST IMPORTANT DETAIL

Although the collarless blouse is universally favored, there are many different ways of dressing the throat. One should be careful to select the style that is becoming.

While the upstanding frill of net or tulle is attractive and most becoming to many faces, the flat, turned down collars are far better suited to others. Often the gown or suit is absolutely spoiled as far as becomingness is concerned by an illy chosen collar.

Speaking of frills, while net and lace is still used, one of the newest ideas is a stiffly plaited frill of black velvet or satin ribbon with an inside frill of white chiffon standing up against it.

7927 is fashioned of chestnut brown charmeuse with the insets and the collar of chestnut brown and black plaid. The collar is a flat, round model.

This dress may be made in size 16 with 4½ yards of 36 inch material. The other costume shows a new version of the bolero with a colored vest and an upstanding frill of tulle. There is a cleverly draped one-piece skirt with a side front closing and a slightly raised waist-line.

It is here made of black charmeuse with a fawn colored tapestry vest and ebony buttons.

The blouse (8067) may be made in size 36 with 2 yards of 36 inch material.

The skirt (8041) requires for size 24 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 7927—sizes 14 to 18.
No. 8067—sizes 32 to 42.
No. 8041—sizes 22 to 30.

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable Depressed?

WHEN THAT LANGUID, LAGGY, EASILY-TIRED FEELING COMES, YOUR LIVER IS SLOW.

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those full feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, langour and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all others, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston Canada.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair Gets Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant At Once — No More Falling Hair.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty, and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp, and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life-saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free

MAY PROBE ACTS OF EVANTUREL AND UNSEAT HIM LATER ON

Hon. J. J. Foy Says That All Depends on Evanturel's Explanation

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Though completely cut off from all association with the Liberal party, and faced by the declaration of the Acting Prime Minister that the Ontario Government "will take some steps to preserve the dignity of the Legislature from the insult which he has placed upon it," Mr. Gustave Evanturel, the Opposition member from Prescott, has again announced that he has absolutely no intention of resigning his seat in the House. That was his statement to-day when seen, both before and after he had an interview with the Hon. J. J. Foy, during which interview he attempted to explain his conduct to the Attorney-General.

Talks With Ferguson.

Apparently, the charge brought by Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, the Conservative member from Grenville, that Evanturel attempted to sell his services as an M.P.P. to the Hotelkeepers' Association for the remuneration of $10,000, is beginning to weigh upon the little French-Canadian. Mr. Evanturel was seen this forenoon pacing up and down the corridor, waiting for an opportunity of speaking with Mr. Ferguson. After an interview with the Attorney-General, he was successful in button-holing Ferguson in the corridor. Members were watching curiously while these two paced up and down the hall.

The Prescott representative was quite willing to explain his absence from the Legislature yesterday. He stated that pressure of business had suddenly called him East, and that when leaving he had not been under the impression that any particular hour had been set aside for his explanation before the House. Further, he adds that he has every intention of making a complete statement, but as yet is undecided whether he will place his case before the Legislature this afternoon, or wait until early in the week.

SENSATION OF THE SESSION

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—In referring to the Trent Canal scandal, the Evening Citizen says, that graft charges will prove one of the sensations of the session, and refers to joy rides of the Government steamer Bessie Butler. The article also states that upwards of $2000 was diverted to the Liberal campaign fund in Peterborough at the last election. The disclosures have created a sensation in the capital.

NO DUTY ON PEOPLES FOOD, A TARIFF ON MANUFACTURERS

Principle of Preference to the Dominions is the Policy of the Unionists, Says Bonar Law in a Pamphlet Issued in London

London, Feb. 27.—Bonar Law in a pamphlet to-day gives an outline of the Unionist policy touching the tariff. Following are the main points:

If as a result of the next election Unionists are returned, we shall impose no new duties on the food of the people, but, on the contrary, we hope to take off some food duties which they now have to pay.

"We shall impose a moderate tariff on foreign manufactured goods, not exceeding an average of 10 per cent.

"We shall at the same time establish at once the principle of Imperial preference.

"In my belief, duties such as these, apart from any other considerations, can be justified by the strictest free trade principles by the needs of revenue. We shall give the self-governing Dominion what at every conference for more than 25 years they have unanimously asked from us. We shall give them immediately a preference on all duties imposed in the United Kingdom."

PREMIER CONTINUES STROLLS

Return Home is Being Delayed—Nothing New in Sir George's Condition.

Toronto, Feb. 27. Sir James Whitney was described as "very well indeed" to-day. The renewed vigor which has been coming back to him for days found expression in another long stroll in the open air on the balconies of the hospital. He is so comfortable at the hospital, and the opportunities in the way of exercise and recreation suitable for convalescing patients are such, that his removal home is still being delayed, although he could stand the change without running any appreciable risk.

Sir George Ross was not much better, and not much worse than he was yesterday. So little change in his symptoms is noted from day to day that his physicians content themselves with the statement, "Nothing new," in describing his condition.

SEVEN HOUSES AND THREE STORES ARE SWEPT BY FIRE

Flames Devour Buildings From 519 to 529 Parliament Street--Blaze Started in Decorator's Shop

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Believed to have been caused from the result of an explosion of chemicals in the basement of Robinson Bros. store, painters and decorators, at 523 Parliament street fire which was discovered shortly after 12 o'clock to-day spread with incredible rapidity. In a few moments the flames had spread north and south three doors in each direction, with the result that when the last fire brigade reached the blaze they had six houses and two stores to combat.

Worked Through Basement.

Eating its way from the basement of Robinsons' store, the fire worked through to the basement of A. Miller's barber shop. From the basement the flames spread rapidly to a dwelling house at the rear of the store. Almost simultaneously it was noticed that the fire had broken out in Wm. Howard's house at 527 Parliament, the first door north of the barber shop, and at 521, occupied by Thos. Graham, and that the blaze had attained considerable headway in all three houses.

Five Brigades Fought Blaze.

Even as the firemen from five divisions fought the blaze in the two stores and the two houses, the flames jumped once more and the store and dwelling of Jung Sing, Chinese laundry, at 529 Parliament, was ablaze.

The occupants of the different houses had hardly time to get a few things together before they were driven into the streets. The houses are of old style, three-storey, brick construction, and judging from the rapidity with which the flames jumped from house to house, there must have been considerable material of an inflammable nature in the construction.

It is difficult to estimate the damage, but it is almost safe to say that $25,000 will not cover the loss.

BIG FIRE AT SACKVILLE, N.B.

St. John, N. B., Feb. 27.—A message from Sackville, N.B., this afternoon reported that fire had destroyed the Music Hall block, in which are located the Western Union and C.P.R. Telegraph companies' offices. The flames were spreading in the direction of the residence of Lieutenant-Governor Wood when the message was sent.

The chief work will include the conseruction of two new freight and transportation sheds to accommodate the Hamburg-American and Canadian Northern weekly services; the electrification of the entire system of harbor railways. The plans call for a new grain elevator so as to give Montreal the largest storage capacity in the world

TWO-YEAR TERM FOR THIEF WITH A RECORD

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Garnet Arnold, charged with breaking into the tailor shop of R. B. Low, 2 Sullivan street, and of Frost, tobacconist, 1919 Queen east, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and on one charge of breaking into Farington's clothing store, Yonge street, Robert Glassford a chum of young Arnold, was sentenced to 60 days in jail. Garnet Arnold who has already four items on his past record, has the notorious "square head," which the police say is always the head of a criminal.

Bartender Had No License.

William Lunness, of the Beverley Hotel, was fined $10 and costs or 30 days for employing an unlicensed bartender, and William Jeffries, the bartender, was fined $20 and costs or 30 days for accepting the job when he had no license. A case of having sold liquor in bottles over the bar was also laid, but owing to a balky witness, the case was adjourned till Tuesday.

ORANGEMEN OF PETERBOROUGH TO ERECT FINE STRUCTURE

Fine Site For Our Latest Public Building Purchased On Brock Street

The Orangemen of Peterborough District have decided to erect a building for their own use, and have purchased the Mills' property on Brock street, nearly opposite the rink for the purpose. This property has frontage of 146 feet and a depth of 192 feet. It is an ideal site for abuilding of this kind, being centrally situated, easy of access, and close to the street car line.

The plans for the building have not yet been decided upon. It is understood that operations will not be started until sufficient money has been secured to enable the committee in charge to erect a building that will be a credit to the Order and an ornament to the city.

HON. J. J. FOY INTIMATES THAT EVANTUREL MUST GO

Says That the Dignity of the House Has Been Insulted by His Conduct, and That Some Steps Must be Taken

Toronto, Feb. 27.—The statement of the Hon. J. J. Foy, Acting Premier, made before the Legislature, indicates some prompt action on the part of the Government with regard to Gustave Evanturel, and which will doubtless end in following the British custom of declaring "the member's seat vacant, was as follows:

"I have just one word to say with reference to the letter of the member from Prescott. The member may have made an explanation to the caucus of the Opposition leader, but he has not given any explanation to this House, although it was publicly stated that he would have an opportunity for doing so to-day. I would have liked to hear his explanation. But in default of any, I wish to say on behalf of the Government that the serious matter involved in that letter will engage the careful attention of the Government, and they will take such steps as they think necessary, after calm, careful consideration of the matter, to deal with it properly, and to save the dignity of the House, whose dignity has been insulted by his conduct."

MR J. H. BURNHAM TO BE HONORED

Proposal to Give Him a Complimentary Banquet at an Early Date

IT IS proposed to tender Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., a complimentary banquet at an early date. The matter has not yet taken definite form, but is likely to do so before the end of the present session of Parliament. It is felt by a by a large majority of our citizens that some public expression of appreciation for the splendid service our member has rendered in Parliament to his constituency and to the country, should be forthcoming. Not only is this feeling marked by his own supporters, but we believe is very general amongst Liberals as well.

Instead of a banquet the function may take the form of a public demonstration in the Opera House, so that the general public, regardless of party affiliation, may take full part. Should the latter proposal prevail, Mr. Burnham will no doubt bring with him from Ottawa one or more prominent speakers, who, needless to say, will receive a warm welcome from our citizens and the people of this district.

A QUEER LEGEND.

Feder Kosmich, the Hermit, May Have Been a Russian Czar.

A curious legend is associated with the name of Alexander I. of Russia. It is to the effect that the emperor in 1825 was sojourning in the Crimea. When near Taganrog his coachman by some means managed to overturn the carriage of a court courier named Markof, who was killed. The emperor, wishing to rid himself of the cares of state, so the story runs, caused it to be reported that it was he himself who was killed. Then he carried out a plan which he had for long conceived of retiring to Siberia and living there under an assumed name. Schilder, the historian, professes to have satisfied himself that at all events the remains in the Cathedral of Peter and Paul are those of the courier. Schilder asserts that he learned this much from the children of Markof.

According to the legend, Alexander I of Russia died in Siberia in 1864, but history records that he died at Taganrog in 1825. It seems that in 1825 a mysterious stranger appeared in Siberia. He gave his name as Fedor Kosmich and never revealed any other or the place whence he came. He lived the life of a hermit and was received generally with respect. In 1858 he accepted the invitation of a rich merchant to take up his abode in his house at Tomsk. There he was very retired and held communication only with Mlle. Kromof and the merchant, her father. Every one who saw him was struck with his extraordinary resemblance to the defunct czar. The Grand Duke Nicholas Michailovitch contributed an article in the Revue Historique in which he denied the sensational part of the story but admitted that the hermit of Siberia might have been a natural brother of Alexander I.—London Globe.

Stewed Apples.

To stew apples so each quarter is unbroken and so clear one can almost see through it is an art, and yet it is a simple thing to do if one only knows how. Peel tart apples very thin, cut them in quarters and remove the cores and seeds. As fast as you can peel and quarter them drop the apples in a saucepan in which you have already placed cold water to the depth of two inches. When the apples are all in, put the saucepan over a slow fire, cover it till the water reaches the boiling point, then remove the cover and let the apples simmer almost imperceptibly till you can pierce them easily with a broom splint; then sprinkle the sugar over them and let them just simmer until it is all melted. Remove the saucepan from the fire and let it stand where the apples will get cold before turning them into a dish for the table.

Connaught In Africa.

Here is a pleasing little picture, furnished by a correspondent who accompanied the royal party: The tour of the Duke of Connaught through South Africa, has assumed the character of a triumphal progress. At every tiny station in the vast expanse of the brown Karroo there was a gathering of farmers, many of whom had driven twenty and thirty miles in wagons drawn by twelve or fourteen mules or oxen. British and Dutch were equally eager to see the duke and duchess, and the duke sent them away proud and pleased and brimming over with loyalty after chatting with them, showing his interest in their affairs, shaking hands all round, and finally waving farewell from the window as the train moved on. Natives, in a great state of excitement, chanted wild songs of welcome.

What Came Up.

A young man wishing to have a bit of fun at a farmer's expense passed a few remarks about his cattle and his garden and then said he had set some lettuce and cabbage which had not grown up.

Then the farmer said:

"Oh, that's nothing: I set some carrot seeds, and what do you think came up?"

"Don't know," replied the young man.

Farmer—Why, old Brown's donkey, and ate the lot.—Newark Star.

The Turnip.

The turnip is supposed to be a native of Asia and Europe. It has been cultivated for centuries. The wild East Indian turnip is said to be remotely kin to the edible turnip. It is the size of a walnut and first tasted is sweetish, but in a moment the taster's tongue feels as though it were pricked by a hundred hot needles, and he feels like expectorating for hours after. It is the country boy's favorite medium for a joke on the visiting town boy.

Work and Worry.

"So you think worry kills more people than work?"

"I'm sure of it," replied the sarcastic scientist.

"Why?"

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, [illegible] feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

Antiquated Customs.

There is no court in Europe more tenacious of its etiquette—which was inaugurated several hundreds of years ago—than that of Spain. It is said that King Ferdinand VII. once made a minister resign because he had accidentally touched his hand. One of the quaintest ceremonies is the closing of the royal palace gates at Madrid every night. Electric light has been in use in the palace for quite a long while, but nevertheless every evening at 11 o'clock the officiating gentleman in waiting appears, accompanied by several servants, who carry ancient lanterns, to demand a huge key from a higher official to lock the doors of the palace. This is all the more amusing as the huge key does not fit the modern keyholes. The key is then returned to a third official, and every night gentlemen in waiting have to patrol the corridors of the palace, though sufficient guards are about, to watch over the slumbers of their royal master.

Paul the Tyrant.

Paul I. of Russia was very deaf and also very tyrannical. One day an aid-de-camp, intending to please him, approached and cried in his ear, "I am glad to see, your majesty, that your hearing is much improved!"

"What is that you say?" growled the czar.

Raising his voice, the aid-de-camp said, "I am glad that your majesty's hearing is so much improved!"

"Ah, that's it, eh?" chuckled the czar and then added, "Say it once more."

The aid-de-camp repeated the words, whereupon Paul I. thundered: "So you dare to make fun of me, do you? Just wait awhile."

Next day the aid-de-camp was on his way to the mines of Siberia.

FOOD AND DIGESTION.

Civilized Man Needs Cheerful Surroundings at His Meals.

Robust people so long as they get what suits their own uncultivated taste are apt to make very light of what they call "fancies" about food and overlook their real importance. Feeding on the part of civilized man is not the simple procedure which it is with animals, although many animals are particular as to their food and what is called "dainty." The necessity for civilized man of cheerful company at his meal and for the absence of mental anxiety is universally recognized, as well as the importance of an inviting appeal to the appetite through the sense of smell and of sight, while the injurious effect of the reverse conditions, which may lead to nausea and even vomiting, is admitted.

Even the ceremonial features of the dinner table, the change of clothes, the leisurely yet precise succession of approved and expected dishes, accompanied by pleasant talk and light hearted companionship, are shown by strict scientific examination to be important aids in the healthy digestion of food, which need not be large in quantity because wisely presented.—Sir Ray Lankester in London Telegraph.

Some Consolation.

He was a frugal Scot and when the collection plate came round dropped in a florin in mistake for the humble copper. Speedily discovering his mistake, however, he stepped softly down the aisle and requested the 'oof gatherer to give him back the coin, which request was politely but firmly refused. A shade of disappointment flitted over the northerner's face as he walked slowly back to his pew.

"Aweel," he said, "it's a loss, but there's some sma' consolation in reflectin' it's a bad one. It might have got me into trouble anywhere else."—London Telegraph.

THE ELECTROSCOPE.

Instrument by Which the Presence of Electricity is Detected.

The electroscope is an instrument for the detection of electricity. It depends for its action on the principle that bodies charged with like electricity repel, while those charged with unlike electricity attract each other. The ordinary pith ball suspended on a silk thread is the simplest form of the instrument.

The most common type of electroscope is that devised by Bennett in 1787 and known as the gold leaf electroscope. It consists of two strips of gold leaf or thin aluminium foil suspended from the lower extremity of a conductor within a glass bottle or jar. The upper end of the conductor terminates in a ball or a plate in case the instrument is to be used as a condensing electroscope. If a body charged with positive electricity is brought near the knob of the electroscope the negative electricity will be attracted to the knob and the positive repelled to the leaves, which diverge. If now the finger is touched to the knob the positive electricity is drawn off and the leaves collapse, while the negative electricity is held bound. Removing the charged body, the leaves will diverge again, charged with negative electricity. In this case the instrument can be used to determine the nature of a charge of a body brought near it, as with a positive charge the leaves will collapse and with a negative charge spread farther apart.—Exchange.

HIS ONLY REGRET.

The Sorrow That Consumed Bichat When He Was Dying.

Over a century ago died Xavier Bichat, the famous physician and anatomist, author of "L'Anatomie Generale." He probably dissected more human corpses than any other man in the world's history. He established a record when he opened 625 bodies during one winter.

Of his nerve a tale is told. When he lay on his deathbed he called his colleagues to him and said: "Dear friends, I am done, but what comforts me is the fact that my case is a remarkable one. I have had unusual symptoms for some days which I have analyzed. They have greatly surprised me." The doctors sought to reassure him. He answered that he was under no illusion with regard to himself. "I shall die fairly satisfied with my life and go to the grave with only one regret, one great sorrow."

"What is that?" he was asked. "I am distressed that after death I cannot dissect my own body. I could, I am certain, have made some beautiful scientific discoveries." Then he sank back, murmuring: "I must not think about it. It won't bear thinking of."—Westminster Gazette.

Tolstoy's Intensity.

Everything in Tolstoy's character, says a Russian writer, attains titanic proportions. "As a drinker he absorbed fantastic quantities of liquor. As a gambler he terrified his partners by the boldness of his play. As a soldier he advanced gayly to bastion four, the bastion of death at Sevastopol, and there he made dying men laugh at his witty sayings. He surpassed every one by his prodigious activity in sport as well as in literature."

Agriculture.

No other human occupation opens so wide a field for the profitable and agreeable combination of labor with cultivated thought as agriculture. Ere long the most valuable of all arts will be the art of deriving a comfortable subsistence from the smallest area of land.—Abraham Lincoln.

BRITAIN NOT DECADENT

If the United Kingdom were decadent or even disclosing the initial signs of decadence the fact would be one of serious portent for the future of the empire. It might indeed well be made the paramount topic, not only in the Motherland, but throughout the dominions. Few indeed have seriously believed in the pessimistic critism directed against the islands government by the silver sea, although attempts have been made to show that it is not without apparent warrant. Yet how far it is from the truth! In no nation of the world is there more evidence of real and living activity in everything that makes for political and social improvement. All the polices promoted and urged may not be justified in the event of their adoption, but the ferment and upheaval that so conspicuously marks the present situation in the United Kingdom, are signs not of decadence, but of growth and development.

In a recent speech, Sir George Paish, editor of The London Statist, throws an arresting light on Britain's material progress. London remains the open money market of the world and never before had so commanding a position as the provider of capital. In the first eleven months of 1913 there was raised in the metropolis of the empire no less than $1,115,000,000 for new securitoes. This in a country supposed to be decadent is certainly more than remarkable, since it represented the surplus, after meeting the whole of its own expenditure, after providing itself with the capital it needed for the erection of houses, the extension of its factories and the extension of ships on an unprecedented scale.

During the six or seven years that this talk of decadence has been prevalent, what has happened? "England," says Sir George Paish, "has saved a sum of £2,000,000,000 sterling, or $10,000,000,000. Her income has gone up faster than it ever went before, and the result is that we are in a position to do business in the future on a bigger scale than we ever did business in the past." In the last sixty years Britain has provided capital for imperial and foreign countries to the extent of the inconceivable amount of $17,500,000,000, and the greater part of the railways of the world has been built with money furnished by one island very small in area, but rich in its resources and in the virility of its people. The United Kingdom has its problems, but it is facing them in the same practical way that those of the past have been met and solved.

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

No Drugs to Take—You Simply Breathe a Healing Balsamic Vapor

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in the Nose and Throat.

Montreal thus time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible man nowadays breathes the soothing vapor of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Daoust did, and writing from his office at 57 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of syrups, ointments, tablets and washes but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages if my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened — my voice improved— and no longer gagged and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

A MISTAKEN BY-LAW

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The following resolution is clipped from The Times.

A motion of the Mayor, seconded by Ald. Stratton—A by-law will be prepared that all fowl sold on the market must be drawn, cleaned and sold by weight. The by-law is to take effect on April 1st.

If the citizens of Peterborough want to pay a high price for their fowl they should let the above by-law pass, for the farmers can get just as high a price at home for their fowl alive, from the buyers as they can on the market at Peterborough cleaned.

TO BOOM OUR CITY.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have seen in the local press that Lindsay's Winter Carnival brought thousands of dollars to that town. This suggested a line of thought to me. Peterborough is a well managed and progressive city. Still there is something radically wrong in one respect. This city, through excursions, sends thousands of dollars annually to Toronto and other places. Why can we not get a few thousands dollars spent in Peterborough by visitors from Toronto and nearby towns? Our council seems always ready to spend the dollars of their constituents to get factories. I would suggest that the council spend a few hundred dollars for expenses of a man to visit every town and city within a radius of say, 100 miles to work up excursions, for next summer, to come to Peterborough. An expenditure of, say, $250 would result next summer in over $50,000 being spent here. It is worth consideration by our city fathers.

PROGRESSIVE CALGARY. CITY

The estimate of directory compilers place Calgary's population at 56,330. Directory figures are inclined to be just a little bit high. But allowance being made for this, the fact remains of extraordinary development taking place in the Alberta city. We have before us a document of the Board of Trade Calgary issued in the year 1907. This pamphlet is beautifully and fetchingly illustrated. It is a cheerful, optimistic booklet, bold in its praise of Calgary's automobiles, and kine, and business blocks. How out of date it is! Calgary of 1907 was a city of but 22,000 souls. Is it that she has more than doubled her population in three years? The same directory authorities who have been referred to in this article assert that the increase of people drifting in during 1910 was 9,000 more than in 1909. Figure out the per cent. yourself. It has been stated that the Board of Trade's publication of 1907 is out of date. Its figures are now only archives; but the spirit which breathes is as true of Calgary today as of Calgary three years ago. Calgary is still the haven of the green-capped Englishman striking out West. There is still fat prize stock in Cow Town. The aroma of the plains Indians is there—some say—growing faint.

"Yes," replied the head of the establishment, "and I suppose the bill for it will soon be coming to me."

THE GILA'S BITE

The Reptile Turns Over to Get Venom Into Its Victim.

It was his turning over habit that led me to the discovery as to the bite of the Gila monster. This creature, more like a short, stocky snake with legs on than anything else, has no poison fangs, like the rattlesnake, yet his bite may be just as dangerous. His poison teeth are in his lower jaw, and the poison comes from a gland under the tongue. If he bites without turning over the wound is not serious, if he turns over there is great danger.

Dr. Snow of the University of Kansas wrote me some time ago of an experience he had with the bite of a Gila monster.

The reptile was caught and put in a bucket, the top of which was covered with paper. The bucket was then put in the wagon in which the doctor was driving. As the road was somewhat rough, the bucket was bounced up and down, and in order to steady it Dr. Snow put his hand behind him and took hold of the bucket, thrusting his fingers through the newspaper cover on its top so that he could hold it secure. Suddenly he felt the monster's grip on his fingers. Startled and somewhat alarmed, he carefully pried the jaws of the reptile open and released himself. The wounds were such as any ordinary bite would have made, and he suffered no more inconvenience than might have been expected.

There are many stories current in Arizona and Sonora as to deaths that have occurred from Gila monsters' bites, but it is hard to get at the facts. Careful experiments made with animals show that when the reptile bites and turns over, so that the poison flows down the tooth grooves into the wound, the bitten creatures die in a short time.

A Dead Bird.

Samuel Butler, the witty but eccentric author of "Erewhon," which means "Nowhere," and of many other remarkable and suggestive books, is now more read than during his lifetime. He died in 1902. In one of his notebooks he tells this incident, which must have amused the great Charles Darwin:

"Frank Darwin told me his father was once standing near the hippopotamus cage when a little boy and girl, aged four and five, came up. The hippopotamus shut his eyes for a minute.

"'That bird's dead,' said the little girl. 'Come along.'"

Her Lucky Number.

The byways as well as the highways of church life furnish much in the way of wit and humor. What, for instance, could be more mirth provoking than the naive confession of the cook of a London vicar who, being allowed to choose a hymn for the family prayers, was complimented on her choice by the vicar's wife?

"What a nice hymn you chose!" said the latter to the cook.

"Yes, mum; it's the number of my policeman."

HAS BUT FIVE ACRES YET IS DOING WELL

A Leamington Man's Success in Vegetables, Grown Altogether Under Glass

About seventeen years ago, Roy Ellis, then a mere boy, with his father and mother, moved into the Leamington neighborhood. The family had been engaged in ordinary farming near Forest, Ontario, and made the change with a view to following up the fruit industry. They took a farm of some thirty acres, part of which was uncultivated, and part covered with apple orchard. Tearing out the aged and unfruitful apple trees, they replaced them with a peach orchard, and for a time all went merry as the proverbial marriage bell. The trees grew, and the owners prospered, and all was well in the land. But there came aday which is still a painful memory to everyone around Leamington—the "freeze-out." A merciless season ruined the peach crop and, with it, many a peach-grower. Hard-smitten as the rest, the Ellis family "went out o'" peaches almost entirely, and for some years afterward concentrated their efforts on the production of early vegetables.

"After a while I secured a two-acre plot for myself," said Mr. Roy Ellis, "and went seriously into the flower business. I put up a couple of very small greenhouses and was quite successful. I specialized in carnations and ferns, and developed a fine trade in these."

Goes Into Vegetable Growing

The success of the venture ini flowers demonstrated to the young gardener the greater money possibilities of the early vegetable trade. Mr. Ellis went extensively into this brach of the work, gradually omitting the floriculture, till no flowers were raised at all. Starting with the growing of cucumbers, he soon introduced tomatoes, and the increase of his output of these two vegetables was phenomenal. Additions to the original houses brought his greenhouse area up to almost three acres, and the owner conceived the scheme of ultilising the houses entirely, absolutely neglecting field culture. "Since that notion struck me, I have stuck to the plan," he said. "I have done no outside growing, winter or summer, for for a number of years. I have only five acres of land."

Asked why he has gone into indoor-growing entirely, Mr. Ellis said: "I went into the work in response to the great and growing demand for early vegetables, a demnd to which no one seemed inclined to cater. There was awaiting the grower a great market; all that was lacking was the man with the stuff. So in I went. Everything didn't work like a charm, either, not by any means. For the first three years after going into the work on my own account I made nothing. The trouble was that I started absolutely without experience and with very little capital. The market was calling for early stuff; I didn't have it, nor the money to go ahead and grow it. You can see for yourself that it was rather a risky venture. Now I am successful, I like intensive work. It is interesting and clean, and you see results for your labor. This requires more skill and attention than outdoor gardening and much more capital and outlay are involved. Naturally the rate of profit must be high in order to compensate for these things. I would advise anyone who contemplates taking up the work to have sufficient capital and some experience."

WOMEN ARE PROVING THE EQUALS OF MEN

Prof. Earl Barnes Gives a Reason For Falling off in Marriages

"The man with no social hunger is dead," said Prof Earl Barnes, Toronto, speaking on the subject of "Family Life as a Career." The home is the centre of organized activity. Society will go backward or forward according to the number of good homes in its midst. The home has not made the progress it should because it has not given woman her proper place. The ancients believed that women were part devil, and the monks took vows to avoid even gazing on a woman. In later times women have come out of their seclusion, and the old superstitions have been cast away. The reason so any young women do not marry is that women are proving themselves equal to earning a good living, and hesitate to enter into a life less varied in its interests. Another reason is the difference between the men she meets in her social life and those in her business life. She becomes dissatisfied with the man "back home." Men, on the other hand, are demanding that the woman they marry shall be of the same race, creed, social position, etc., and it is difficult to fill his requirements. A marriage for political reasons, or for any other secular reason, is a failure, and the family life proves it.

Magistrate on Diet

On the question of diet there is a tendency to go astray by neglecting the simple and more wholesome dishes, said Mr. D. Lleufer Thomas (stipendiary of Pontypridd), in a speech at Ferndale Secondary School. Children should have plenty of green vegetables, a wholesome parsnip, and that great delicacy, a boiled onion. (Laughter). Then, again, there was no greater delicacy than a herring, if a child could be persuaded to eat it.

DIDN'T KNOW DOCTOR

Mr. Jack Grant, editor and proprietor of The Gravenhurst Banner, has this recent reminiscence of Doctor Beattie Nesbitt: It was the day of the bank crash report in the papers, said Mr. Grant. The doctor and myself were on a train bound for Toronto. The doctor had been up at his island home and was returning to the city. Two young fellows were sitting opposite to us in the smoker. One of these was reading a Toronto paper which in big headline on the front page told of the bank's failure, and incidentally blazoned out that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt was first president of the defunct institution. "Did you ever see a blank thing that Nesbitt went in for that it didn't go to pieces," said one of the innocent young man to his friend. There was a laugh, followed the remark, as if it was the doctor's laugh, then he pinched me and the incident closed.

Honeyed Words.

"How are you getting along at home? The last time I called your wife was giving you the dickens."

"Quite true. I had been a bad boy. But she relaxed. Last night she came very near calling me honey."

"You don't mean it! How was that?"

"She called me old beeswax."

No Hurry.

"Of course, Tommy," said the Sunday school teacher, "you'd like to be an angel, wouldn't you?"

"Well—er—yes'm," replied Tommy, "but I'd like to wait till I can be a full grown angel with gray whiskers."

Didn't Agree With Him.

"You should never take anything that doesn't agree with you," the physician told him.

"If I'd always followed that rule, Maria," he remarked to his wife, "where would you be?"—London Express.

BEETHOVEN'S MOONLIGHT SONATA

The story runs that Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata"—always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works—was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a moment the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the tricksy elf-like second part, and the glory of the close.—Christian Science Monitor.

New Modes Accentuate Lines of Natural Figure

By MADGE MARVEL

MANY changes will doubtless mark the spring tailor-made. The models which are shown for the southern resorts may invariably be taken as straws indicative of the suits which will be seen on the streets here when the southland colonie has moved north.

The first thing one notices about these newest suits is the short-waisted front effect, or perhaps it is more expressive to call it the high-waist effect. At any rate, the result is the same and seeks not only to follow the lines of the natural figure, but to accentuate them. Then coats are much shorter. Also they are much fuller. Many of them slope from mere boleros in front to short and full ruffle like postilions at the back.

The Eton will be with us again. In fact, it is already being worn. I saw a charming development of this ever-welcome style worn by a tall blonde girl lunching in the Plaza. It was the coat of a suit of dull bronze green chiffon velvet. In front the little coat hung quite loose to the waist line, but in the back it became two ripply postilions, one reaching just below the waist and the other a little longer. The front of the coat was crossed just at the bust and held in place by a button and loop of twisted taffeta. There was the same twisted silk trimming used across the backs where the first postilion became evident. The skirt was composed of three deep flounces, each one curving upward in front and gaining in fulness toward the back. The deep girdle was of the taffeta.

It will surely be a season of many ruffles and flounces. And there will be a decided increase of fulness about the hips. So far there does not seem to be any increase of width at the foot of the skirts, but it may be that the pleated skirts, which are being introduced in Paris and meeting with success, will add a little to the present width without appearing to do so. There is a general feeling that the pleated skirt will take. The pleats are either narrow and flat stitched to bands which preserve the straight and slim outline, or they are fine in the familiar accordion style. But even so they are not allowed to fly free and full.

The craze for taffeta is already here, as I told you it would be weeks ago. It will be the silk of the season. Charmeuse seems of lesser importance, but a well known maker of fashions tells me taffeta will not displace the lovely soft satiny fabric with discerning dressers. Some of the new taffeta frocks show the deep pointed godets in the tunic, which give the fulness and a quaint effect which taffeta seems to exact.

Moire has not lost favor. There is a good deal of it shown in the silk poplins which develop into delightful semi-tailored suits.

For the practical one-piece gown, which so many of us have to include as the standby of our wardrobe, there are the most delightful serges in attractive colorings and of a hitherto unknown suppleness.

Plaids and plain materials are to be so generally used in combination in these gowns there seems to be a plaid accompanying each shade of the plain serge. There is a wide range of shades in what is best described as a color between putty and mustard. It has the softness of mode and the liveliness of yellow with a hint of green. The plaid is small and has usually a thread of the dull, clear blue which accords with the plain color. The plaid is used for trimmings in various ways, one being side hip portions of it which narrow toward the knee, while the main portion of the skirt in modified pegtop style is of the plain goods.

Or in a suit which I noticed in this combination, the straight peasant-like coat and the skirt was of the plain serge and below the coat was a pleating of the plaid, while plaid was also used for the sleeves. In the dressier suits of poplin or taffeta the seven-eighths sleeve with width at the lower edge is liked. It is usually set into the wide armseye which has been used this past season.

A Place for Everything

By Tom Jackson

THERE is a place for ev'rything, a right and proper spot. The place to eat limburger cheese is in an open lot. The proper place to have a boil is on some other guy, and, if you've ever had a boil you know the reason why. When ma-in-law comes to your home a month or so to stay, you feel the proper place for her is—well—we shall not say. And married men, who from the lodge at early morning glide, can find a safer place to rest than by their wifey's side. The coal bin, or the parlor floor, or on the hallway tile, if they seek quiet, is the place—least for a little while.

To cut a lemon or extract the juice from it by hand should not be done when one stands near a little German band—it breaketh up the trombo man, likewise the piccolo, and causes them to use strange words because they cannot blow. So if you have a lemon, of a German band beware—it knocks out "Tannerhauser" with a splutter and a swear.

The proper place to kiss a maid—we know of what we speak—is on her lips, but if you can't, take second best, her cheek. The proper place to court a maid is in a parlor dark, for the "movie" man may get you if you make love in the park. The proper place to graft a smoke is when an old friend dear says, when he meets you on the street, "Come on we'll go in here."

Three Minute Journeys

San Marino—the Skyscraper Republic

By Jonathan MacFarland

I NEVER go into one of the tall office buildings but I think of the republic of San Marino. The similarity is remarkable in more ways than one. The capital of the republic, for instance, which bears the same name, is situated on a rock that rises like the prow of an ancient galleon up to a sharp precipice as high as the Woolworth building. There are no elevators, though, and to reach the town you must go around to the back entrance, so to speak.

San Marino is in Italy, just a few hours east of the city of Florence, but it is wholly independent. It has been under the protection of Italy since 1862, but as far as its laws and their enforcement are concerned it has nothing to do with the kingdom which surrounds it on all sides. It even has its own coinage, but unlike Italy, and, in fact, most other countries, it has no public debt.

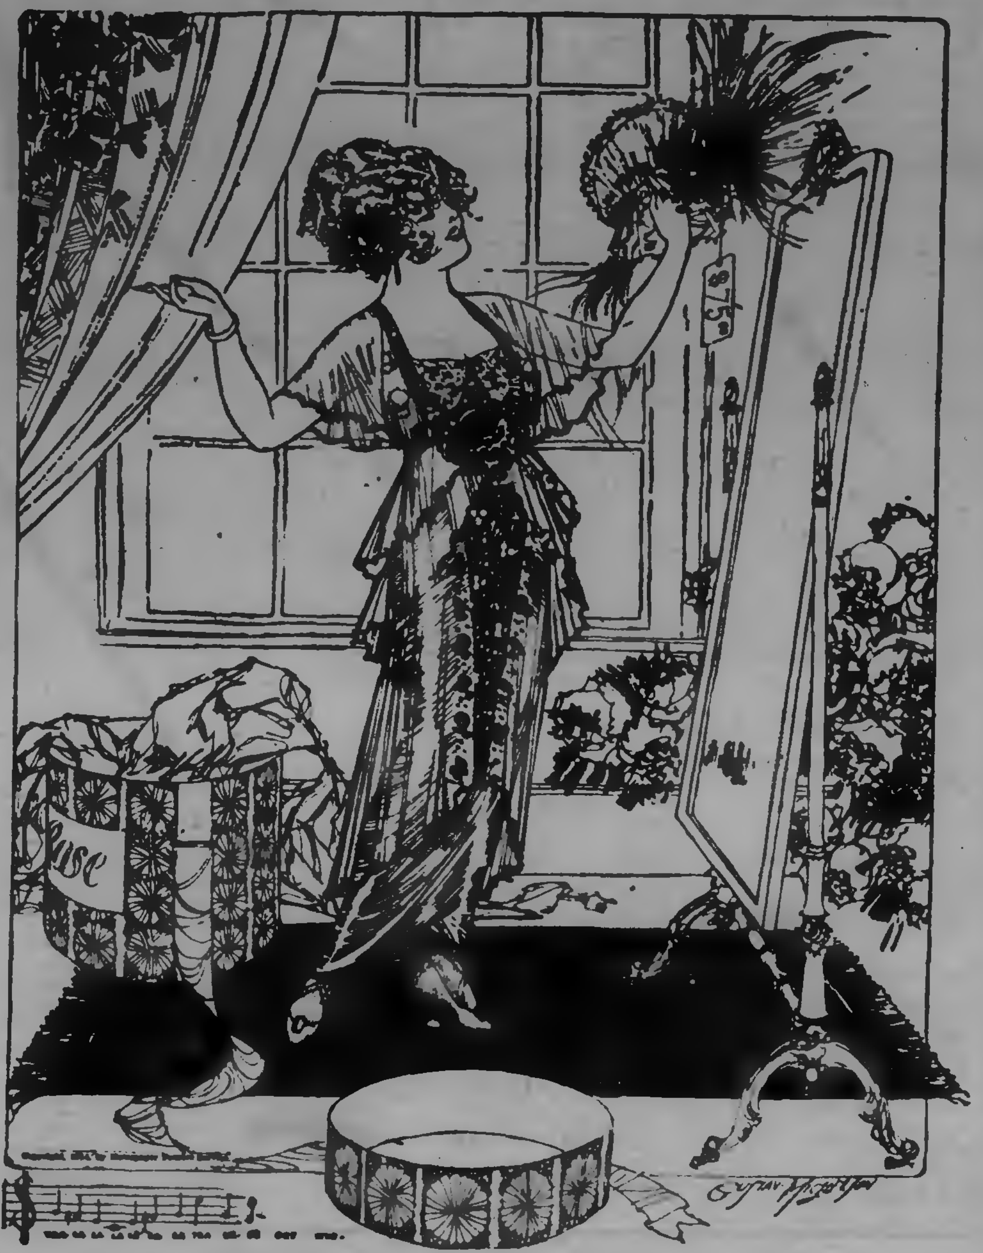
As far as area goes, it has the distinction of being the smallest republic in the world. Beside its 38 square miles, the 175 square miles of Andorra, its nearest competitor for diminutive size, seem like a large tract of land. Take the smallest state in the Union, Rhode Island; why, its land area alone is 28 times as great as that of San Marino. And I know of an office building in New York—a skyscraper, if you please—that has a daily population of 10,000 people, which is within 2000 of that of this tiny republic.

I found life picturesque in San Marino. The people were much as they are all over Italy—charming in their gayety and their quaint apparel. The medieval buildings—the prison, the palace, the military quarters—all speak of a day that is past, but somehow or other I felt that I was living in yesterday. In San Marino the middle ages seem very close at hand.

Throughout their strenuous years the republic had its share of turmoil which even its strategic position could not avert. And among other things that are interesting in connection with its history it had the distinction of providing Napoleon, the conqueror, an opportunity of being magnanimous. Everything had fallen before him until San Marino was the only remaining independent state in Italy, and the people were without hope. But they put their best foot forward, interviewed the general, and succeeded in convincing him that he neither needed nor wanted San Marino.

So there it is today, intact and independent, and some day when the tourist business warrants it they are going to install express elevators to the top

THE SPRING SONG :: By Michelson



SUNG a little early, perhaps, so far as the calendar is concerned, but NOT before the proper occasion, be assured of that. For the proper occasion is the special and particular harbinger of Spring—that HAT.

The thermometer is fickle. The birds are conservatively wary about expressing confidence that there IS going to be a spring. But the HAT floats in proudly, arrogantly, with a regal assurance of welcome for its prophecy.

Ah! that is a welcome! Happy the man who should be looked upon with the glowing adoration that is bestowed on this intricate wonder, this supreme triumph of art! Indeed, no ordinary man could safely be entrusted with such a look. It would spoil him.

Sweet the song that hails the spring—hat. Magical the art that can work so delicious a miracle. Lucky the girl who can find the question of being happy so conclusively answered.

Peter's Adventures In Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

What Is Husband's Day?

XXXIV.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

"MARY," I began, somewhat doubtful of my ground, "I don't think I'm going to church this morning."

"Why?" asked Mary idly.

"Well," I suggested, "there are lots of little things to do about the house, and, really, Sunday is about the only time I have—"

"What about Saturday afternoons?" inquired Mary ominously.

"That," I reminded mildly, "is my golf time, and as long as the weather is good I'd rather not miss it. Besides, I need the exercise."

"I need exercise, too," said Mary, "but I don't get it."

Deadly conversation packed with bromides, wasn't it? But that is exactly the point at which Mary and I have arrived. There must be a definite pattern for certain marriage conversations, for they seem to recur persistently in the life of every married man. I can sometimes predict two laps ahead just what Mary is going to say.

I wish some one would tell me why women feel called upon to object to the mildest forms of male diversion. My Saturday afternoon of golf has spurred Mary to the most eloquent and unreasonable heights of objection. She invites endless and ingenious tasks for me that must be done somehow Saturday afternoon; she makes uninteresting engagements in which I must perforce accompany her or suffer the ordeal of tears; she slanders my golf clubs and loses them, frowns resentfully at any column of golf news, and never loses an opportunity to rebuke me plaintively for leaving her alone Saturday afternoon in the golf season.

"I do believe," she frequently accuses, "that you care more for those horrid old golf clubs than you do for me."

Which I usually refrain from answering, having heard it applied to nearly everything I like. When a mild dispute bids fair to end in pointless amicability, Mary invariably drags forth this especial plaint from the conversational grab-bag and I surrender.

This Sunday, for some reason, Mary did not object to my staying home from church. She went cheerfully upstairs to dress and came down presently looking sweet and lovely, as she always does. I marvel at the facial control some women have. I have seen Mary, flushed and indignant, turn at the entrance of another woman and fairly radiate a sweet optimism and content.

I was soon to learn why Mary had no objection to my remaining home from church.

"Peter," she said sweetly, "since you are going to be home all morning and it really wouldn't be so very much trouble for you, won't you please put the things on the dinner table, and maybe do whatever there is to do? I do hate to come home from church all tired out and have to get into a kitchen apron."

Mary, I notice, is always tired when she's coming home from church. Her card club, however, doesn't tire her.

That was the beginning. Now I stay home from church every Sunday and get the Sunday dinner.

I was thinking some of this when Jack Henderson hailed me one morning on the way to the office.

"Hello, Peter," he said, halting his car, "get in and I'll take you into town."

I did so, and he made room for me with a cordial grin.

"Had to laugh at Mary yesterday morning," he began pleasantly. "I offered to bring her home from church, and what do you suppose she said?"

I didn't know, but I suspected from the twinkle in Jack's eye that the joke was on me.

"She said: 'Thank you, Jack, but I'd rather walk. It takes more time.'"

"What did she mean by that?" I ventured cautiously.

"Well," said Jack, "she did say that if she got home early she had to get dinner, but if she was a little late you had it ready for her. And Sunday she insists is her day because she works hard all week!"

Sunday is Mary's day. When is mine?

As They Are Not.

"A man never sees things as they are until he is past middle age," said the philosopher.

"Perhaps," said the experimentalist, "but a young man often sees things where they are not."

Cause of Forgetfulness.

"She says she is always happy when she sings."

"It also makes the hearers forget their other troubles."

Could Not Get Over It.

John Doe—Does Gobang always stick to the truth?

Richard Roe—Well, sometimes he sticks at it.

Evidence of His Occupation.

"I wonder who that new boarder is?" inquired the parlor front.

"Guess he is an editor," said the third floor rear. "I heard him refer to the condensed milk as 'blue-penciled lacteal fluid' this morning."

More Similarity.

She—Why does a college graduate call his diploma a sheepskin?

He—Because it is made from the hide of a sheep.

She—It would be more appropriate to make it of a calf skin.

Where It Belongs.

"What became of your scheme to make a fortune by building underground railways?"

"Oh, it is buried."

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Your Capacity for Work Shows in Your Handshake

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.

DR. HIRSHBERG

YOU are a housewife! Or perchance you are a merchant or a forelady? You must choose a good servant. Your workers must be efficient.

Better, perhaps, you are one of those happy individuals who wish to examine into their own shortcomings. You know that, although the Creator made you perfect, the accidents of life and inheritance have taken much away from this immutability.

Providence has left it in your human power to persevere to a better physical state. Your own felicity and efficiency is consigned to your own choosing and determination. Yet you are wofully wanting in criteria, measures and standards by which to uncover your own shortcomings.

Much more simple, you think, do the deficiencies of your helpers, your employes or your assistants come into the mercurial light.

Actually, when a woman becomes wise enough or a man punished enough to search for his own defects, physical, economic, soulful and mental, it is discovered that you were accidentally living upon the fossilized principle that

> "When better cherries are not to be had,
> We needs must take the seeming best of bad."

Nothing Taken for Granted.

But this is not so. Experimental psychology, the new rigid science of mathematics applied to human and animal activities, takes nothing for granted, considers no living condition final and despises mere inside thoughts which lack outside manifestations open to every next thousand healthful persons, be these who they may.

Hereafter merchants, factory foremen, buyers, housekeepers and "bosses" generally, who must pick their human aids, must cease confounding their own selections by instinct, intuition and the other guesswork fol-de-rol so common.

Always shake hands with an applicant for work. The grip, the texture, the shape and look of the fingers, as well as the hands and the quality of the nails, all point to the presence or absence of skill. A firm, unconscious handshake with a sound grip which lingers neither too long nor drops the other hand too quickly is a sign of health, vigor and sincerity.

A flabby shake spells hypocrisy, dishonesty and indifference. It is almost certain proof of inattentiveness and unreliability. Pale finger nails with little nicks and tears of the badly trimmed nail, as well as the presence of hangnails, means nervousness, poor health, slovenliness and the thralldom of bad habits. Any one who bites his nails is one easily muzzled into routine. Wise employers are cautious about hiring nail-biters, as they are apt to get into a hopeless rut.

Skilful Questions Enlighten.

Long, overly-polished, manicured nails usually accompany an extravagant, lazy, over-indulged disposition, while short, clean and smooth nails, which show no evidence of the manicure's work, mean soundness of body and mind and a high degree of intelligence.

Texture and quality of the flesh of the hands and face also shed side lights upon an individual's qualifications for duty. A furrowed brow with sunken flesh around the sockets of the eyes, hollow cheek bones and a flabby skin mean narrowness, bitterness and lack of power to put the full measure of work in an appointed task. If the skin is fine and filmy and of a smooth spun type, pale and inclined to be dark, this individual is too dreamy and too esthetic to keep his mind on his task.

Flesh that is taut and smooth, without the earmarks of coddling or the sallowness and pallor of ill-health, is usually a sign of endurance. Reddish cheeks and dancing eyes make a man particularly desirable, if strangers must be met for the first time.

There is a long list of questions designed to bring to light facts which the usual inspection fails to reveal. Through skilfully arranged questions many who pretend to frankness and modesty in answers that state that they lack certain accomplishments which they really have are easily discovered. The best endowed workers answer all questions without modesty, without boastfulness, precisely according to the truth.

Five grains of resorcin in an ounce of equal parts of alcohol, glycerine and carnation, or other scented water, is a good anti-oil lotion. Stop shampooing your hair and merely wash it twice a month with an alcohol-transparent soap.

MRS. S. O.—How can hollows in the neck be filled out? Is cocoa butter helpful? What will color my cheeks naturally? How can I gain weight?

1—Drink cocoanut oil, eat butter and margarine, meat fats, goose oils and all fatty things. Massage the hollow spaces every four hours for five minutes with goose grease.

2—Cocoa butter is only an expensive fad.

3—Rosy cheeks result from plenty of fresh air at night while you sleep under plenty of covers. Sunlight, a brisk two hours' outdoors daily exposure to dry air and plenty of meats, gravies and good victuals. Massage your cheeks every two hours for one or two minutes.

4—You will gain flesh by sleeping for nine or 10 hours after midnight, eating oils, fats, sugars, rich meats, spices, sauces, pastries, starches, fruits and drinking lots of cream and the yolks of a dozen eggs daily.

Spend all the money you used to spend on medicines on eggs, creams, big steaks and good oils. Eat your suppers late and another meal at midnight.

Daddy's Good Night Story

By [illegible]

"WHAT are you waiting for?" asked Mrs. Raccoon of Mrs. Squirrel, one afternoon when she was getting ready for her afternoon tea.

"Mrs. Rabbit hasn't come yet," said Mrs. Squirrel. "All the children are up stairs. I invited Jack Rabbit and Billy Bunny to keep my little ones company. They are up stairs telling stories now. I do wish my good husband could tell stories like Brer Rabbit."

"My husband is very good at keeping our children quiet," said Mrs. Raccoon.

"I wonder why these children are so still?" asked Mrs. Squirrel.

The reason the children were so quiet was they heard what Mrs. Raccoon said and they were quietly putting on their things. They hopped down the back stairs and were soon knocking on Mister Raccoon's door. "Come in!" shouted a voice within.

Mister Raccoon was seated before the fire smoking a pipe.

"My goodness!" he exclaimed, as he bounded from the chair and took all the children in his arms.

"Tell us a story! Tell us a story!" they all shouted at once.

Reggie Raccoon climbed down from the window sill and said to his father: "Tell us about Mrs. Grizzly Bear."

Mister Raccoon put the children on sofa pillows by the window and began.

"Mrs. Grizzly Bear lived near the north pole, about two miles from the end of the world. She always gave her children a cake of ice with hot reindeer milk on it for breakfast and for dinner they had a hunk of ginger bread with frosting on top.

"The children ate the frosting off first, because it made them warmer than the ginger bread.

"At night Mrs. Grizzly Bear gave her children a snow ball each with star dust sprinkled over it for sugar. After supper she put them all to bed in a blanket of snow, their dear little heads on cakes of ice and—what's the matter, children?"

One by one the children had crept over by the fire and were warming themselves.

"That story almost froze me," said Sammy Squirrel, with a shiver.

"Didn't you like it?" asked Mister Raccoon.

"Yes," said Sammy Squirrel. "But next time put in something hot once in a while."

At this they all laughed.

Jenny Lind as a Child.

Jenny Lind as a child of three years was the lark of her parents' house. As a girl of nine she attracted the attention of all lovers of music and entered the Stockholm conservatory as a pupil. Her continuous studies at so tender an age caused the sudden loss of her voice, and for four full years she pursued her theoretical and technical studies, when suddenly the full sweet sounds came back, to the delight, as every one knows, of thousands for many years.

The Parsonage Door Bell

The Parsonage Door Bell— [illegible]

Text: "Suffer me, that I may boast myself a little."—2nd Corinthians 11:16.

* * *

Permit me to boast a little. I want to advertise my wares and not mine only: I speak for my profession. I want to talk to you about people who ring parsonage door bells, or as it oftener happens in this parish, knock at the preacher's office door. Yet I do not want you to regard my words as egotistical. If Eva Booth or Bramwell Booth, or Jane Addams came to Massey Hall and told of their achievements, their callers, their slumming, you would think it glorious, and you would wonder why the average church did not do this work. Yet all the time the preachers of this and every other city have experiences, just as thrilling, about which nothing reaches the public.

The object of this sermon is not to get you to think mine an extraordinary work, but to enlist your active sympathy with the office and struggles of the parish minister, who, too often, is supposed to be a rather idle and somewhat superfluous mortal.

1.—The New Arrival

I can tell him by his clothes. He is fresh from the old land. His suit was made in England, Scotland or Ireland. It is of old country cut, trousers pretty tight and turned up; vest cut high and rounded at the collar. The most eloquent sign I ever saw in a tailor's window read: "Old country clothes altered to Canadian styles." But I am honored to receive the new arrival's first call. He will be worth something to Bond Street Church. Even if he is not, there is a chance to make a life-long friend. The preacher can tell him about the runways for positions and give him some general good advice. I honor him for what he will be to-morrow. He will soon have a lot paid for and a shack built and by and by he will have the mortgage paid off. Do not curl your lip at him. When I joined the Methodist church up in good old Berlin a half dozen other youths of my age, a half-grown girl, two young factory women and three married couples comprised the class of new members. As I was leaving the church that morning I heard a good old class leader remark to a well dressed lady: "Wasn't that a fine class our pastor received this morning?" The reply was: "Yes, it was all right, but the trouble is that we haven't received one good family into our church this year." Recalling the individuals received that morning after the lapse of twenty-five years, I remark that one is an honored missionary leader in Western China, another a member of the legislature of Saskatchewan; the half-grown girl has become a devoted nurse. One of the young married men is a magistrate in a Western city. The church has held them all. It may be that if the old lady is still alive she would today covet the acquaintance of those same people as of tolerably good families.

From the immigration quarantine pen to a new-world aristocracy is a distance so short that it can be traversed between the sunrise and sunset of one generation. In twenty years from now the children of this young fellow who has just gone out of my office will be sitting in their pew while some old-country garbed youth is being received and esteeming him lightly because "he looks like an immigrant."

2.—The Enthusiastic Man

He is a big tall fellow. I forget just what he called for. Maybe to borrow a book or to tell me an incident or to bring me a magazine or to present me with some toothsome morsel of food. He dashes in, stops a minute and out he goes. But he leaves a blaze of enthusiasm behind him. I work better after he is gone. He is a talkative man and for once I do most of the listening. I do not like the silent man, the sphinx, the fellow who looks cunning and wants me to do all the talking. I know it was said of Von Moltke that he could hold his tongue in seven different languages, but I would rather have a man talk in one. Some men thrill you. You are not homesick or despondent when they are around. An old veteran of Napoleon's, a sergeant of the guard to whom Napoleon was everything, said to a newly-enlisted man, "the Emperor has come, the Emperor is here!" "How do you know?" asked the new recruit. "I have just been down to the general's quarters and I have seen nothing of him." And the sergeant said, "Don't you see that all the world is up and stirring? You don't yet understand, but he is here. I feel it in the soles of my feet [illegible] he is absent every thing [illegible] look at those expressions [illegible] along the road. Everything is moving; I feel it to the tips of my fingers that the Emperor has arrived." Young man link up with the enthusiast and imbibe a little of his enthusiasm.

3.—The Uncomfortable Caller

Not that he is uncomfortable but he makes the preacher feel so. He may be a designing man. He expects to get somewhat from you. If last Sunday I happened to use as an illustraton my old-fashioned die-to-win life insurance policy, he will be sure to call on Monday to say: "I heard you say yesterday that you have an ordinary life policy. Why not get rid of it and take out one of my company's twenty-payment policies?" Well, you ask, hasn't he a right to do that. Yes, but I had just as soon not have him take such advantage of my Sunday illustration. Hasn't the book agent a right to come to the parson to sell his book? Yes, but not to get a testimonial for a Bible dictionary and then enquire for a list of the preacher's thousand members so that he may sell them all a book on the parson's recommendation. A young lawyer came to get a letter of introduction to a wealthy young widow—not for matrimonial purposes, but to get her to hire him as her lawyer in a big damage suit. His request was not honored.

Akin to the designing man is the time waster, the idler who wants to consume your time as well as his own. He may come in with a lighted cigar. Or it may be dying, and of all dying things the dying cigar makes the most vigorous protest. "Excuse me, sir; let me show you where to put that cigar, on the ledge outside. There, it will be right there when you have finished your call." The time waster takes off his overcoat, throws it over a chair, announces that as his train does not leave town till five o'clock he has an hour and a half to spend with the preacher. Or he announces that he is not working today and I feel like answering, "But I am."

Twin brother to the idler is the belated caller. He said he would be here at eleven sharp. Therefore at 10.50 it is hardly worth while to begin a new task. But the belated man does not arrive till 11.45. If it is to a committee meeting he comes late, the time of five or six other people is wasted, but he does not care. Young man, take the advice of an old railroad conductor who said: "Semaphores are raised against him who is late; switches are turned for the man on time."

4.—The Advice-seeking Caller

The preachers of Toronto save many a lawyer's time. The preacher gives free advice. He runs a law office without being an Osgoode Hall graduate. If two of you have aught against each other come to the preacher's study. Do not waste legal fees and court fees. Your pastor will referee your case. Two or three members of your official board can act as a jury and I will warrant you will get as much justice as you would at Osgoode Hall, in one-hundredth part of the time and without cost. All this is conditional upon both of you having just a grain of that Christ spirit which a church member ought to have.

5.—"Down-and-out" Man

Sometimes he is not deserving and sometimes he is most deserving and the preacher's most vexatious problem is how to turn away the professional beggar without once refusing aid to a man who is entitled to it. He must have a sieve of experience in order to separate the chaff from the wheat. One Thanksgiving morning I spoke to the seven hundred inmates of a County Penitentiary. At the conclusion of the service I was moved to say: "Boys, I am sorry for you, come and see me when you get out if you need a friend." The prison worker said, "O, Mr. Stauffer, you have made an awful mistake. You will have callers for the next year." At ten o'clock next day the first convict called to hold me to my word. During the next sixty days I often felt like taking a midwinter vacation. It took me all my time to weed out the bad cases from the good. But I felt adequately rewarded two years later when one morning there was shoved through the letter-slot of my door an unstamped letter enclosing two crisp twenty-dollar bills with a note saying "I followed your advice when I left the penitentiary and I have made good. Please hand one of these bills to your church and send the other to Moody's church, Chicago, where I once received much good. I haven't time to stop and visit for I am on my way down to Pennsylvania where I am to build a bridge."

Many a down-and-out man there is who never saw a penitentiary. The awful pinch of poverty is felt this winter for the first time by many a man who heretofore has been sufficient unto himself and who just needs a little help to "make the grade." That is what you and I are here for—to help him, and to open our ears to listen to the story of the thread-bare man.

6.—The Sympathy Seeker

Some people come who just yearn for sympathy. Let me tell you an incident. God help me to phrase it so as not to give offence. And yet may I parenthetically say regarding bluntness in the pulpit, that many folks listen to the suggestive and the vulgar at the theatre who ob[illegible] strenuo[illegible] a little [illegible] whi[illegible]

[illegible] with quivering [illegible] "Pennsylvania Dutch," she said, [illegible] and one must go somewhere for comfort" and she broke down [illegible]. Between her sobs she told her sad story. The Salvation Army women God bless them, took her in and kept her until her baby was old enough to be [illegible] young mother's [illegible] the Army [illegible] place at service [illegible] the baby's face [illegible] broke [illegible] kind [illegible] eczema, [illegible] had [illegible] that she [illegible]. She had [illegible], but none [illegible] her with [illegible] a handicap. She refused my [illegible] money, it was not that which [illegible]. I sent her to the Hospital for Sick Children and when she came back a few days afterwards the babe's face had entirely cleared. He was a little prince, as beautiful as picture. I took the next train for the town in which the delinquent young man had been living. I found his mother and she was not disposed to give me her son's new address. She remarked that she did not know what I could do about it since the young woman was of age. I answered that it wasn't a question of what I was able to do about it but what she would help her son to do about it, and that I was quite sure that if she shielded the young man her own old age would be full of appropriate remorse. She finally gave me the Alberta village in which he was employed and she promised also to supplement my letter with one of her own. I got no response to my registered letter to the young man. I sent another and another with the same fruitless result. The winter passed; the young woman meanwhile working by the day, putting her child in the care of a bereaved mother who took care of the babe during the day. But one morning in early spring I received a letter from the unmarried father saying that he and the young woman wanted to get married the next Wednesday morning in my study and would I be on hand to perform the ceremony. It may be inferred that I lost no time in accepting that wedding, and at the time appointed a prettily dressed, glad-hearted though timid-looking woman stood beside a sturdy young fellow of not altogether forbidding appearance. I had just pronounced the words that made them husband and wife before the law, when the [illegible] given the young mother [illegible] during the winter and [illegible] she gave [illegible] to the mother in silence. "Ah, isn't he a picture," I exclaimed; "he is Bonny Prince Charlie sure enough." Suddenly the older woman plunged her face into her hands with a groan, and rushed out of the room. When she had recovered herself, she said, "I had been wicked enough to pray that Mr. Stauffer would fail to find this man, so I could keep the baby in the place of the child I lost." Pardon me for saying that I never felt prouder of a good piece of work than when I saw that couple walk together from the church.

And this is the boast of the Christian preacher: "The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned that I should know how to speak a word in season to him who is weary."

Layman, listen. When you are in your less optimistic moments, when you wonder whether your preacher's two sermons a week are worth what you are paying him, remember that those two sermons represent only a little part of the man's work.

ESKIMO FAMILY LIFE.

A Glimpse of the Home When White Guests Are Present.

The usual sights on entering an Eskimo habitation are. On the way opposite you a steamer like berth covered with skins—the sleeping quarters of the family; underneath, or in front, sit one or two women, busily sewing; to the right, a man making hunting gear. Never will you find an Eskimo family idle. All occupants are naked to the waist, sometimes only covered with a loin cloth. Along the wall on either side burn several lamps. These lamps are shallow soapstone basins filled with the oil of the seal, whale or walrus; along the edge is placed a little ridge of moss which answers the purpose of the wick in our lamps. The lamps do not smoke, and, besides illuminating, throw a great heat. Above the flame hangs a piece of blubber, to replenish the oil, also a teakettle.

You are cordially invited to take off your things and stay awhile. This means disrobing to the same extent, for the air is foul and the temperature that of a Turkish bath. If you come during meal time, which is at any hour of the day, you are cordially invited to partake; you decline and no offense is given. If the meal consists of frozen fish, blubber or something they know the white man abhors, some joker will especially entreat you to join his dish and then there is a great laugh all around. The Eskimo loves to laugh, play practical jokes on his friends, respond in witticism, and is of a happy, childlike disposition. Treachery, stealing and lying are practically unknown among them, the two latter only since some of them have imitated the white man. I am not including the Siberian, Greenland or Labrador Eskimo.—Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt in Pacific Monthly.

THE MASTER SUN.

Sirius, the Dog Star, May Be the Center of Attraction.

Astronomers once believed that the entire starry universe revolved around a center of attraction and the star named Alcyone, in the group of the Pleiades, was selected by Maedler as marking that great center.

It has long been known, however that Maedler's conclusion, which was based on the apparent motions of the stars, was incorrect, and if any universal center exists it has not yet been discovered. In fact, many of the stars seem to be moving in straight lines some in one direction and some in another, and among these is our own sun. But it is possible that further observations will show that all the stars are really moving in curved lines.

In the meantime it has been found that there are certain groups or sets of stars which appear to travel together. To what set, if any, the sun belongs we do not yet know, but Delauney has presented reasons for thinking that those stars whose distances have been measured (that is to say, those which are nearest to us) group themselves around Sirius, the dog star, in a manner similar to that in which the inner planets are grouped around the sun.

If this be correct Sirius may possibly be the master sun of which our orb of day is a distant satellite.—Harper's Weekly.

There are as many stories of I. D. B.—i. e., illicit diamond buying—in South Africa as there were of smuggling in England a century ago. Louis Cohen tells of some of the dodges in his "Reminiscences" of Kimberley's early days. "Dogs were enlisted in the traffic and used as carriers. Often the poor animals were first kept without food until they were on the verge of starvation and then given lumps of meat containing diamonds, which they bolted. Safely arrived at Christiania, across the Vaal river, the faithful dumb friends of man were immediately rewarded for their services by having their stomachs ripped up and the imbedded baubles taken out. Horses, too, were utilized, being fed with balls of meat containing diamonds and driven across the river under the very noses of the police. Carrier pigeons were requisitioned to fly through the air with the greatest of ease laden with the brigands' booty. Hollowed heels inclosing diamonds sealed down with wax were also expedients employed with decided and profitable success."

One lady had an ingenious way of getting out of a scrape. She was cooking dinner when a Cape boy knocked at the door and sold a forty carat diamond to her husband. "It was a trap. A detective immediately rushed in to arrest the buyer, searched the house, but no diamond could be found. The good wife had placed it in the stuffing of a goose she was basting."

A ONE-PIECE DRAPED E WRAP

Materials which fall in supple folds are best suited to evening mantles—in fact, the lines of these garments are so studiedly simple this season that the draping qualities and richness of the material "makes" the wrap. Moiréd and embossed velvets are perfectly suited to these garments, and the softer silks are also favored.

The model shown here is fashioned of an embossed velvet in black with cuffs and revers of plain black velvet.

It is a one-piece design and may be copied in size 36 with 2¾ yards of 42 inch mater[illegible] and cuffs of fur would enhance its becomingness. A quaintly draped tunic renders this dancing frock of chiffon and lace "different." The frills of plaited net are youthful and becoming. Figured charmeuse forms the bodice and skirt, and a graceful sash with a tasseled end completes the effect.

This dress may be copied in size 36 with 4⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8073—sizes 32, 36, 40 and 44.
No. 8069—sizes 32 to 44.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

STRAIGHT SIMPLE LINES LEND GRACE TO THIS DINNER GOWN

Now that figured materials are so much favored, for both daytime and evening wear, designers have been evolving methods of employing them to the best advantages. The puffs and panniers are apt to spoil the patterns somewhat, so the preferred models show long, loose arrangements of soft folds about the waist. Number 8215, is a dinner gown of brocaded silk crepe with a transparent bodice of chiffon and figured net.

These crepes are unusually wide and range in price from $1.50 a yard and up. This gown may be copied in size 36 with 3⅝ yards of 42 inch material, with 1⅛ yards of 36-inch material for the guimpe.

Numbers 8196-8117, is another effective example of a transparent bodice and tunic. The three-tiered skirt has contrasting tunics of chiffon and lace over a foundation of charmeuse.

To make this gown in size 36, it requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the bodice (8196 and 2⅝ yards of 54 inch material for the skirt (8117).

Number 8215—sizes 34 to 44.
Number 8196—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 8117—sizes 22 to 34.
Each pattern 15 cents.

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

THAT PLAYED-OUT FEELING WAS QUICKLY REMEDIED AND HEALTH RESTORED

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of sedentary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family [illegible] thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced — eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxatives medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect.

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

An Apology.

In our issue of yesterday morning, a letter appeared over the signature of "Anxious Inquirer," in which Mr. James Edgar was referred to as a writer of a letter which appeared in the Examiner. The Times is advised by Mr. Edgar that he did not, write the letter referred to, and hence our correspondent was totally wrong in referring to him as the author of it. The Times published the letter in good faith and regrets exceedingly being the innocent means of causing Mr. Edgar any concern or displeasure.

"BETWEEN SAVAGE AND TIGER"

First Time Ever Shown in Canada

George Kleine, the premier photo drama impressario of America, has brought out another astounding success from the prolific sources of the Cines Company in Italy, entitled "Between Savage and Tiger." It is a strictly modern story, relating exciting adventures in the jungles of India, abounding in dramatic action and full of so many thrills that the spectators are kept in a feverish state of excitement and interest from beginning to end. In the language of to-day, it has a "terrific punch," and will probably make more money for the management than any of Mr. Kleine's attractions, not excepting the wonderful "The Last Days of Pompeii," or "Anthony and Cleopatra," which have proven box office record breakers. "Between Savage and Tiger" is announced for four days at "The Grand," commencing with matinees at 2.30 and 4 o'clock, next Tuesday, March 3rd. The prices for the engagement will be as always, 10c., any seat, although this is the first time this wonderful photo-drama has been shown at less than 50c. prices.

TELLS WHAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DID FOR HIM.

He's Back at Work Again, After Suffering from the Pains, Nervousness and Depression that Only Kidney Disease Can Bring.

Point Alexander, Ont., Feb. 27. — (Special.)—Mr. D. A. Froncare, a well-known and popular young farmer, living near here, who has been a sufferer from kidney disease for some time past, is back at work again, and he says, without hesitation, that his cure is due to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was always tired and nervous," Mr. Froncare says, in speaking of his illness. "I suffered from backache and neuralgia, and my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. My eyes were puffed and there were dark red circles around them.

"My muscles would cramp. I felt heavy and sleepy afterwards, and I was depressed and low-spirited, while shortness of breath and dizzy spells served to make life yet more miserable for me.

"I was always thirsty; my limbs were heavy: and I had a dragging sensation across the loins.

"My symptoms led me to believe I had kidney disease, and I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have taken eight boxes in all, and I am very grateful for the benefit I have received from them."

If the disease is of the kidneys or from the kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

ALL ELECTIONS ON ONE DAY

London, Feb. 27.—The House of Commons to-day passed by 215 votes against 152, the second reading of a bill providing that all Parliamentary elections be held on the same day. The bill was introduced by Sir Harry Verney, a Liberal member, and the Liberal party argues that it will largely mitigate plural voting, and the disturbance of business by prolonged general elections.

The Unionist party opposed the bill, but as the Government has taken it under its wing it is generally considered probable that it will be pushed through the House.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.
